LLOYD GEORGE SAYS INDIA GOVERNMENT WILL BE SUPPORTED

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Premier Lloyd George delivered a notable speech on the condition of affairs in India late tonight in the House of Commons. He spoke in a debate on an amendment to the address, in reply to the speech from the Throne, moved by Sir William Joynson Hicks, challenging the policy of the Secretary of State.

The Prime Minister's intervention was not merely a defense of his minister, it was an eloquent tribute to the justice and fairness of the Indian Administration introduced by a luminous review of the causes of unrest over the whole of the Far East.

He supported a plea for early peace with Turkey advanced by E. S. Montagu, Secretary of State for India. The question would be taken up again by the Allies, but he warned the House that "nothing can be gained by unjust concessions to fear."

"There is much in the state of India," he said, "that justifies grave concern, but there certainly is no cause for panic. The situation is well within the compass of our strength without adding to our burdens, but there is no doubt it demands examination by the Imperial Parliament as well as by the Imperial Government.

Origin of the Disturbances.

"If attempt is made to find the origin of the disturbances in India to something that occurred two or three years ago Parliament and the public are misled as to the real cause of our difficulties. The disturbances and unrest did not begin only three years ago. I can remember the Government of 1906 when Lord Morley, Secretary of State for India, constantly had to bring the attention of the Cabinet to serious unrest.

"An attempt on the life of the Viceroy was made before the war. There had been several assassinations of high officials or attempted assassinations, many murders and constant riots. Agitators were deported at the instance of Lord Morley. All that occurred before the war. Therefore, it is idle to attribute the unrest in India to something that occurred when the present Secretary of State assumed the reins of office.

"Here you have a population with Eastern ideas and Eastern experience. Modern ideas and Western ideas of liberty and self-government were unknown. They acknowledged great overlords who according to their strength gave them peace, or according to their weakness gave them unrest, disturbance and ruin.

"I have been amazed at the kind of education given to the Indian child. There is no doubt it poisons the Indian mind. We have had a very considerable number of rich Indians sending their children to be educated in English universities. They were saturated with Western ideas, and went back full of them. The great Western ideas of liberty became their ideals. It was bound to create unrest. It was putting new wine into old bottles—the fierce and rather coarser wines of the West into the older bottles of the East, accustomed to mild vintages. They burst. There was leakage. The wine spread and intoxication spread over the East.

Whole of Asia Involved.

"It was not India alone. In the story of India you must not forget the story of Asia—Japan, China and India—the hundreds of millions who have been living in tranquillity and satisfaction, with ideas of autocracy that gave them protection and guardianship and with which they were satisfied. Then comes in the West. It is because the West has got into contact with the East. It was inevitable. There were two elements bound sooner or later to produce some form of explosion. Do not let us overlook these matters.

"What happened in the Russo-Japanese War had an enormous effect on the population of Asia. I do not want to dwell on what it meant to them, but it means something in the feeling they had toward Europe and toward the possibilities of Asia and of Asiatics towards Europe, which had a very disturbing effect from one end to the other.

"What has happened in China? We talk of it as if it were purely India. You had a great foreign dynasty governing hundreds of millions. The strong rule of that dynasty is removed and what happens? Self-government, liberty, Western ideas, republics formed on purely Western models, and the whole country dissolved into warring fragments.

"There was a movement that did not originate with the war. It went far before the agitation in China came from entirely the same source—Chinese students in America by hundreds and Indian students by hundreds and Chinese students here. When we come to apply a remedy let us get the facts and get to the facts.

Drop All Women Officeholders, Demand Vienna's Unemployed

VIENNA, Feb. 14.—The discharge of all women employes in the public services, their places to be taken by jobless married men, was the chief demand expressed at a mass meeting of unemployed here today. Another demand was the abolition of overtime and piecework in all industries.

Some fiery speeches were made, but there was no disorder. In fear of a demonstration, most of the city's shops had put up their shutters, and heavy police patrols were in evidence.

It is estimated that there are in Vienna 30,000 unemployed union workers, an increase of 50 per cent. in two months.

Victorious in Senate on Bills Affecting New York City's Milk Supply.

STRAUS FIGHTS ALONE

He Asserts Measures Prevent Destruction of Tubercular Cows Without Owners' Consent.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—The amazing strength of the farm bloc in the State Senate was revealed today when, on the first open test that has occurred, the representatives of agricultural constituencies banded together were able to muster twenty-one votes. This is only five votes short of a controlling majority.

In the Assembly there has been no line-up so far to afford a test of the farm bloc strength. Such a test is imminent, for the measures over which the fight occurred in the Senate today will go before the Assembly for concurrence within a few days. There is reason to believe that the bloc is proportionately as strong in the lower house.

In the upper house the farm bloc entered today's conflict in solid formation, led by President pro tem. Senator Luke, Senator Knight of Wyoming and Senator Ferris of Essex, the latter being Chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture. The battle was over three bills recommended by a joint legislative committee of which Senator Ferris is the head, and which provide for a reorganization of the Farms and Markets Commission and a recodification of the agricultural law. The bills were advanced to third reading by a vote of 21 to 8, the farm bloc overriding the protests of the Democratic Senators from New York City, on whose behalf Senator Nathan Straus Jr. led the fight.

He protested against the advancement of the principal bill in the series on the ground that it contained a "joker" which would make it impossible for the Commissioner of Agriculture to order the destruction of tubercular cattle except with the owners' consent.

"On page 89," Senator Straus said, reading from the bill, "this measure provides that after a physical examination has been made of a cow and she has been found tubercular, the committee shall not, except in advanced cases, order her destruction and not even then until a tubercular test has been made. Elsewhere the bill provides that a tubercular test can be made only upon request or by consent of the owners, so that if the owner of a tubercular cow should decide that the animal was so valuable that the indemnity paid for slaughtered animals by the State would not pay him and on that ground refuse to have a test made, the Commissioners' hands would be tied."

Senator Straus declared that two-thirds of the dairy products of the State were consumed in New York City and that the people of the city had a right to be heard before the bill was sent on its way toward final passage. The farm bloc leaders, however, would have none of that.

Another provision of the bill, equally detrimental, perhaps, to the public health, was cited by Senator Straus. Under the terms of one clause it is specifically provided that milk from tubercular cows, while condemned as unfit for human food, may be fed to calves and hogs. Senator Straus, who has made a study of the milk problem and been active in the management of the free pasteurization plants established by his father in New York City, declared that this clause would promote the spread of the disease and make the State's avowal that it was out to fight tuberculosis in

IRELAND'S GRAVEST CRISIS IS AT HAND, SAYS BIRKENHEAD

BELFAST DISORDER GROWS

British Troops Enter the City—Collins Moves to Release Kidnapped Men.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Lord Birkenhead, the Lord Chancellor, uttered the grave warning in the House of Lords tonight, with regard to Ireland, that "within the next few weeks we are going through the most grave and critical period probably in living memory."

It was true to say, said Lord Birkenhead, that the Provisional Government received the allegiance of by far the majority of the Irish Republican Army, but there were important areas in which the I. R. A. had not acceded to the cause of the Provisional Government and would not receive or obey instructions of that Government, which at the present moment lacked means of enforcing orders on the recalcitrant minority. It was plain that Collins was apprehensive that an attempt might be made by violence in Ireland to wreck the treaty and to destroy the Provisional Government by seducing the armed forces upon whom, if it came to a trial of strength, they must in the last resort depend.

In the present difficult situation it was Great Britain's duty and the obvious dictate of policy that she should, so far as her honorable obligations in the North permitted, support those men in Ireland who under almost inconceivable difficulties were making a courageous attempt to carry out the treaty to which they had set their hands.

Lord Birkenhead said the Government came to the conclusion that they would not be justified in continuing the evacuation of troops until the time appeared to be ripe. They had also suggested to Sir James Craig and Michael Collins that there should be liaison officers for both sides on the border to keep in constant touch with each other.

He was still not without hope that discussions between Craig and Collins would take place again.

"We should deceive ourselves if we blinded ourselves to the fact," added Lord Birkenhead, "that within the next few weeks we are going through the most grave and critical period probably in living memory. Whether we shall get through them with success or not I don't know, and I make it quite plain that in all that I have said about Ireland since the treaty was signed I have always safeguarded myself against being unduly sanguine. But I am still of the opinion that if all men in the two countries who are of good intention and all men who wish to see the treaty succeed and carried out will co-operate there is still great prospect that we may be so fortunate."

Winston Churchill, replying to Ronald McNeill in the Commons, said the Government had been in constant communication with both Governments in Ireland. The British Government done all in its power to deal with the situation. It had suspended evacuation of troops from Ireland. He had received a telegram from Michael Collins saying he was crossing tonight in order to confer with the Imperial Government.

Collins also telegraphed he was now in a position to say where the kidnapped persons were being kept and would take steps to secure their release as soon as possible.

Mr. McNeill asked if Mr. Churchill had any information with regard to a statement attributed to Collins in which he stated that the British authorities had no knowledge of the reasons for stopping evacuation and insinuated that there was something in the nature of a mutiny among British troops. Churchill said the statement was based on pure misunderstanding, for the order to suspend evacuation came from London on the responsibility of the Government.

In reply to another member, Mr. Churchill said that apart from serious

Stock Fraud Cases Clog the Federal Courts; 480 Now on the Dockets Involve $140,000,000

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Stock fraud cases are clogging the Federal courts to an alarming extent, said Attorney General Daugherty after reading a department report on the situation.

The Federal Government can not act in most cases unless there is evidence that the postal laws are involved, but there are now 480 stock fraud cases before the Federal courts.

"These cases," commented the Attorney General, "run from bucket shops and Florida lands under sea water to elephant catchers. Oil stocks are in the majority, but they are followed closely by mining and land ventures. About 872 persons are under arrest or indictment, charged with violation of postal laws in selling fraudulent stock. They involved alleged frauds totaling $140,-011,231."

Illinois heads the list with forty-three cases alleging frauds of $17,000,000. The Northern District of Texas, with forty-two cases, mostly oil stocks, has $7,000,-000 involved. The Southern District of New York stands third in the list with thirty-eight cases and $15,000,000 of alleged frauds. The largest total of reported frauds is in the Western District of Missouri, where eighteen persons are under arrest or indictment charged with obtaining $31,000,000 by worthless stock sales.

LIFT BAN ON SALOME, MAY SING IT IN 1923

Metropolitan Directors Consider Production, but Not This Year or the Next.

JERITZA WOULD LIKE IT

Says Her Interpretation Would Be Quite Different From Others Seen Here.

The Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company, owners of the Metropolitan Opera House, held a meeting yesterday and came to a decision which will permit the producing company, which leases the house, to revive the opera "Salome," which has been under the ban of the owners fifteen years. It is certain that it will not be produced this season, and it is not considered likely that it will be put on next season. But it is possible that it will be part of the Metropolitan repertoire during the season of 1923-24 and thereafter.

Mme. Marie Jeritza, who will sing the title rôle of the Strauss-Wilde opera if it is produced, said yesterday that she would be glad to give her interpretation of Salome if asked to do so. She said that her conception of the part was not sensuous and was differed from the interpretations that New York had been accustomed to see.

While the singer and other personages of the operatic world were discussing the probable effect of a revival of the dance of the seven veils and the impersonation of John the Baptist on the Metropolitan stage, the proposal was denounced with vigor by moralists and reformers. The Rev. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, said that it would be an indignity and an abomination. Dr. Straton, who previously had directed his attacks against the theatres and movies, turned attention to the opera in consequence of the "Salome" incident. He said that both the operatic and theatrical worlds "needed a thorough housecleaning."

Owners Silent on Opera.

The meeting at which the owners of the Metropolitan decided the "Salome" issue was surrounded by secrecy. No statement was issued as to what had happened. George G. Haven, President of the Metropolitan Opera and Real Estate Company, denied himself to reporters before and after the meeting. Inquiries in other quarters were met with the response that Mr. Haven was the only person authorized to speak for the company.

The NEW YORK TIMES learned from an authoritative source, however, that the meeting was held, that the question of the revival of "Salome" was discussed, and that the outcome was one which left all parties concerned in a harmonious mood. The decision was said to have won the approval of the "conservatives," who held their thumbs down on the opera for fifteen years, and of the "liberals," who believe that Mme. Jeritza's interpretation of the rôle will not only be inoffensive but a great success.

The preparation for such a performance is a work of such magnitude as to preclude any possibility that it might be presented during the remainder of the present season. Giulio Gatti-Casazza, general manager of the producing company, announced yesterday that he would not consent to the inclusion of the opera in the repertoire for next season under any consideration. He is opposed to putting on "Salome" at any time, but other influential members of the producing company favor it. Under the contract between the owning and producing companies the latter cannot be compelled to make any particular production at the request of the owners, although the owners can prohibit any particular opera. Therein lies the significance of the decision of the owners.

Star Still Has Many Roles.

Another factor that makes it unlikely "Salome" will be presented next season is that Mme. Jeritza's repertoire is not nearly exhausted. She will appear next season in rôles that New York has not seen her in this season, and "Salome" probably will be held back until the other rôles in her repertoire have been offered.

A person familiar with the background of operatic affairs said last night that the change of attitude of the owners' group regarding "Salome" was the result of a keen desire on the part of certain members in the group to give Mme. Jeritza an opportunity to show her conception of the rôle to New York. The victory of this faction yesterday was only the first step.

The admirers of Jeritza and "Salome" in the Metropolitan organization will now have to prevail upon Gatti-Casazza to alter his "No Salome!" attitude. However, it was said that hopes were held of persuading him to relent by the season after next. According to this theory of the situation, the focusing of attention upon the issue is bound to result in a demand by patrons of the opera to see Jeritza in the much-discussed part.

What Mme. Jeritza herself thinks of the part was learned yesterday by a re-

OBREGON EXECUTES 3 REBEL OFFICERS

General Pruneda Shot for Plotting With Murguia—Two Executions in Chihuahua.

"IRON HAND" POLICY NOW

Obregon Government Beginning to Use Firing Squad Liberally to Check Revolutions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 14.—General Antonio Pruneda, Chief of Operations in the State of Coahuila, was executed at 6 o'clock this morning after a summary court-martial. General Pruneda was convicted of plotting with General Francisco Murguia for the overthrow of the present Government.

Pruneda made offers to General Espiridion Rodriguez, commander of the forces at Nuevo Laredo, to join Murguia, offering to rebel with all the troops under his command. Rodriguez made a trip to Laredo, Texas, where he conferred with Murguia on immediately starting a new movement. Returning to Mexico, Rodriguez informed his superior officer, General Amaro, who reported to the War Department. Pruneda was brought to Mexico City, where on Monday night he was tried and sentenced to death.

Pruneda admitted having visited Laredo and having abandoned the command of his troops without authority. He also admitted he was implicated with Murguia.

The sentence was carried out at the military prison this morning, Pruneda facing the squad bravely.

An attempt made to serve a writ of amparo on General Cruz, chief of the garrison in Mexico City, was a failure, as it was held that military officials had no recourse except to military courts.

Pancho Villa has shown his loyalty to the Obregon Government in suppressing a new revolt. General Ruiz, an ex-Villista, visited Villa at his Canutillo ranch, inviting Villa to join a revolt against Obregon. Villa immediately took Ruiz prisoner, taking him to Parral, where he delivered him to the Federal authorities.

Ruiz was tried by summary court and executed at 6 o'clock this morning in Chihuahua City.

It is rumored that General Juan Merigo, a prisoner in Lapazos, will be brought to Mexico City for trial. Merigo headed a band of robbers under the name of the Auto Gris, which provoked great alarm in Mexico City during the Carranza period.

It is rumored that General Carlos Greene, accompanied by General Salvador Alvarado, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, has fled to the State of Vera Cruz, where they expect to join General Miguel Aleman, now in revolt against the Obregon Government. This move of Alvarado's is considered unimportant, as he lacks prestige and military knowledge.

Government officials, commenting on the execution of Pruneda, say the Government is determined to suppress all attempts to disturb public order by force. All military officials under suspicion will be subjected to courts-martial, as the Government is determined that officers of the army shall obey strictly the military code or suffer the penalties. If unwilling to serve, they can ask discharge and return to civil life. The Government is determined that the army shall be free from outside influence.

It is expected that several trials will be held in the next few days.

Two Officers Shot in Chihuahua.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—General Antonio Ruiz and Captain Lugardo Peres of the Federal Army were executed this morning in Chihuahua City after having been found guilty of rebellion by a court-martial.

The iron hand of President Obregon, which has been used sparingly during the fourteen months of his administration, now is effectively gripping the incipient revolutions in Mexico, which in the past month have been more frequent than at any time since the last change in government.

This morning General Antonio Pruneda, former commander of the Federal troops in the State of Chihuahua, met death at the hands of the firing squad. He had been convicted by court-martial on charges of rebellion in connection with the activities of General Francisco Murgia, former Minister of War.

Eight of Pruneda's officers who came to the Capitol Sunday by direction of the War Office and who were taken into custody with him, are being held for court-martial.

The courts-martial are meting out summary justice to rebels. The usual program being followed: Catch rebels in the afternoon, hold a trial for them at night and execute them the following morning. The incipient uprisings are said to be born of discontent over economic conditions or disgruntlement with the Central Government. They are being reported in widely scattered regions of the republic, but high officials here declare that they do not constitute a serious threat, and that the Government is prepared to meet all emergencies.

It is reported here that in the States of Chihuahua, Jalisco, Vera Cruz, Coahuila, Oaxaca, Michoacan and Durango there are small bands which are attempting to intimidate the inhabitants. In some instances they have sacked and burned haciendas and small villages. It is declared that Federal troops are being liberally supplied to the disturbed regions and that nowhere are the uprisings meeting with success.

President Obregon showed his belief that the affairs of state were well in hand by preparing to depart tonight for a ten-day health trip in the State of Vera Cruz.

PRIEST IS ACCUSED OF KILLING BROTHER TO GET INSURANCE

VICTIM'S WILL IS FOUND

WAS LONG UNDER SUSPICION

Demanded Inquiry Into Charge That He Shot Boy and Threw Body From Auto.

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—The Rev. Adelard Delorme, a Catholic priest, was arrested tonight on a charge of having murdered his half brother, Raoul Delorme, an Ottawa University student, whose body was found in a suburb of the city Jan. 6 with six bullet holes in the head.

Father Delorme, who had been under police guard all day, was taken into custody after a Coroner's jury, concluding its investigation, had found him criminally responsible for his brother's death.

The long-missing will of the student, who took out $25,000 insurance at the alleged direction of the clergyman just four days before his death, was found today in the office of Notary Belanger, and disclosed that the priest was chief heir and administrator of the estate.

Suggested the Insurance.

At the hearing before Coroner McMahon, on Jan. 24, Theophile Marot, Actuary of La Sauvegarde Life Insurance Company, testified that the priest had come to his office to thank him for a birthday gift, and while there they discussed insuring the young student. He said the priest asked for quotations on a $10,000 policy, and figures on $20,000 and $25,000 policies also were given to him. He testified that the priest stated he wanted the boy to save money, and that when Raoul returned from Ottawa he would speak to the young man about it.

Marot further testified that the priest came again to his office, this time with his half-brother, and the application for the $25,000 insurance policy was made out. When the clause relating to payment in the event that the policy became a claim was reached, the witness testified that Father Delorme said:

"You are young. In your place I would make it payable to my heirs. You can then dispose of it by a will or otherwise."

This was done, the witness declared, and later Father Delorme telephoned the agent inquiring if the policy was ready, explaining that he wanted to make his brother a present of it. Marot said he obtained the policy and delivered it to the priest at his home, young Delorme being present at the time.

The Will Is Read.

The hearing today, at which Father Delorme took the witness stand and calmly related what he knew of his brother's movements on the day preceding his death, was filled with tense moments. The public was excluded, officials permitting only a few newspaper men to be present. The priest went over the previous account he had given of how the young man had left home for an evening's enjoyment, after which he did not see him again.

The excitement was intensified when J. C. Walsh, M. P., designated by the Attorney General's office to conduct the inquiry began to question the priest about his brother's will which had been missing until today, although the police had searched for the document.

Father Delorme stated that the will had been left at the office of a local notary, and when it was produced he suggested that it should not be read, contending that should it be found that he would benefit by its terms his position would be "peculiar."

The contents of the will then were divulged and by its provisions Father Delorme was found to be the principal beneficiary of the dead student's estate, yielding an income of more than $10,000 a year.

Police officials testified that when they asked Father Delorme about the will at first he said it was in Ottawa.

WOMAN WITH PISTOL HOLDS UP CHAUFFEUR

Levels Weapon at Taxicab Driver as Her Two Companions Rifle His Pockets.

ORDERS A RIDE IN THE PARK

The Three Speed Away in Victim's Car and Escape Down the East Drive.

A handsomely dressed young woman at 10 o'clock last night held a pistol at the head of a chauffeur of the taxicab in which she and two men were riding through Central Park, and after her confederates had rifled the chauffeur's pockets of $18 fled with them in the machine, leaving the chauffeur standing with his hands in the air on the East Drive at 102d Street.

Abraham Cohen, the chauffeur, of 1,718 Kelly Street, the Bronx, later told detectives that he was driving south in Lenox Avenue and was hailed by the woman at 116th Street. As he drove up to the curb for his fare, he said, the woman invited two men who were standing near by to join her in a ride.

"Drive down to Broadway and Forty-second Street, chauffeur," the woman ordered, as one of her companions slammed the door of the machine. Cohen said he had gone a short distance, when the woman drummed on the window with her gloved fingers and told him to go through Central Park.

Cohen said he swerved into the East Drive of the Park and was going at a fast clip when, at 103rd Street, the woman opened the door and said, "Please stop the car at the next crossing."

Just as he brought his car to a halt, he added, the woman stepped out of the machine, closely followed by the two men. She fumbled in her handbag for what Cohen at first believed was money with which to pay him his fare, but the next instant pulled a pistol from the bag, which she shoved into his face, and said, "Step down off that car!"

As he stepped on to the road the chauffeur said the woman said: "Throw up your hands and don't open your mouth or I'll shoot you."

Cohen said he threw his hands up and the two confederates of the woman then made a thorough search of his pockets and took all the money they contained.

"Have you cleaned him?" he quoted the woman as saying to the other two bandits.

"Yes; he's clean," one of them answered.

"Well, you run the machine," she said to one man, "and Bill and I will ride inside."

While she was giving these orders the chauffeur said, she kept her pistol leveled at him, and when her confederates had complied with her command she turned to him and said: "Now you walk over to the side of the road, and stand there for five minutes."

Cohen said that as he walked to the place indicated the woman jumped into the taxicab, and the next second the car and its occupants were speeding south. He reported the holdup to a policeman nearby, and although an alarm to apprehend the trio was flashed to policemen stationed at the various entrances to the park the robbers escaped.

HARDING MAY URGE SALES TAX FOR BONUS; OPPOSES BOND ISSUE

Congress Leaders, All at Sea, Wait All Day for His Idea—Will Receive It Today.

EIGHT-POINT TAX DOOMED

BUT DEMAND IS CLAMOROUS

One Suggestion Is for Issue of Short-Term Notes—Fordney Insists Some Bill Will Pass.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—President Harding is opposed to a bond issue, to the eight-point taxation plan, formulated by the Ways and Means Committee, and to a re-enactment of recently repealed taxes as a means of raising money to pay a bonus to ex-service men.

His position became known today, following a meeting of the Cabinet, at which the advisability of paying a bonus at this time, and the effect upon Government financing of such expenditure were discussed. It is said that the President and other members of the Cabinet expressed their views strongly on the subject, with the result that a rumor became current that the President might tell Congress that he was opposed to bonus legislation at present or might favor a limited final sales tax as a revenue raiser.

President Harding holds that it is not possible to raise by a bond issue the amount required for the bonus without injuring Government credit, forcing up interest rates and hindering business expansion. It is his opinion that the Government has right before it about all the financing that can be safely undertaken. Within fifteen months, it is recalled, the Government must refund some $6,500,000,000 in Victory notes and certificates of indebtedness.

The President is opposed in general to any taxation that will burden industry, slowly reviving, and prevent capital going into business enterprises. For that reason Mr. Harding objects to the eight-point plan suggested by the Ways and Means Committee to obtain revenue for the bonuses, and is unalterably against the suggestion that the excess profits taxes and high income surtaxes, repealed in the recent tax bill, might be re-enacted.

It was indicated at the White House that the President opposed bonus legislation last year because of the condition of the Treasury. This condition has not become much better, but the President believes that public sentiment has changed somewhat and that it may be necessary for him to heed this if he can find any means of obtaining the money that is sane and defensible. There appears to be doubt in the President's mind as to whether the time is yet opportune to put the burden upon the taxpayers that will be necessary to raise the sum required for bonuses.

Talk of Limited Sales Plan.

With three proposed methods of bonus payment eliminated, the President is now seeking a plan that will be less disturbing to taxpayers and business. This will reach the Ways and Means Committee and the Finance Committee tomorrow in a letter which, it is said, will give the President's views. The committee met this afternoon to receive the promised suggestion from the President. They learned the views of the President unofficially and discussed the situation informally.

The President's opposition to the eight-point plan and the bond idea made the plight of bonus advocates worse than ever. Many members of the committee concluded that the President was inclined to support a sales tax as a less objectionable method of finding money for bonuses. Some who professed to know his views declared that the President saw no objection to a limited tax on final sales which would exempt sales of farm products.

On the other hand opponents of the bonus found reasons in the President's indefinite position for believing that he would finally come out for further postponement or abandonment of the bonus legislation.

The committees remained in session more than an hour, hoping to get official word from the White House. Members became so restless that a Cabinet member was asked to explain the President's attitude. This he did, declaring that he could not say whether the President had a formal suggestion to offer or intended putting upon Congress the sole responsibility for raising the money.

The demoralization among Republican leaders was increased by the President's failure to support the bonus tax plans. Telegrams of protest against these tax ideas continue to flood the members. Many ex-service men were among the protestants. Most of the ex-service men registered their opposition to a special tax that might become known as the bonus tax and make the beneficiaries unpopular.

The Republican leaders frankly admitted that they are in a plight from which it was impossible to extricate themselves without political embarrassment. They do not hesitate to say that the party's promises to reduce taxes will not be fulfilled if bonuses are granted. On the other hand the party has, to all intents and purposes, promised a bonus.

The situation is one that cannot be controlled by leaders who have hoped that the President would assume the leadership and again counsel delay in granting bonuses. Unless the President does this there is every indication tonight that such legislation will be enacted within two months. It is almost

Husband Kills Released Convict, Protecting Wife, Felon's Former Victim

Thomas O'Brien went to prison in 1910 with a thirty-one year sentence for an attack on a young girl in Brooklyn. Good conduct got him out in seven years, but the girl had disappeared. He searched for her for nearly five years before he learned that she had become Mrs. Elizabeth Costello, wife of Frank A. Costello, a watchman in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, living at 465 West Forty-eighth Street.

Just after 1 o'clock this morning, Costello, calm and unhurried, appeared before Lieutenant Courtney in the West Forty-seventh Street Station, and said:

"Lieutenant, I just murdered a man in my flat. I killed him with a carving knife."

When Courtney had satisfied himself that he was not dealing with a lunatic, he turned the man over to Detectives Ferguson and McGann.

The detectives were skeptical until Costello said, "Just look at my hands!" Then they were convinced.

They found O'Brian dead on the floor. The knife had been driven into his breast over the heart. Mrs. Costello lay ill of influenza. Dr. E. F. Ruppe of 422 West Forty-seventh Street, who had ministered to her earlier in the evening, returned Costello's summons after the stabbing and declared that O'Brian was dead.

"He walked in to her and jerked out a pair of scissors and said he was going to kill us both," said Costello. "I beat him to it. I had to."

The detectives held Costello without bail on a homicide charge. The body was removed to the Morgue and the County Medical Examiner and the Homicide Bureau of the District Attorney's office were advised.

The police learned that Mrs. Costello's mother lived at 245 Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn, but they did not learn her maiden name. O'Brian lived at 76 West Ninety-fourth Street.

Mrs. Asquith Calls Harding 'Wonderful'; Finds Him 'So Human and Easy to Talk To'

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14. — The cab driver took Mrs. Margot Asquith to three different entrances to the White House before she arrived at the executive offices just in time to keep a half-hour appointment with President Harding this morning.

"It was extraordinarily good of you to receive me," she said to the President as she swept into his office and then began a thirty-minute conversation on international affairs. The wife of the former British Premier was admitted while members of the Cabinet were arriving for the semi-weekly meeting of the Harding official family.

Mrs. Asquith emerged from the President's room in high good humor. She proudly displayed "the original copy" of the President's address at the recent session of the Armament Conference. It was Mr. Harding's reading copy that he had autographed.

"Wasn't that splendid of him?" she asked. "I'll show that to Mr. Asquith and ask him if I'm not some one."

"Such a wonderful man," she went on, "so human, so easy to talk to.

"Such a magnificent head—bigger than yours and mine together," and she gazed in apparent revery at the top of one of the smaller craniums in the group surrounding her.

Mrs. Asquith looked mysterious and placed a forefinger to her lips when she was asked if she had discussed the Genoa Conference with the President.

"Now, I ask you," she replied in a confidential tone.

She had a little more to say about a controversial subject of longer standing when she admitted that a little had been said about the League of Nations. Almost in the next breath, however, Mrs. Asquith turned the interview to the Armament Conference, about which she said she discovered that her own views differed little from those of the President.

"It is vital to the peace of the world and the happiness of mankind," she announced, "that the relations of the great powers remain as they are today. Wonderful good was done at the conference, and that will be more and more emphasized as the days pass."

Then thoking the President's manuscript in her muff, Mrs. Asquith left the White House for her next visit, which, she said, was to view Saint-Gaudens's statue of "Grief," which Henry Adams erected to the memory of his wife in Rock Creek Cemetery.

ing almost the entire attention of those members who face the primaries and the November elections.

Even if the President should favor a small sales tax there would be strong opposition to it in the House and the Senate. Republican members of the House went on record in caucus against such a tax, and the opposition is now stronger among the farm bloc than it was a while ago. If sales of farm products were exempted, members of Congress from the East would be likely to oppose it as being class legislation.

A Republican leader of the House, who is opposed to bonuses, said after canvassing the House today that sentiment there was so strong for bonuses as to make it possible to pass a bill, no matter what kind of tax was proposed. He said that he was coming to the conclusion that the House would vote against any bill that provided no means for raising the money. Those who favor this plan say that the money could be raised by five-year Treasury certificates and when business conditions became better taxes could be imposed to redeem the certificates.

While the sentiment for the bonus is not so strong in the Senate as in the House, there is no indication relatively that the opposition in the upper body will be powerful enough to defeat bonus legislation even if the President should refuse to recommend a plan for getting the money. Political exigencies, and not fiscal needs, are influencing many members of Congress.

"There will be a bonus bill," said Representative Fordney late today. "It will be reported by the Ways and Means Committee in ten days or it may be delayed. In my judgment, it will pass both houses of Congress. The time has come to say yes or no to the soldier boys, and I believe a bill will be passed in this session."

HAMMERSTEIN ASKS BEER-WINE BONUS TAX

Opera Producer Tells Mellon Bootleggers Are Taking Soldiers' Money—Wants Theatre Vote.

Declaring that "bootleggers were taking the money rightfully belonging" to ex-service men, Arthur Hammerstein, the New York opera producer, telegraphed Secretary of the Treasury Mellon yesterday urging legislation to permit the sale of light wines and beers, and the imposition of a tax thereon to produce the funds for a bonus.

"Give me a chance," wrote Mr. Hammerstein, "and I will prove conclusively within forty-eight hours, by a vote cast in all theatres and motion picture houses, that the people of the entire country are in favor of this idea."

Darwin P. Kingsley, President of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, sent telegrams yesterday to Senators Calder and Wadsworth, and to all of the members of the New York Congressional delegation, vigorously protesting against the enactment of bonus legislation.

"The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York," said Mr. Kingsley, "reiterates its opposition to the pending bonus bill as involving both grave danger to the credit of the nation and a cowardly surrender to dictation as brutal as that which produced the Adamson law. We warmly endorse any rational provision for the care of the injured and disabled soldiers, but we protest against the proposed prostitution of legislative power."

An editorial under the heading "The High and Wide Barrage," The American Legion Weekly for next Friday takes the view that the passage of a bonus measure is assured.

It says in part:

"The Old Guard of entrenched national selfishness is making its last stand against the American Legion's Adjusted Compensation bill. Waterloo is almost over and the Field Marshals of the opponents are driving their forces to battle with flattened swords. The press is in action and a defensive barrage of alarmist newspaper articles on the country's financial condition is being laid down upon the public.

"The American Legion may view this last minute bombardment merely as a phenomenon, confident in the knowledge that the people have already made up their minds on the moral issue involved in the compensation proposal. It knows that the American people believe that a debt can be met in only one way."

CALLS BONUS BILL "BUNCO."

Writer Declares Measure Would React to Hurt Those Disabled.

The soldiers' bonus bill, now pending in Congress, is called a "bunco bill" in an article in the Disabled Veterans' Magazine, made public yesterday. Under the caption, "Why the Cash Bonus Will React Against the Interests of the Disabled Veterans," S. Lovenbein, the writer, declares that the disabled veterans would be heavy losers if the bill should become law.

"The cash feature is the biggest joker," the article states. "The ex-service men have all been under the impression that were the cash bonus bill passed they would receive payment in a lump sum, less the $60 which they have already received, instead of $20 every three months. At this rate, which is actually the plan for payment, it would take two and one-half years before $360 could be paid to any one man. The ex-service men are wondering why this plan for the payment of the cash bonus has been kept from them by the controllers of soldiers' organizations and soldiers' publications who have sponsored this form of adjusted compensation.

"Instead of benefiting by the passage of the adjusted compensation in its present form the disabled ex-service men would be heavy losers because of it. Such a statement is not made without facts to prove its truth. In the first place, at least $20 a month must be taken from the vocational training pay of disabled soldiers and their compensation must be reduced from 10 to 6 per cent. in order to make possible the payment of a cash bonus without increasing the burden of public taxation to an unbearable and dangerous degree. There has been an increased demand for hospitals because the army of the disabled has doubled. The passage of the cash bonus feature of the bill would mean that the appropriations for this work in the future must be curtailed."

The article asserts that the cash bonus would not help relieve unemployment, and suggests that Congress would do better to frame a law opening places in industry for the hundreds of thousands of unemployed. "Money spent in opening up idle lands and throwing them open to men who need help, in building first-class highways over the entire country, offering the most substantial form of relief and making a chance for every one, would be an expense at which the people of the country would not murmur," the article continues. "But the added taxation necessary to pay a soldier bonus, without aiding any one materially and at the same time working devastation economically, would be vehemently protested against and would raise such a storm of popular indignation that its effect would be far-reaching and disastrous."

FAVOR BRUNDAGE BILL.

Veterans of Foreign Wars Want Direct Tax for State Bonus.

New York State Commissioner James F. Kiernan of the Veterans of Foreign Wars announced yesterday the stand of his organization in favor of the Brundage bill for a State bonus. The measure, Commander Kiernan explained, provides for the raising of $50,000,000 by a direct tax of two mills on each dollar of assessed real and personal property in the State for the next two years. The State's veterans will receive $10 a month for each month in service up to twenty months.

The Brundage bill differs from the bonus legislation of last year which passed the two houses of the Legislature and which was signed by the Governor only to be declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals, in that it proposes to raise money to pay the bonus by a direct tax instead of a bond issue. The word "compensation" is avoided throughout and the term "compensation" is substituted. It has been said that if the bonus legislation of last year had provided the word bonus it might have been approved by the Court of Appeals.

COWARDS ON BONUS, SAYS SENATOR KING

Utah Senator Depicts "Brave Republican Majority" Afraid to Act in Daylight or Dark.

ON BENDED KNEE TO HARDING

Holds Incompetence Will Bring Disaster—Watson of Georgia Speaks for Bonus.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The bonus tangle came up again in the Senate this afternoon when Senator King of Utah, one of the eleven Senators who is opposing the proposed legislation, accused the Republican leaders of cowardice, saying that as now organized the majority party "dare not act in the daylight and is afraid to act in the darkness." He charged that the majority organization in Congress had confessed its impotency and as a result of this confession had gone "hat in hand and on bended knee" to the President in an effort to persuade him to help them out of the dilemma in which they found themselves.

"It is a very good thing," said the Utah Senator, "to have somebody occasionally hold the mirror up in front of wise Senators and equally wise Representatives that they might properly visualize themselves and ascertain their true stature. We are prone to look upon ourselves as demi-gods, competent to deal with the perplexing problems—economic, social and political, which confront the American people.

"If any one should observe the floundering, the vacillating course of the Senate (of course I make no comment respecting the House) he must reach the conclusion that these demi-gods shrink to the stature of Lilliputians. Of course, I would say nothing derogatory to the dignity of the Senate and to the splendid service which we are rendering the country in dealing with these important problems.

"The question before us now seems to be insoluble so far as Congress is concerned, and I read in The Washington Herald of this morning, a paper reputed at least to be controlled by a Cabinet officer (Mr. Hoover), that the impotency of the majority in the two houses of Congress has compelled the Executive to interpose.

Recalls Gibes at Democrats.

"I recall that it was not very long ago that our Republican friends were denouncing the Democratic Party for its subserviency to President Wilson. It was charged that we were rubber stamps. We were rubber stamps when the then President submitted the Versailles Treaty with a recommendation that it be ratified by the Senate. We were rubber stamps because we insisted that the President's prerogative be respected.

"Now, where is the boasted independence of the Republican leaders and the Republican Party? Where is their competency to deal with public questions?

"Any suggestion by the Executive, when the Democrats were in power, was regarded by our Republican friends with the utmost resentment. It was only a little while ago that the President of the United States came into the Senate, as we were about to pass a bonus bill, and by his word interrupted the progress of that bill to a successful issue.

"Now this brave and courageous Republican majority is afraid to act. It does not dare act in the daylight, and it is afraid to act in the darkness, and is devolving upon the Executive the entire responsibility of formulating bonus legislation.

"They are afraid of the farmer vote if they impose a certain line of taxes. They are fraid of the business man's vote if they lay taxes upon certain commodities or upon certain lines of business. They are afraid of the soldiers' vote if they do not respond to the apparent demands of a large number of ex-service men. They are afraid of their shadows; they are afraid to act, and, now confessing their impotency, they go with hat in hand and on bended knee and beg the President of the United States to help them out of their dilemma.

What Harding Could Do.

"I wish that the President would say to these brave Republican leaders who are standing silently by in his shadow, 'Why do you not assert your prerogative and go back to the Senate and to the House, initiate legislation and pass it, and when it comes to me, if it meets my approval I will sign it; otherwise it will met my veto.' I wish the President would do that.

"The Republican majority is afraid to lay any more taxes, because business is already prostrate, agriculture has practically been destroyed, and the country is on the verge of bankruptcy. One year of Harding and Republican administration has brought more disaster to this Republic than has occurred in a corresponding time in its entire history—economic disaster, industrial disaster and a recedence in the tide of those splendid ideals which ought to be the guide and the glory of the Republic.

"The Republicans, when Mr. Cleveland was President and a crisis was on, denounced Mr. Cleveland and his party for issing a few million dollars of bonds in peace time, yet the Republican Party, from all indications now observable, will be compelled, because of their lack of ability and statesmanship to deal with a great question, to issue hundreds of millions in bonds in peace time. They are incompetent to frame a revenue bill which will raise the funds necessary to meet the current expenses of the Government or to meet the maturing obligations of the United States.

"So we drift helplessly, and issue more bonds, and still more, until the bonds now outstanding will shrink in value upon the market, business will be further depressed, and the American people further placed in a condition of financial servitude and bondage."

Watson Speaks for Bonus.

Senator King's address followed one for the bonus by Senator Watson of Georgia, which had been proclaimed as an answer to the speech of Senator Borah yesterday. Senator Watson said that it seemed to him, after listening to Senator Borah, that he was "confused in his reasoning."

"We are told," said Watson, "that the status of the soldier is the same as that of the man who remained at home. Yet all through that these who remained here had the advantage of being in touch with their home folks; they enjoyed the associations of home, they were in contact with home conditions and with those whom they loved. These are advantages that have always been considered invaluable and to lose them has always been considered the greatest of misfortunes.

"And let me state that to be an exile, against one's will, is a severe form of punishment. It has always been considered so. 'Home, Sweet Home' is based on the exile's regret that he is an exile from his home. You have heard that other song, 'Blagues-an-the-Rhine,' the song of the soldier on duty during soldier's fatigue in that 'strange land,' a lament due to that soldier's absence from home. And in this war the soldier could not even communicate with his home folks except through the censor.

"Think of the sufferings of those soldiers, of the soldier who was hungry, of those that were packed in box cars so close together that not one among them could find room to lie down. And you can tell me that after a soldier has undergone all this, he can come home and be treated as if he had never left that home? And we are told that it is an issue to him to vote him the recognition. Where is the patriotism of the comrades in memory of George Washington, and yet Washington and his soldiers of the Indian War accepted a bonus. Washington also accepted a bonus after the Revolution and he went through that war without a scratch. Yet no man would dare to accuse Washington of lacking in courage. And yet Washington accepted a bonus. When Lafayette revisited the United States in 1824 Congress voted him a bonus of $200,000 and 20,000 acres of land in Florida.

"Mr. Watson asserted that Kansas and Nebraska were settled by soldiers of the War of 1812 who accepted bonuses in the form of land grants. For the same reason, he said, the title to the land of Tennessee goes back to a bonus to soldiers who served the country.

"We are told," he continued, "that the country is in great despair and that the soldier must await a revival of normal conditions. If Congress waits for a revival before aiding him his hair will be white before he gets anything."

Senator Watson said he would not vote for a bonus that was to be paid with the proceeds of a tax on gasoline, postage stamps or sales.

"I would spurn such a bonus," he declared, "and so would the soldiers."

The plan of Senator Simmons to use interest on the foreign debt to pay the bonus, Senator Watson said, was the ideal proposition.

"I cannot understand," he said, "how any sincere friend of the bonus can oppose the plan."

Senator Watson suggested that the bonus could be paid by putting back into circulation the Federal reserve notes withdrawn from circulation in the last twelve months. This, he said, would meet the 1922 payments next year. Congress could find a way to meet the 1923 payments.

THINKS BONUS BILL DEAD.

Legion Men and Veteran Legislators Confer With Miller in Vain.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—Because of Governor Miller's determined stand against any proposal for a bonus for soldiers which does not provide for a referendum, there is a growing belief that bonus legislation at this session is dead. Soldier legislators and representatives of the American Legion, in a last effort to save the bonus, conferred with the Governor this afternoon, but it is understood no decision was reached.

The Governor has said repeatedly that he favors a constitutional amendment which will make it possible to raise the money for a bonus by the issuance of State bonds. The legion men are now suggesting that the money could be obtained through the proposed tax on unincorporated business. This, it is estimated, would aggregate $15,000,000 and provide a bonus for each veteran of not more than $100, which the legion, it is said now, is willing to accept.

Further conferences with the Governor are expected.

AUTOS KILL TWO, HURT ONE

Crowd Threatens Driver Whose Car Crushes Boy of 10.

An unidentified boy about 10 years old was killed yesterday in front of 173 Eldridge Street by an automobile of the New York Butchers Dressed Meat Company, driven by Eugene Jolly of 228 East 123d Street.

Witnesses were divided as to whether the driver was responsible or whether the boy ran under the wheels. It was said that the driver was to blame, however, quickly spread, and about 200 persons gathered about Jolly. They were handling him somewhat roughly when policemen rescued him and took him to the Clinton Street station on a technical charge of homicide. In Essex Market Court he was held in $12,500 bail for a hearing.

The dead boy had dark hair, wore a gray coat, two pairs of trousers, a gray mackinaw, black lace shoes and a white blouse.

Vincent Lauricella, 18 years old, a student at Manual Training High School, sustained a fractured skull yesterday when a trolley car overturned an automobile in which he was riding with his father, Emanuel Lauricella, a paper bag manufacturer of 2,228 Eighty-first Street, Brooklyn.

Anselm Endres, 50 years old, of 9½ Toledo Street, Bedford Park, died last night in St. John's Hospital, Long Island City, from injuries received on last Sunday when run over by an automobile. Endres was crossing Broadway, Elmhurst, in the snowstorm when the machine, driven by Theodore A. Heuriblinger of 3 West Polk Avenue, Corona, struck him. The driver was detained by the police and will be arraigned this morning in the Long Island City Court.

KENYON TO RESIGN SOON.

Senator Only Awaiting Action on the Unemployment Relief Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Senator Kenyon of Iowa, who recently was appointed a Circuit Judge by President Harding, said tonight that he would retire from the Senate and assume his position on the bench not later than Feb. 28. He added that he would write Governor Kendall of Iowa to that effect tomorrow.

If his unemployment bill, which would provide for stimulating work on public improvements in slack times, is disposed of before Feb. 24, Senator Kenyon said he would retire from the Senate that much sooner. He explained that he was remaining in the Senate primarily to obtain action on this bill. It was today made the special order of business for the Senate tomorrow, and he expects it to be disposed of by Feb. 24 at least.

CRITICISES JUSTICE CLARKE.

Senator Harris Says He Should Attend to Duties in Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Associate Justice Clarke of the Supreme Court of the United States was criticised in the Senate today by Senator Harris, Democrat, of Georgia, for making an address recently, advocating cancellation of American or other war debts.

"The Supreme Court should look after its own affairs," said Senator Harris. He added:

"For a member of that court to say anything in matters pending before Congress I consider most unfortunate. The Supreme Court has the highest of duties to perform, and I hope it will not interfere with other matters."

SAYS BACON IMPROVED.

Wife of Missing Newspaper Man Writes of Benefits From Operation.

Mrs. Irvin R. Bacon, wife of the newspaper man who underwent an operation for rejuvenation and who recently disappeared from his home in Atlantic City, does not believe that the operation was responsible for his leaving home, according to a letter from her which was received yesterday by Dr. Thomas W. Edgar of 166 West End Avenue, who performed the operation. The letter says in part:

"Every day I saw an improvement for the better. It was very pleasing to see him look in the mirror and to discover that every day his hair was turning blacker and blacker. His cold baths, too, he would enjoy every morning, a thing that he could never do before. The only reason I could account for his leaving is that he realized that his friends went back on him."

MOTHER-IN-LAW MUST PAY.

Jury Awards $82,500 to Daughter-In-Law in Alienation Suit.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 14.—A verdict for $82,500, said to be the largest award ever given by a Massachusetts jury in a suit for alienation of affections, was given to Mrs. Eugenie B. Dickerman of Somerville in the Superior Court today. Mrs. Dickerman sued her mother-in-law, Mrs. Minnie L. Dickerman of Somerville, asking $100,000 damages for loss of her husband's affection.

While engaged in war work in Paris the plaintiff, who is about 30 years of age, met Robert E. Dickerman, 28, then in the army. They were married. But when the armistice there came an estrangement, which the wife blamed on her husband's mother.

M'CORMICK PRAISES DEEDS OF THE PARTY

Declares Democrats Seek to Put on Republicans Blame for Bad Business.

HE RIDICULES EX-GOV. COX

Hails Arms Conference as Doing More in 12 Weeks Than League Had Since It Started.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Republican achievements were lauded in the Senate today by Senator McCormick of Illinois, Chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, whose address was evidently meant to be an answer to the recent speech by ex-Governor Cox of Ohio and also to resent attacks by Senator Harrison of Mississippi upon the Harding Administration for its conduct of the nation's affairs. Senator Harrison, who is expected to answer McCormick, took copious notes of the Illinoisan's remarks.

"A fortnight ago," said Senator McCormick, "there emerged from the political limbo of lost souls the individual whom the Democratic captains, in emulation of P. T. Barnum and Mark Twain, nominated for the Presidency, to afford the American people some relaxation after the boredom and irritation engendered by the expiring Administration. An analysis of the speech of Governor Cox shows that he has forgotten nothing and has learned nothing since the people retired him to private life."

The Senator then went on to say that to judge from Mr. Cox's speech the Democratic leaders hold to these issues:

"First—The world-wide and short-lived prosperity which feverishly followed the armistice was Democratic.

"Second—The economic depression into which the whole world has since fallen was wrought, not by the waste of war, but by the Republican Party.

"Third—The Democratic leaders believe that although the greater part of Europe is maintaining armies of which the taxpayer must meet the cost and although her debtor Governments have not overcome their deficits and that although they cannot pay the interest due America, we should lend and lend more, more and more.

"Fourth—The Democratic leaders still hold the irrevocable conviction that we must put upon our necks the bonds of the League of Nations."

Referring to Governor Cox's statement that he was going to Massachusetts to help defeat Senator Lodge for re-election, Senator McCormick called upon the spirits of Hale and Putnam and other New England patriots of other days to harken when "James Cox puts forth his imprecations upon the gray old head of Henry Cabot Lodge, because he loved the League of Nations too little and America too well."

Senator McCormick urged his colleagues not to weary in their efforts to repair the injury to industry, agriculture and public credit, which, he charged, was "wrought in ignorant arrogance by the Democratic dictators."

Praises Deeds of Congress.

The Senator declared that the nation was coming to know that the legislative program written by the present Congress "is more far-reaching and includes more constructive measures than any written in time of peace at any one session within the lifetime of any one now living."

"Let us consider," he said, "the ills bequeathed us and the measures taken by our Government to meet them. Since our partisan critics are blaming a Republican Administration, let us consider the financial burden left us by the Wilson Administration and the Republican effort to relieve it. I do not dwell upon the new laws for the protection and relief of agriculture, although three of these at least are of enduring importance. I do not speak of the legislation we have passed to sustain the export trade. I do not put forward the budget act. I wish now to call attention to the dollars spent and dollars saved, considering their inestimable influence upon our prosperity."

Senator McCormick asserted that the United States, under the Democratic Administration, spent $11,000,000,000 on the military program, and for this outlay there was sent to the front fewer than 200 cannon and fewer than 200 airplanes. Not a Shipping Board built ship carried American troops to Europe, he asserted, while American railroads, he asserted, were converted under Governmental control into "one vast railroad wreck."

In the fiscal year 1920, McCormick said, the Republican Congress saved $3,000,000,000 from the estimates submitted by the Wilson Administration, and in the fiscal year 1921 the same Congress, he asserted, saved another $1,000,000,000. On the other hand, he contended that the Harding Administration, "with rigid frugality," was spending millions less than were voted by Congress.

The rejection of the profligate Democratic estimates by a Republican Congress," he went on, "so conserved the resources of the Government that since the Republican victory in 1918 the national debt has been diminished by over $2,000,000,000. There is no other Government in the world which so persistently, consistently and drastically has reduced public expenditure as that of the United States since the Republican Congress came into power."

While the United States saved such huge amounts, Senator McCormick said he had not been able to discover any proportionate retrenchment on the part of the nations that were in debt to this country. He said there are nearly 2,000,000 men "encamped and garrisoned about the capital of the League of Nations," into which, he added, Governor Cox would like to drag "free America" in the next election.

Points to Conference Results.

After denouncing the League, the speaker praised the work of the Conference for the Limitation of Armament, called as it was, he said, by a "modest man."

The conference, he added, had removed "very far from us Americans all menace of war." He asserted that in twelve weeks the conference did more to speak and good-will than the League of Nations has been able to do in "the three times twelve months of its existence."

"Already," concluded Mr. McCormick, and he was cutting a figure as he said it, "there are signs that the seed sown in Washington will bring forth not only the good fruits for which we hoped, but other and richer still; how soon and in what measure, only the Almighty can know."

"As toiled in faith the humble husbandman, so in calm confidence and unstudied self-effacement labored the President of the United States to sow the seeds of peace, the role which he chose for himself was as modest as were the formal purposes of the conference.

"History will determine how great a part has been the judgments of the composite competent here. But Warren Harding and his compatriots knew now that the restoration of Europe can be found only in the spirit of mutual concession, of common sacrifice, of good will and of realizable ideals which marked the conference at Washington. It is in this spirit, and in this spirit only, that Europe, putting aside hatred and revenge for concord and peace, can common to help in the work which today she proclaimed she cannot do alone."

$100,000 Fire Blocks Broadway.

Traffic was blocked on lower Broadway between 10 and 11 o'clock last night by a two-alarm fire which caused $100,000 damage to a six-story building at 668 Broadway, between Great Jones and Fourth Streets. The fire cleaned out the first two floors, occupied by the Greater New York Rubber Stamp Company. The upper floors were only slightly damaged.

ASSEMBLYMEN FAVOR WOMEN ON COMMITTEES

Means 'Divided Responsibility,' Says Rowe, Only Opponent of Livermore Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—Republican Assemblymen in conference this afternoon decided to pass the Livermore bill which gives representation to women on county committees. Assemblyman Rowe, Republican of Erie, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, in opposition asserted that it was "nothing more than a sop to the women." It was reported that five others voted with him against the measure.

"I am strongly opposed to this bill," he said, "because it is nothing more than a sop to the women. It will never accomplish for them what they think it will. If enacted, it will lead to divided responsibility in county committees, which will work for the detriment of the party. Some women have an idea that this measure is going to do a whole lot for them, but some day they will realize that it will accomplish nothing for them."

The bill carries out a recommendation made by the Governor in his annual message. Assemblyman Livermore, its sponsor, is a son of Mrs. Arthur L. Livermore, Chairman of the Women's Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee. When the bill was introduced, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York City came to Albany to work for it.

The Democratic members of the Assembly are expected to vote for the bill. Soon after the Legislature opened Assemblyman Merrigan, an Albany Democrat, offered an almost identical measure.

Abolition of the Bronx Parkway Commission is called for in a bill offered today by Senator Downing, New York City Democrat. Under the bill the duties of the commission would be transferred to the Board of Estimate so far as they relate to New York City and to the Westchester County Board of Supervisors so far as they relate to that county.

The Senate passed the Whitley bill empowering the State Attorney General to appoint special deputies to prevent frauds at elections. Deputies could be sent into any polling place on Election Day.

Eight bills introduced by Senator Walton and Assemblyman Ullman, the latter of New York City to curb crime, were killed by the Assembly Codes Committee following a hearing at which no one appeared to speak for or against them. The committee, at the request of Mr. Ullman, Hearing by the Assembly Judiciary Committee on Messures proposing amendments to the State Constitution to provide for home rule for cities, was put over until Feb. 28.

LUXURY IN ITALIAN SHIP.

Conte Rosso, Coming Here, Has Decorations That Cost $400,000.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The last word in luxurious travel by sea is expressed in the Italian liner, Conte Rosso, which leaves the Clyde Thursday on her maiden voyage to America.

Designed, constructed and engined by William Beardmore & Co. for the Lloyd Sabudo of Genoa, the Conte Rosso is said to be the finest combined freight and passenger steamer built since 1914 in any country. Money has been spent on the ship without stint, the decorations alone costing $400,000.

The vessel is of the shelter deck type and has accommodation for nearly 3,000 persons, all first class.

The public rooms have been decorated by artists from Florence. The main entrance hall is in the style of the Italian Renaissance in oak and mahogany. Elaborate hand carvings, inlaid work, tapestry, stained glass and oil paintings play a part in the general scheme.

The large music room is in Pompeiian style. From the centre of the lanterned roof hangs a great crystal chandelier shedding subdued light from a thousand electric lamps.

But the gem of the staterooms is the library, a spacious room in the style of Tuscan Renaissance. A finely carved and inlaid frieze runs round the sides and there are about fifty sea and landscape paintings embedded in the scheme.

After the trip to New York the Conte Rosso will sail on a regular service between Genoa and South American ports.

SPOTS PASS CENTRE OF SUN.

Yale Professor Doubts Any Aurora Coming Now.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 14.—Professor Frank Schlesinger, Director of the Yale Astronomical Laboratory, said tonight of sun spots which have been under observation:

"The four spots have passed the centre of the sun and it is extremely unlikely now that there will be an aurora from them. Possibly there was one Sunday night but the weather was cloudy. It often happens that when a large spot like the present cluster passes over the sun there is an aurora.

"The present group consists of one large and three small spots following it. They will be visible about four days more. They are being carried around the side of the sun which is away from us and will probably be gone when that side of the sun gets around to us again in about a month."

Clue in Bullet Mark.

Their testimony also showed that bullets in the young man's head bore the same barrel marks as those fired from a revolver found in the priest's car, and that soap had been used in an apparent effort to remove blood stains on the seats and cushions of the machine. Feathers found in the car also were described by witnesses as similar to those in the automobile wrap covering the victim.

Coroner McMahon cautioned the jurors that, although Catholics, they were not to be influenced by the fact that a priest and a servant of the Church might be affected by their decision. They stood 7 to 1 on their verdict finding him criminally responsible for his half brother's death.

Father Delorme was unmoved by the verdict, and walked briskly to the automobile in which he was driven to Police Headquarters.

Case Aroused Wide Interest.

The death of young Delorme aroused wide interest in Canada.

Father Delorme, who is Chaplain of L'Assistance Publique, has been much in the public eye. He first attracted attention when he offered a reward of $1,000 for the capture of his brother's slayer. Later he issued statements denying allegations he charged were being made against him by irresponsible persons.

When he began to be prominently mentioned in the case, Father Delorme telephoned Premier L. A. Taschereau of Quebec and the Attorney General, demanding that the inquest, several times postponed, be proceeded with in order that his name be cleared.

The body of young Delorme was found at Snowden Junction, a lonely suburb of Montreal. It had been thrown on the snowbank by a sleigh. The hands were tied with twine.

REPUBLICAN RECORD EXTOLLED BY LODGE

CITES ARMS CONFERENCE

And Gives Figures of Decrease in Expenditures Since Congress Control Was Won.

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—An address on what the Republican Party had accomplished in Congress since it came into power and what it had done in international affairs through the armament conference was made by Senator Lodge before Republican members of the Legislature at a dinner tonight.

He asserted that the Republican Party since gaining control of Congress in December, 1919, had made a record in international and domestic accomplishment by which it could ask the country to stand "without fear or misgiving." He urged Republicans to pay no heed to the outcries of political opponents who called the present Congress a "do-nothing" body, but rather to "go forward in the good old Republican way and carry on."

"The Democrats, by every artifice of delay and time wasting," he went on "have done their best to make this Congress a 'do-nothing' body, and, although they have failed, they are keeping on saying it just the same.

"I am speaking within bounds when I say that no Congress in time of peace has ever shown such an amount of important, effective and remedial legislation as has been enacted by the present Congress."

The Republicans, he added, found the worst situation economically which the country had ever been called upon to face, and "we have a right to be proud of our record."

Senator Lodge said that when the party got control of Congress in 1919 it proceeded to reduce appropriations of the Wilson Administration for the last year by $1,500,000,000.

"It also," he said, "repealed war appropriations aggregating more than eight billions of dollars and continued to reduce them until for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, the appropriations stood at $3,900,000,000.

"Since the present Congress has been in," the Senator continued, "they have reduced appropriations asked for by the departments of $5,337,000,000 to $1,428,000,000. This was the work of the present de-nothing Congress. This is partly owing to the fact that during the year ending June 30, 1921, 93,634 people were dismissed from the public service, and since the armistice 320,378 employees have been dropped from the civil payrolls. Somebody did something."

Referring to the Revenue act of 1921, the Senator said:

"I should have been glad personally to have made those surtaxes on incomes lower than they were finally agreed upon, but we were compelled to get the money somewhere and it seemed to the Republican majority of the Congress that the most important relief to be given to business and the country was by the termination of the excess profits taxes.

"It was thought also of the first importance to get rid of the transportation taxes on freight, passenger and express packages—a direct burden on all the business of the country."

The Revenue bill, he asserted, "has really brought a large measure of relief from taxes to which little attention has been paid. The total reduction of the best analysis of which can be made will reach $835,000,000 for the calendar year."

Speaking of the bill for funding the Allied debt, Senator Lodge said:

"The United States has no intention of playing the part of a usurer, but it was the money of the American people which was lent to the allied and associated powers in their time of greatest need. The debts which the United States owed to those powers she has paid in cash, and has questioned none of them.

"We are well aware that some, perhaps many, of the nations indebted to the United States cannot now pay their principal or interest, but some arrangement must be made in peace that great debt upon a businesslike basis and to secure what is properly due to the United States and her people, for it was the people who lent the money."

Senator Lodge dwelt upon the fruits of the armament conference, which, he said, "we owe to the wisdom of President Harding in summoning it."

"More was done by the conference for the world's peace in twelve weeks," he added, "than has been done anywhere else in twelve or many years. These are questions which arise above the region of politics, but the fact remains that it was under a Republican President that steps have been taken under which a thoroughly American policy has been carried out in the conference at Washington by a delegation representing both political parties, with a success which is recognized by the entire world."

The three great subjects proposed by the United States in the armament conference, said the Senator, were the limitation of armament, the termination of the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the attainment of "all we could for the benefit of China, in which the dominant feature was the return of the Province of Shantung.

"In all three of these objects," he continued, "we were successful. I do not underrate in the least the earnest good-will and co-operation that we received from all our colleagues, representing the other nations, but the lead in the conference belonged to the United States because we issued the invitations, and that lead we had throughout. Almost every proposition, certainly all of any importance, was brought forward by the American delegation."

Senator Lodge said that abrogation of the Anglo-Japanese alliance removed a "soil in which the seeds of war might easily grow."

The Four Power treaty merely provides, he continued, "that we shall respect each other's rights in such (Pacific) possessions and dominions and that if controversies arise we shall consult before taking any further measures. There is no alliance in it, no military or naval forces is hidden in those simple paragraphs. The only obligation we assume is that of consultation."

Speaking of the Chinese settlement, he said:

"The United States refused absolutely to accept the propositions in regard to Shantung in the Treaty of Versailles and believed then and believes now that that province should be controlled by China, of which it has always been a part. But of the other eight powers at the table in Washington, six had ratified the Treaty of Versailles and had accepted that clause relating to Shantung.

"Therefore the only way to get that wrong undone was to bring about negotiations between Japan and China directly. This was effected by the good offices of the United States, represented by Mr. Hughes, and of Great Britain, represented by Mr. Balfour. The result has been that Shantung is now back to China practically unburdened."

Assembly Adopts Resolution Praising Arms Conference Results.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—After a short debate the Assembly today adopted a resolution offered by Assemblyman Hotts extending congratulations to President Harding, Secretary Hughes and all the American delegates on the success of the Conference for Limitation of Armament. Mr. Cuvillier, New York City, Democrat, was the only member who voted in the negative.

In speaking for his resolution Assemblyman Betts said that great good had been accomplished by the conference, and that President Harding, Secretary Hughes and all Americans who took part in the conference had won the respect and admiration of the people of the nation.

LODGE LOSES FIGHT FOR NAVY YARD WORK

Harding Decides That Contract for the Leviathan Must Go to Lowest Bidder.

MEANS A POLITICAL JOLT

Getting of This Work for the Boston Yard Has Become an Issue in Lodge's Campaign.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14. — Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, leader of the Republican majority in the Senate, has been turned down by the Harding Administration in his fight for the reconditioning of the ex-German liner Leviathan in the Boston Navy Yard.

Despite the fact that the demand that the contract go to the Boston yard has become a live political issue in New England and in figuring in the fight confronting Senator Lodge for renomination and re-election to the Senate, and in face of the action taken in the Senate last Saturday when it adopted an amendment intended to make it possible for the Shipping Board to award the contract to the Boston yard under certain conditions, the Administration has decided that there is no justification for refusing to accept the lowest bid submitted, which came from the Newport News Shipping and Dry Dock Company of Newport News, Va.

These were the outstanding developments today in the case of the Leviathan, which has been attracting close attention in Congress and in Administration circles, following conferences which Chairman Lasker of the Shipping Board had with President Harding and with Secretary of the Navy Denby. It was authoritatively announced today that the contract would be awarded tomorrow to the Newport News Company, on its bid of $8,200,000 for the restoration of the 56,000-ton liner; in time for use in the North Atlantic passenger service by the Spring of 1923.

Chairman Lasker said today that the board had not yet decided to what line the Leviathan would be allocated, but that the International Mercantile Marine Company had released the Shipping Board from the terms of the agreement, which had previously been made with that company by former Chairman John Barton Payne, and by which that company would have operated the Leviathan for the account of the American Government.

Direct Opposition to Lodge.

The decision on the contract means, of course, that the Administration is taking a firm stand in opposition to what Senator Lodge wishes.

James M. Curley, who has just been re-elected Mayor of Boston, and who has developed suddenly into a powerful figure in Democratic politics in Boston, came to Washington last week as Chairman of a committee which embraced also the Mayors of small towns around Boston where men who had been employed in the Boston yard reside. Senator Lodge met the delegation in his office at the Capitol and Senators Hale and Moses, also representing New England constituencies, were present. Assurances were given the delegation that these Senators would fight for the adoption of an amendment to the Executive and Independent Offices bill, which carries appropriations for repairing Shipping Board vessels.

Senator Lodge made a vigorous fight for his amendment in the Senate last Saturday and obtained its adoption. The amendment provided that no part of the money made available by the bill should be spent for reconditioning any Government vessel, if such work cost over $5,000, until a reasonable opportunity had been given to the nearest available Government navy yard to estimate upon the cost for such reconditioning, "unless the President should otherwise direct."

The bill containing the Lodge amendment has not become law. It is tied up in conference at the Capitol. President Harding, it is understood, has, however, "directed otherwise."

Being turned down by the President in a matter which has become an important issue in and around Boston will not be a pleasing thing for Senator Lodge to explain in this year's campaign. The Senator's feelings in the matter were indicated last Saturday, when, in a Senate speech, he pointed out that from 2,500 to 2,800 men had been thrown out of work in the Boston Navy Yard and the Fore River Shipbuilding Yard, only 5,000 now being employed in both yards.

The President's Stand.

President Harding permitted it to become known at the White House today that he himself has some very definite views in the matter of awarding the contract to the Newport News Company. The President indicated that the Government could not, in good faith to the eight private shipbuilding companies that had submitted bids, refuse to accept the lowest offer. The fact was emphasized at the White House that the Shipping Board had advertised for bids for reconditioning the Leviathan and had received bids ranging from that of the Newport News Company to $12,000,000. The companies which submitted these bids had, it was explained, spent sums ranging from $28,000 to $37,000 each in making the surveys necessary to enable them to obtain information on which to base their estimates. It was pointed out that, moreover, these private companies, by the lowness of their bids, had shown that they had shaved their figures down for the purpose of relieving the unemployment situation by obtaining the work for their yards.

Chairman Lasker, it is learned, held a conference this morning with Secretary of the Navy Denby and was told by the latter that the navy yards were not equipped for work of the particular type demanded by the specifications for the reconditioning of the Leviathan. The ex-German liner is to be converted from a coal-burning to an oil fuel steamer. Accommodations are to be installed for more than 3,000 passengers, and crew quarters are to be provided for 663 officers and men. The luxurious and palatial public saloons, which were damaged materially when the Vaterland was converted for transport uses during the war, are to be restored. It is estimated that $5,595,000 will be spent on the reconditioning proper, $515,000 on putting the machinery in condition and $687,303 on furnishings. The insurance maintenance, docking and trials will bring the expense of reconditioning up to $8,200,000.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Arthur J. Balfour and Lord Lee of Fareham arrived this morning and their reception at Waterloo Station proved how highly their work at the Washington conference is appreciated by the British Government.

There was nothing formal about it. It differed in essentials in nothing from the welcome given to other homecoming passengers. But seldom can plenipotentiaries returning from an important and delicate mission find waiting them such a gathering of influential people.

The Prime Minister was one of the first to come to the station, and soon after appeared the Earl of Bradford, representing the King, and Ambassador and Mrs. Harvey. They were soon joined by nearly the entire Cabinet, including Lord Birkenhead, Winston Churchill, Lord Curzon, Austen Chamberlain and Sir Gordon Hewart. Two of Mr. Balfour's relatives, Lady Frances Balfour and Dowager Lady Rayleigh, were also there, and among the well-known persons who came to meet the British delegates were Lord Derby, Lord Riddell, Lord Desborough, Chairman of the Pilgrims; Sir Maurice Hankey, Sir Philip Sassoon, J. Wilson Taylor and Sir John Henry.

During the period of waiting Lloyd George had a long conference with Lord Derby, leader of an important section of the Conservative Party and ex-Ambassador to France, and these stood chatting with Lord Curzon and others of his colleagues. As the train drew in interest centred on Mr. Balfour and there was a rush toward his carriage. Sir Harry Brittain called for cheers as he appeared at the door in his soft black hat and heavy traveling overcoat. The Premier Lloyd George was the first to greet him as he stepped onto the platform and for five minutes he was surrounded by a surging crowd of statesmen, each trying to shake his hand and get in a word with him. He appeared in the best of health and spirits and answered questions and exchanged greetings on every hand with animation, beaming on everybody.

Greets Harvey Cordially.

As he saw the American Ambassador he exclaimed cheerily: "Delighted to see you, Harvey. I saw all your people only a few days ago and they sent you their love."

"Hullo, Arthur," called out a Foreign Office friend. "What sort of crossing did you have?"

"Oh, pretty bad," was the answer, "rough and rolling all the way, and I was really ill for a few hours."

Finally the photographers got to work and Mr. Balfour posed with varying groups of his colleagues. A cry went up for the American Ambassador and Mr. Harvey was pushed forward to take his turn between Mr. Balfour and Mr. Lloyd George. Then the Prime Minister led Mr. Balfour down the platform to his automobile, and as he got in with Mr. or Lascelles, his private secretary, and Mrs. Lascelles, it was Mr. Lloyd George who called on the crowd waiting outside the station barriers to join in the cheers, which he himself led.

Mr. Balfour was asked for a statement.

"Just think of the situation," he replied with a smile. "How can I discuss it? I have made endless speeches in America. I have made a long speech on board already which I think is in the papers this morning. I shall doubtless have to make more speeches in the House and out of the House on the subject. I understand that I am to be entertained at luncheon on Thursday by Coalition members of both Houses of Parliament."

Mr. Balfour hinted that possibly he might be expected to say something of importance then.

Hopeful of Ratification.

As to ratification of the naval understanding discussed at Washington, Mr. Balfour said:

"Everything is decided and fixed up except that every country has to ratify. As to whether every country will do so, I am not competent to speak for any country but my own. I have no doubt it will be ratified in this country, but of other countries I cannot speak."

Mr. Balfour, however, seemed to indicate that he had no great doubt about the matter.

"Is the Washington conference likely to prove the first step toward disarmament?" he was asked, and replied: "I do not think you can say it is the first step toward disarmament, but it is a great step, and I hope it will not be the last."

Discussing the relationship of the objects of the Washington conference on matters of disarmament and the aims of the League of Nations Mr. Balfour observed that it was all working in one direction.

"The peace of the world," he said, "and the prosperity of the world are matters of international concern, and international machinery must be used to promote them."

Lord Lee, also interviewed on the Aquitania, referred to the effects of the Washington conference as they related to naval matters. He said:

"The effect of the conference means complete cessation of all competition between the five naval powers involved. That is a great gain and tremendous lightening of the burden of the taxpayer."

Lord Lee was questioned concerning the quotation he made at Washington from the writings of the French naval critic, Captain Castex, on the question of French submarines. Lord Lee would not discuss the matter except to say "I made no error."

SAYS BRITAIN WITH U. S. COULD END WAR

Frank Dilnot Points Out That the Two Nations Control Bulk of Food, Money and Ships.

ENGLAND OUR READY FRIEND

Tells of Lloyd George's Disappointment at Not Being Able to Come Here.

Speaking at the Horace Mann School, Broadway and 120th Street, last night, Frank Dilnot, former American correspondent of The London Daily Chronicle, said that America and Britain, standing together, could effectually prevent a recurrence of war. His statement, which followed an address on Lloyd George, evoked applause from an audience which crowded the auditorium.

"America and Britain could prevent future wars," Mr. Dilnot said. "I do not wish to minimise the value of the recent Washington conference, but it really could be a superfluity, when we reflect on the possibilities for guaranteeing peace offered the two nations. For nations must have food, money, supplies and the like. Between them, Britain and America control most of the world's food supplies, ships and money.

"There are bonds in common between the American and British people with which statesmen had nothing to do. On the day the United States entered the war a million British mothers got down on their knees and thanked God. There were more American flags visible in London on Armistice Day than British.

"It was the call of the blood that brought the young manhood of America into the treaty. If in the genrations to come the United States should find itself in a position to need assistance, the British Empire will give the same unmistakable answer in the call of the blood."

Mr. Dilnot spoke graphically of the life of Lloyd George, interspersing his talk with anecdotes illustrating the many-sided activities of the British Premier. Fearless in following the trend of his own convictions, Lloyd George had made many enemies, a fact which did not seem to bother him in the least, Mr. Dilnot said.

"At the time he was bent on transferring the tax burdens to the rich and favored, it was said that duchesses fainted in drawing rooms at the mention of his name," Mr. Dilnot continued. "Never in modern times has there been a man who has held such a dominating position in a democracy, untouched by popular removal or by accidents and tragedies which sometimes hit men of affairs. For fifteen years this little Welshman has weathered all kinds of criticism and storm, always smiling in that benign, innocent way of his.

"Lloyd George's eye is constantly turned toward America. Five weeks ago, when I had a talk with him and mentioned I was coming over here, how wistful and earnest were his words expressing his sorrow that he could not visit the United States. He is intensely interested in America and Americans."

Dwelling on the war-time activities of Lloyd George, Mr. Dilnot told how in the dark days the Premier succeeded in obtaining 800,000 shells a week from manufacturers when every one predicted that such an output was out of the question.

Mr. Dilnot said that Lloyd George's diversions consisted of fishing and golfing in the place where he lived as a boy.

PEERESSES PROTEST ON 16-INCH SEATS

Lord Chamberlain's Allowance for Royal Wedding Is Rejected as Inadequate.

Copyright, 1922, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—How much space is a peeress in ceremonial costume entitled to have as sitting room? is the question which has given the Lord Chamberlain's department a great deal of bother in connection with the arrangements for Princess Mary's wedding. Space in Westminster Abbey is limited and the Duke of Atholl, the Lord Chamberlain, laid down the rule that seats should not be more than sixteen inches wide. Quite a goodly number of aristocratic dames, it appears, have protested that the allowance is inadequate.

The Duke of Atholl responded that he had measured the space he required for sitting accommodation when he was wearing his kilt, which takes eight yards of cloth in the making, and he saw no reason why women, even if they were peeresses, should wear dresses more voluminous than his kilts.

My Lady Mayfair, as one of the chroniclers puts it, says this is preposterous. She knows quite well that her diameter is more than sixteen inches, and she is very angry indeed with the Lord Chamberlain. It is all very well for the Duke of Atholl to put on his kilt, sit on a bench in Westminster Abbey, measure the space he occupies and then issue an official notice that each peeress attending the royal wedding will not be allowed any more sitting space than sixteen inches. The Duke is alloting space on the assumption that each dame will presumably on the average not occupy more than sixteen inches. My Lady Mayfair says it cannot be done. She has her dress made, a very charming affair, and though she dearly loves the Princess she does not want her happenings spoilt with silly regulations by his Grace of Atholl, who imagines a kilt is much the same as a dress.

As these are times of innumerable deputations perhaps the ladies of Mayfair will wait upon the Lord Chamberlain and give him their views.

Meanwhile one newspaper has sent out reporters to measure the space alloted for seats in the public vehicles and other places. One type of bus, the smallest on the road, allots to each passenger exactly sixteen inches. On the underground travelers get nineteen inches. Stalls at the theatre average about twenty inches. The King's Councillors have twenty-four and a half inches.

GLASS COACH FOR PRINCESS.

She Will Ride in It to the Abbey for Her Wedding.

Copyright, 1922, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Final decision has been reached as to the manner in which Princess Mary will ride to her wedding. The decision that she is to ride to the Abbey with the King in "the Irish state coach" will be a popular one.

There is quite a fairy tale touch in the name "the glass coach," by which the wedding conveyance also is known. The seat in this coach is high and its occupants are well in view of spectators. A gilded crown surmounts the body, which cannot be thrown open.

The choice of the glass coach will settle the troublesome question as to whether or not an open carriage should be used.

Florida Resort Women Protest Against Bathing Suit Parade.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 14.—St. Petersburg's bathing suit factions have clashed over the propriety of holding a bathing suit parade as a feature of gala week next month.

Three women's organizations have filed protests with Mayor Pulver, declaring that such a display of bathing apparel would be indecent "unless exhibited on lay figures." The Purity League recently urged the Mayor to appoint a bathing suit inspector "to protect married men from the wiles of the sea vamp." No action has been taken on this request.

SEEMS UNHURT AFTER 4 CARS PASS OVER HER

Policeman Rescues Woman From Under Subway Train; Both Nearly Hit by Another.

An unidentified woman about 55 years old fell or jumped from the uptown platform of the Lexington Avenue subway station at Fifty-ninth Street last night in front of a Hunts Point local train. All but the last truck of the four cars passed over her before the motorman could stop. Patrolman Koegel, of the East Sixty-seventh Street station, crawled between the trucks after the power had been shut off on that side and dragged the woman out, unconscious but apparently unhurt.

Koegel started across the tracks to lift her to the downtown platform when shouts warned of the approach of a southbound train. Bracing his foot against the cover of the third rail and holding on to a stanchion, Koegel crouched with his burden out of the way of the train. He and the woman were unscathed.

An ambulance surgeon from Flower Hospital took the woman, still unconscious, to Bellevue, after he had been unable to find any injury. She was poorly dressed and carried a purse, empty, except for an admission ticket to City Hospital, which bore no name. She wore glasses, a blue serge skirt, a blue hat, a brown pongee waist and brown shoes.

RADIO FINDER LOCATES STEAMER IN DISTRESS

Instrument Enables Norwegian Liner to Reach Freighter Adrift in the North Sea.

Captain K. S. Irgens of the Norwegian-American liner Stavengerfjord, which arrived yesterday with mails and passengers from Bergen reported that he had made good use of the radio direction finder with which the vessel is equipped during the storm in the North Sea, off the Norway coast.

The liner picked up an S O S sent out by the Otto, a Norwegian freighter with a broken rudder, and Captain Irgens went to her assistance. By the time he reached the position given in the call, the helpless steamer had drifted sixty miles away, but was located by the radio finder. When the Stavengerfjord reached the Otto, the Captain said he stood by her until a sea-going towboat came out, which had been searching for the disabled steamer after the S O S call had been picked up by the shore stations.

The Stavengerfjord brought from Christiana and Bergen $6,000,000 in Russian and German gold coin in 100 boxes. The gold was kept under guard in the specie room on the voyage from Norway. It is consigned to the National City Bank and the Guarantee Trust Company.

The liner brought 421 passengers of all classes and was three days late by reason of Atlantic storms.

DUKE'S ENGAGEMENT DENIED

Reports Regarding King's Second Son Said to Be Without Foundation.

Copyright, 1922, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—The paper London Gossip printed in its columns this morning reports taken from some American journals that the Duke of York, second son of King George, was engaged to Lady Elizabeth Bowes Lyon, daughter of the Earl of Strathmore.

It is stated on authority here that the report is entirely without foundation. Gossip on the matter was prevalent in London a month or so ago, when it was also said that the Duke of York's wishes to enter upon the engagement had brought him into conflict with his father. Inquiries at the time failed to obtain any information tending to corroborate these reports, which, it may be added, were only part of a long series which have sprung up respecting both the Prince of Wales and Duke of York.

IRELAND'S GRAVEST CRISIS IS AT HAND

political reasons the Government received the unanimous advice of military advisers against having troops on the south side of the border.

The Daily News Dublin correspondent claims authority for stating that the evacuation of British troops will be resumed today unless hostilities break out on a large scale on the Northern front. The correspondent says there seems no foundation for Collins's suggestion that the British army refuses to vacate the county, and that a "situation similar to the situation created by the Curragh mutiny" may arise. The correspondent adds:

"The facts are not nearly so dramatic. Certain persons in authority appear suddenly to have formed the opinion that civil war on a big scale with an invasion of Northern territory by the South and of Southern territory by the North was imminent, and that it was necessary to have a strong force at hand which could be flung between the combatants to serve as a cushion while politicians got together round a table.

"British troops are now worse than useless as a protection to life and property. Whatever happens, they cannot be used in the numbers now available without flinging the country straight back into the hell of guerilla warfare. There is no half-way house between complete evacuation and complete reconquest with an army of 100,000 and upwards.

"De Valera wishes to refrain at the moment from commenting upon Collins's statement in the cable message to America that a coup d'état was being planned for the overthrow of the new Government. Mr. Collins has merely put into writing what is common talk in the city. That some attempt at a coup d'état is likely to be planned, if not executed, before the year is out is taken for granted by experienced politicians."

Troop Movements Halted.

LONDON, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—Lord Birkenhead, Lord Chancellor, referred in the House of Lords tonight to the Irish situation in similar terms to Mr. Churchill in recent speeches in the House of Commons with regard to the necessity of making allowances because of the restricted powers possessed by the Provisional Government. He also made it clear that he did not criticise the action of the Northern Government in arresting football players carrying arms.

With reference to the suspension of the evacuation of British troops, the Lord High Chancellor said the Government considered in the present situation of extreme tension, when so many were entitled to look to British help as the only refuge, that continuance of evacuation would not be justified until the time appeared to be ripe.

Announcement that the British Government regarded it necessary to suspend the evacuation of British troops from Southern Ireland was made by Winston Churchill, the Colonial Secretary, in the House of Commons today. The sole reason for the suspension, Mr. Churchill said, was the disturbed situation on the northern border and not because of anything that had happened in the southern part of Ireland.

The Colonial Secretary said that Michael Collins, who would cross to England tonight to confer with the Cabinet members had informed the Government he would take steps before leaving Dublin to secure the release of the kidnapped Unionists as soon as possible. Collins had stated in his message, added the Secretary, that he knew where a number of the kidnapped men were being held.

Answering a question as to whether the British troops would be placed in Monaghan County to prevent further raids from the South, Mr. Churchill said:

"Quite apart from serious political reasons, the Government has received the unanimous advice of military experts against the adoption of such a course at the present juncture."

Alluding to the rioting in Belfast, the Colonial Secretary said the trouble began by the firing on loyalist workers from a Sinn Fein locality. He said the bomb that exploded in Weaver Street was thrown over a wall in Sinn Fein quarters. He said the British Government was doing everything to cope with the situation.

Dublin Condemns Rule in Evacuation.

DUBLIN, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—Great apprehension has been caused here by the British Government's cessation of military evacuation, as it is believed by many leading Irishmen that this act plays directly into the hands of the opponents of the Anglo-Irish treaty.

Speedy fulfillment of the London Government's promise to evacuate Southern Ireland had created the general impression here that the British were acting in good faith and that there was reality in the powers granted to South Ireland by the treaty. The handing over of the barracks and their occupation by troops of the Irish Republican Army had a similar effect. Interruption in evacuation is feared in many quarters as indicating a change of front on the part of the British Cabinet.

The military authorities in Dublin are not believed to be responsible for the move. It was learned today that the Cabinet was not supposed by the Provisional Government to have been consulted on the suspension of evacuation activities, and Michael Collins takes the view that it is a fresh example of "meddling by the War Office, acting in the old spirit."

Acceptance of the candidacy for an Ulster seat in the Imperial Parliament by Field Marshal Sir Henry Hughes Wilson, who has just vacated his post as Chief of Staff of the British Army, has had the effect of reviving old suspicions here.

One explanation offered here for the suspension of evacuation is that the local commanders, in view of recent incidents in Southern Ireland, refused to take the risk to the men and equipment that would be involved in the troops' departure. Mr. Collins places responsibility on Eamon de Valera's campaign of resistance to the Provisional Government.

Today's issue of Mr. de Valera's newspaper, The Republic of Ireland, shows the strengthening of this attack. It urges Arthur Griffith to remember that he (Mr. de Valera) is President of the Irish Republic, and that the Free State is yet in the far future. The journal attacks the bill introduced in the British Parliament giving powers to the Provisional Government as "a masterpiece of camouflage." It continues:

"The tactics of mystification and deception will not succeed whenever the election comes. Early or late, we shall be ready for it and shall welcome it. We shall fight on for the republic, living and indestructible, and we shall win."

In the same paper Robert C. Barton, who was one of the Irish delegates who negotiated the Free State treaty, has a long article contradicting statements of Mr. Collins and asserting that the treaty was signed only under duress. With reference to the delegation at London, Mr. Barton says in his article:

"The ignominious fact is on record that at that crisis three members of the Republican delegation refused even to submit to the British Government, on behalf of their country, counter-proposals maintaining for itself the dignity of independence.

"Two members, of whom Mr. Collins was one, finally refused to submit them when their submission involved a risk. One member, Mr. Griffith, eventually agreed to, but he personally pledged not to press to the breaking point the claim of Ireland to be free of British sovereignty. These counter-proposals afterward became the basis of Mr. de Valera's alternative document, and Mr. Collins permitted the differences between them and the treaty to be described by Mr. Griffith in the Dail as a 'quibble of words.' A difference so dangerous and great in London as to warrant a refusal even to press it at Downing Street became a 'quibble of words' in Dublin."

BELFAST VICTIMS STEADILY INCREASE

22 Dead, 60 Wounded in Street Sniping—Quiet on the Ulster Border.

Copyright, 1922, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BELFAST, Feb. 14.—Conditions in Belfast, which is peculiarly sensitive to repercussions of events elsewhere, are steadily growing worse. Police and military pressure on combatants appear only to drive them underground temporarily and during the whole day firing has been sporadic. This evening continuous sniping is being maintained in the Millfield district.

Casualties have increased to twenty-two dead and more than sixty wounded.

The military were called out tonight to assist the civil authorities. One soldier of the Norfolk Regiment was slightly wounded in the leg.

Indiscriminate shooting continued today in the streets of the city. As one walks along Royal Avenue one sees groups peering cautiously around certain corners and those are the spots to be passed in a hurry. Pedestrians jump nervously if a motor car back fires, but the impressive feature to a stranger is the comparative calmness with which conditions are accepted—a fatalistic passivity which betokens usage.

If casualties were confined to the irresponsible gunmen concerned it would not be so grave perhaps. Unfortunately, inoffensive men, women and even little children, Catholic and Protestant alike, are struck down in indiscriminate shooting. One man killed this morning was the caretaker of an Orange lodge in Clifton Street. As he stood outside the building a sniper armed with a rifle dropped on one knee and shot him through the neck at short range. This incident is regarded by the authorities as decidedly serious and extensive reprisals are feared. Crown forces are fully prepared to cope with disorders and several armored cars are in reserve.

In such conditions blackguardism flourishes practically unchecked and holdups of shopkeepers and pedestrians are frequent, footpads not hesitating to operate in the leading thoroughfares. The extent to which arms and ammunition are held by the civilian populace—the supply of both appears to be unlimited—is not less disturbing than the callousness with which they are employed. The only cure for outbreaks of the sort which now is rife is, so far as one can perceive, a systematic sweep for lethal weapons.

Sir James Craig presided over a meeting of the Ulster Cabinet this morning at his residence on Cabin Hill, where a police guard is on duty. It is understood the general position was under review, and the steps already taken were approved. The possibility of a coup d'état against the Provisional Government referred to in Michael Collins's cable message to America excited keen speculation here but comment is guarded.

Two of the men kidnapped from Tyrone, are reported from Dublin to have been released. Late this afternoon the Northern Government had received no intimation of their return. From the border village of Clady, near Strabane, which has been the centre of manifestations of violent feeling, it is stated the release of two missing Unionists also is imminent.

Assuming the reports to be true in the main, they constitute the first gleam of light in what otherwise is an unrelievedly gloomy atmosphere. Both sides are hampered in any movement toward a solution of the present impasse by the profoundly embittered views of the respective masses of adherents. Any step, such as the releases referred to, in the direction of diminishing the bitterness which now exists must be regarded in the special circumstances as an act of courageous statesmanship.

Preparations of a defensive character are being methodically pursued by the Northern Government, and in Tyrone alone rifles were issued yesterday to 2,000 civilian police who patrol at night. On this sector of the frontier there are now 8,500 such civilian constables bearing rifles, in addition to the R. I. C. and platoons of special constables already concentrated in the district. The measure of breaking the mountain roads leading into Tyrone and Fermanagh with a view to restricting traffic in the main thoroughfares is also proceeding. This work is being performed by voluntary labor.

Troops Enter the City.

BELFAST, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—Promiscuous shooting in the streets of Belfast continued throughout today and tonight. As a result four additional persons were killed and several others died in hospitals. The number of persons wounded also was augmented by the gunmen's activities during the day.

Up to midnight tonight the death roll since the disturbances began last Saturday had mounted to 22, while the list of wounded exceeded 60.

Troops came into the city today and took up positions at various points at 5 o'clock this afternoon. Shortly afterward, a soldier of the Norfolk Regiment received a bullet wound in the thigh and was sent to a hospital. Early this evening, Thomas Blair was shot and died on his way to the hospital. James Rice was found dead in one of the thoroughfares late tonight. His head had been battered in and there was a bullet wound in his body.

During the night a tramcar was attacked by gunmen at Mount Collyer Road. The conductor was wounded. The promiscuous shooting continued until the curfew hour sent the people to their homes.

Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, this evening received a telegram from Winston Spencer Churchill, British Secretary for the Colonies, saying:

"I have just received a message from Michael Collins, saying 'Mr. Collins is happy to inform Mr. Churchill that he was in a position to secure the release of a number of prisoners captured from the North today. He is not certain of the number, but will know later on.'"

Lieut. Col. W. B. Spender, Secretary to the Ulster Cabinet, said this evening in answer to an inquiry that the promised release of the kidnapped men would not affect the situation of the Southern football players, who recently were arrested while going to Londonderry for a match game. He added, however, that there was nothing to prevent the football players from applying for bail.

The Most Reverend Joseph MacRory, Bishop of the diocese of Down and Connor, sent the following telegram to Premier Lloyd George today:

"For the past few days Belfast again has been given up to horrible lawlessness. Since Saturday about a dozen Catholics have been shot dead, some in their own houses, and over forty wounded, and several of them, it is feared, fatally. There is no adequate protection here for Catholics. The military is urgently needed in the streets."

ENNISKILLEN, County Fermanagh, Ireland, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—Lively exchanges of words marked the opening of the inquest here today on the bodies of the four Ulster special constables who were killed during Saturday night's disorders at Clones.

Coroner James Milligan referred to the Ulster volunteer movement as creating the present situation. He was warmly taken to task by a juryman, while another juror said all the trouble rested on Premier Lloyd George, whom the juror called a "weak-backed Premier." If there was Christianity in the south of Ireland, he added, this never would have happened.

The Coroner adjourned the inquest until Feb. 21.

COLLINS ANSWERS DEVOY.

Denies Private Bargain and Explains League Stand.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, Feb. 14.—Michael Collins has sent a cable message to John Devoy, editor of The Gaelic American, of New York, in reference to an article by the latter on Ireland and the League of Nations in which Devoy hints at a private bargain with Lloyd George. Collins says:

"England's admission that Ireland is entitled to membership in the League if Ireland desires such membership is an acknowledgment of Ireland's independent Statehood, and as such was cited by us. Whether Ireland would seek such membership is a matter of policy that has not yet been considered and will not be considered until the Free State Parliament and Government are in being.

"I agree with you that American citizens of Irish race are not and should not be governed in their political actions by Irish reasons. You are entirely wrong in thinking there is or was any private bargain. The treaty, as it stands is absolutely the only agreement reached."

American Societies and Individuals Ask Harding to Take a Hand in the Revisions.

MANY MISSIONS INVOLVED

Also Business Interests, Which Fear They Will Suffer in the New Arrangements to Be Made.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Strong pressure is being brought to bear on the Harding Administration in favor of American participation in some effective form in the forthcoming conferences of the powers which will deal with the Turkish situation and the Near East.

It is learned that very influential American organizations, corporations and individuals have been communicating both to the White House and the State Department their recommendations that the American Government should take advantage of the proposed conference of agents of powers and insist upon making a clear and firm presentation of the necessity for properly safeguarding every legitimate American right and interest in the former Turkish Empire and throughout the Near East and the Levant.

The first of the proposed Near Eastern conferences will be held at Paris by representatives of Great Britain, France and Italy. Originally set for Feb. 1, this conference had to be postponed until Feb. 6, and latest information is that it has been put off until March 1. Premier Lloyd George or Lord Curzon, probably the latter, will represent England; Premier Poincaré is expected to represent France, and the Italian representative will be named after the political situation in Italy has cleared.

The preliminary conference of the powers is to be held at Paris, and later it is planned to have a conference at Constantinople for the writing of new treaties. In the latter conference Turkey and other interested powers would be consulted. But the real decisions, if decisions can be reached, will be made, it is thought, in the preliminary conferences at Paris.

The importance of proper attention being given to the matter of guaranteeing rights of American corporations in Turkey was brought to the attention of the State Department from another important angle today by Dr. James L. Barton of Boston, Executive Secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

Dr. Barton called on Henry P. Fletcher, Under Secretary of State, as spokesman for sixteen American societies, colleges and institutions engaged in religious, educational and philanthropic work in what was the Ottoman Empire at the outbreak of the war. Secretary Hughes having left Washington this morning for Bermuda, it was in the capacity of Acting Secretary of State that Under Secretary Fletcher received Dr. Barton.

The group of American institutions represents property investments in the territory of the former Turkish Empire running into many millions of dollars and their expenditures in Turkey from the beginning have amounted to more than $100,000,000. The State Department has been informed that at least one-tenth of the people of the United States, including men and women in every walk of life, and dwelling in all parts of the country, have been personally interested in the work of these organizations.

Dr. Barton today informed the State Department that the representatives and members of these American corporations respectfully but urgently requested and petitioned two things of the American Government in connection with the proposed Near Eastern conference. These requests are:

First, that the Government of the United States assure all of the powers and Governments engaged in negotiations for the settlement of the future boundaries, international relations and internal status of what was formerly the Ottoman Empire, or what may so remain, that these American institutions with their directing personnel shall be guaranteed their properties, their rights, their privileges and immunities enjoyed for a century or less under treaties, agreements, capitulations, concessions and precedent.

Second, that the United States Government arrange that at the coming proposed conference, and at any future conference which the affairs of the Near East, affecting the welfare of these American corporations, are liable to come up for consideration and decision, a representative or representatives of these American religious, educational and charitable interests shall be present.

The second request implies that the American Government be represented in some effective form in the proposed conference. Representatives of these organizations could not very well be present in such conferences if the United States Government itself refrained from participating.

It is now considered probable that the United States may be invited to appoint representatives to take part in the Paris conferences, and that the question of such participation will soon come forward for consideration by the Administration in some form.

INDIA GOVERNMENT WILL BE SUPPORTED

Undoubtedly the war accentuated and aggravated. It shook up the whole world. A magnetic current passed through the nations and they are still trembling except those that are still too exhausted. It stirred them up and gave them new vigor. The war undoubtedly created unrest and disturbances in every land.

"Let any one look to their own country in 1914 and go through all the countries of Europe and he needs no further explanation of what happened in India. The firm hand of British rule prevented the catastrophe in India.

Manoeuvred into War With Turkey.

"One of the unfortunate consequences of the war from the point of view of India was that we were manoeuvred into a position of having to fight the greatest Islamic power in the world. It was an undoubted triumph for German diplomacy. In the East, German diplomacy did thrive with Turkey, Bulgaria and Greece, and there was the fact that we were the only power that was free, because we were a sea power and there was no invader on our soil to take up the challenge.

The result was we were as an empire brought face to face, as it were, with a solitary conflict between the British Empire and an Islamic power. That was one of the misfortunes of the war over which we had no control. But undoubtedly that is one of the causes of unrest in India and elsewhere.

"I have only sketched very summarily some of the causes of disturbance. It is gradually subsiding. The position is improving, and as far as the tension of nerves of people is concerned they are not as ready to take offense. That is a matter of time.

"When you come to the East there is nothing that would be of greater advantage than if peace could be made with the Turkish Empire. My right honorable friend, the Foreign Secretary, hopes in the course of the next few days to take up the matter again with our allies with a view to seeing whether it is not possible to arrange a satisfactory peace. (Cheers.) But it must be a just peace. There is nothing to be gained by unjust concessions to fear.

"We hold the balance even in India between the various religions, and the strength of British rule in India is not because we have given way to one faith because it was menacing at the expense of another, but because we fearlessly held the balance even between the Mohammedans and Hindus and every other religion, and the principle we have applied in India we must apply to a settlement of the Turkish treaty. We must be fearlessly just to both religions and to both races, otherwise in the end no good will be done, much harm will be done, and we shall have sown the seeds of future trouble in order to buy temporary satisfaction.

An Economic Cause of Unrest Also.

"What was the other cause for unrest? There is a material cause. There is the fact that India is poorer like every other country because of the war. People who bought from her can no longer buy. The population is very much poorer and there is not the same margin for improvement.

"There is only one way of dealing with it, and it is a general way. It is universal. It applies to India and applies to Britain. That is, peace must be established throughout the world and there must be an international effort to reconstruct trade on its own normal basis again.

"That is why India has been invited specifically to send a representative to assist the British delegation at the coming conference at which the reconstruction of Europe will be discussed. No doubt a great deal will be done for the material development of India and I invite members to read the report on the Indian railways. There is enough cause in that alone to account for a good deal of the Indian trouble. It is one of the things that call for immediate remedy.

"It is a very remarkable document and, as the supreme responsibility rests with us, it is one of the things that calls for a remedy and an immediate remedy. There you have page after page of complaints from the great provinces of India that tens of thousands of tons of grain, of sugar, of cotton and of cotton-seed are rotting at railway platforms and sidings and in bazaars because there are no wagons and no locomotives. They cannot get coal to run their factories. The mills are closing down, and the docks are crowded, and that is not merely since the war.

"I am not going in to the question of who is responsible, whether it is Government control or private enterprise. I am pointing out a condition of things, and I say it ought to be remedied. If private enterprise can remedy it, let private enterprise take it in hand.

"This is undoubtedly one of the causes of Indian unrest. Men are thrown out of work and are suffering in the mills, the peasants are suffering and the development of India is retarded.

"You have only to take the figures. With a population of 300,000,000, we have 36,000 miles of railway in India. Canada, with a population of 8,000,000, has 30,000 miles of railway. That is an indication of one of the directions in which something ought to be done to improve conditions.

"I come to another cause—the racial cause. There are differences of race, cause of unrest, whether it is economic or religious. I do not know whether those who criticize the Government suggest that the experiment initiated two or three years ago should be scrapped. I do not think they have gone as far as that. Then, I do not see what the complaint is. Let them be quite clear on it because discussion in this house has a great repercussion in India, and anything that will lead the people of India to believe we are going to break faith with them will have a most disastrous effect on the friends of British rule in India.

"It ought to be made clear that as far as we are concerned we mean to give that experiment a chance to succeed. If it fails the failure must not be attributable to our default. To the educated classes in India must be given the best opportunity for making this experiment a success and there must be no suggestion of breach of faith by the British Parliament. That would be fatal to our prestige.

"But further reforms must await the result of the experiment of democracy in its modern acceptation of government of the people, by the people and for the people. It is a recent experiment even in the West. Democracy is a Western experiment and in its full sense it is only a recent one even in the West. India has never been a democratic country, and it is a ridiculous idea that we can now trust to democratic institutions in India which it has taken centuries to develop here.

"If the experiment in India is to be a success it must be a gradual one as it has been in the West. In one or two cases in Europe where democratic institutions have gone beyond the capacity for the time being of the population they have been a failure.

Must Not Challenge Government.

"I am all for associating India with ourselves in the government of that great country, but they must take care not to go too fast. The authority of the Government there must not be challenged. We could not allow India to challenge authority, a thing which would not be allowed in this country nor in any civilized country in the world. Therefore the Government welcomed the declaration of the Viceroy that civil disobedience was fraught with danger to the State and that it would be met with stern measures.

"We shall support the India Government in any action it may think fit to take to establish the authority of the Government in India. [Cheers.] A dispatch has been sent to India couched in these terms. Before the Home Government intervenes to override decisions taken at that distance there ought to be a most overwhelming case. Any effort to establish order throughout the vast dominions of India would get the full and unqualified support of his Majesty's Government.

"There has been an impression created by very mischievous propaganda in India, and equally mischievous propaganda at home for a totally different purpose, that we mean to give up India. I have heard it said that it has permeated the Indian civil service. There ought to be no doubt in the minds of any one on that point. Let me say on behalf of his Majesty's Government that we wish to make it clear that under no circumstances or conditions do we propose to withdraw or impair the full sovereignty of the King, Emperor of India. [Cheers.]

"We accepted a great trust as a people when we occupied India. We invested ourselves with that trust to the exclusion of all others. We cannot divest ourselves of this trust without shame and dishonor. There is nothing left between India and confusion except British rule." [Cheers.]

Hicks's Criticism of Montagu.

Before the Prime Minister spoke, Sir William Joynson Hicks, in moving his amendment to the address, complained that Mr. Montagu, by applying liberal and home rule ideas to India, had given encouragement to insidious agitation. "Gandhi," he said, "ought to have been locked up years ago." He added that at least 10,000 people had been killed in riots and rebellions, and Mr. Montagu could have avoided great deal of this.

Mr. Montagu, replying to this and other criticisms of his administration, said he had ceased to be friends with Gandhi as soon as he became convinced that the latter was a danger to the Indian Empire. Giving his version of the causes of Indian unrest, Mr. Montagu placed first and foremost the growth of what he described as race consciousness. Speeches like those of President Wilson in America and Premier Lloyd George at the Paris conference and discussions that had raged around Poland, Silesia, Ireland and Egypt, had had their inevitable effect in India.

As regards Gandhi, Mr. Montagu said the Government of India had been assured that if Gandhi's arrest became inevitable they would receive the support of the Cabinet in London. Orders had been given for the arrest of Gandhi, but he gathered that Gandhi had recently given assurances of a different attitude and the Government had postponed proceedings pending an inquiry as to whether Gandhi's decision meant complete cessation of illegal and dangerous activities.

BOMBAY, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—Mohandas K. Gandhi, leader of the non-co-operationist movement, announces that he began last Sunday a five days' fast as penance for the recent disturbances in Chauri-Chaura. He says he will regard his fast as punishment for those who committed the "brutal murders, which no amount of provocation could possibly justify."

Gandhi advises those guilty of participation in the Chauri-Chaura lynching, in which seventeen native policemen were killed, voluntarily to surrender and confess their crimes. He says he regards this tragedy as the third warning from God against hasty combination en masse, civil disobedience and as his bitterest cup of humiliation, but he deems such humiliation, or, if even death preferable to any compounding of untruth or violence.

How to Arrange Food in Ice Box

The principle of refrigeration is based on the fact that warm air rises. The rising air carrying with it the moisture and impurities from the surface of the food, passes over the ice. The air is thus chilled and dried and the impurities are carried off by the ice meltings. The bottom of a refrigerator is the place for butter and milk; the next shelf for fruits and leftovers; the top for salads and vegetables.

As nearly as possible a uniformly low temperature should be maintained. This means a regular supply of pure, clean Knickerbocker Ice.

LENIN AND TROTZKY HEARD IN TOWN HALL

Lecturer Introduces Their 'Canned' Voices as Part of a Discussion on Red Russia.

ENLIGHTENMENT AS CURE

Sir Paul Dukes Wants America to Be One of Nations to Pave Way for Liberty There.

The voices of both Lenin and Trotzky, predicting the triumph of communism, were heard yesterday afternoon from the stage of the Town Hall, but it was through the medium of a phonograph. The records were unreeled by Sir Paul Dukes, British author and traveler, who obtained the "canned" speeches of the Bolshevist leader in Russia, where they were made for distribution as propaganda among the soldiers.

"The word 'Soviet,'" said Lenin, "has already become the most popular word of the workers in all the world." Said Trotzky: "If we win, there will never be any more wars; but if the others win, there will be nothing but wars."

Sir Paul, who lectured under the auspices of the College Settlement, said that the reason the communists were building up their own relief organizations in the United States and in other countries was that they hoped to claim the credit for the succor given to the starving workmen at home.

"The workers and the peasants of Russia have been told that the British and the Americans and the people of other countries are on the point of revolting," Sir Paul said. "The presence of the British, French and Americans in Russia would offer the best proof of the failure of Bolshevism, and that's why they are so eager to get funds for relief through other than official American agencies and the agencies of the outside world.

"I can see no alternative for the Soviet Government. No conspirators who might be able to overthrow the present rulers of Russia could hope to equal the arch-conspirators, who would eventually regain their lost power. A counter-revolution in Russia could not set up a Government that would last six months, and then the present communist leaders would come back into power more strongly entrenched than ever before."

The speaker said that the Bolsheviki had not established a Soviet system. Their methods are not identical with the Soviets which were an established form of government under the Czars, whose highest Soviet corresponded to the Senate of the United States. He said the word "soviet," when used as a noun, meant counsel, and when used as a verb, meant to advise.

"There has been a psychological revolution going on in the minds of the people of Russia while the Bolsheviki have been endeavoring to entrench themselves," Sir Paul said. "This is what we must count upon to free Russia from the autocratic domination of the communists."

Sir Paul was in Russia in 1918, after the downfall of the Kerensky Government and the rise of the Bolshevist movement. He became identified with the Y. M. C. A., with which he worked in Petrograd, Moscow and other Russian cities. When the American organization was ousted by the Bolsheviki he returned to England, where he volunteered to serve his country as an agent in the Secret Service. His lecture included accounts of numerous escapes, when he was on the point of being made prisoner by the Russian Reds. "Once," he said, "I was able to assume an exceedingly impressive manner of stupidity, and the guard was easily convinced that I was an idiot."

REDS ARE REPUDIATED BY FRENCH LABOR

Copyright, 1922, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—By the overwhelming vote of 92 to 3 the Council of the French Labor Federation today voted confidence in their directors and Jouhaux, their leader, and repulsed all further attempts at reconciliation with the seceding Bolsheviki. Even the suggestion, pressed hotly yesterday, that another attempt be made for unity by holding another congress was dismissed by 85 votes to 8, with 7 abstainers.

Jouhaux by this result has enormously strengthened his position with the moderate labor movement throughout the country, and his tactics of yesterday in offering his resignation if it was an obstacle to unity on one condition—that the Bolshevist leaders did the same—has given the moderates an opportunity to show that their ranks are closed to the extremists.

The result of the meeting will be that for some time at least the two sections of the Labor Federation will continue separate existence, one under the leadership of Jouhaux, which is Socialist and Anti-Communist, and the other under Totti and Monnousseau, which takes its direction from Moscow.

Of the two, the original body under Jouhaux counts an enormous numeric superiority over the Communist body. Out of 91 departmental unions only 20 have seceded, and in some departments secessionists still work in collaboration with the National Committee. Further, out of 44 industrial federations of which the former confederation was composed, only seven have absented themselves from the National Committee meeting, and within the industries which these seven represented an attempt is now being made to organize a directorate for the moderate element left which will take their place in the National Council.

SAY AMERICANS FAVOR RUSSO-GERMAN TRADE

Hope to Divert German Trade From South America, According to Berlin Report.

BERLIN, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—American commercial leaders in Germany are greatly interested in the negotiations in progress here between German trade interests and Leonid Krassin, the Russian Soviet trade representative. It is reported that the American traders are actively furthering the German attempts to establish good trading relations with Russia, hoping thereby to divert German competition from South America.

It is said that if trade between Germany and Russia, which Germany is hoping for and would prefer to South American commerce, should be developed to any appreciable extent it would give the Americans the longed-for opportunity of further developing the South American commercial field. Should German commerce toward the East develop successfully, the German interests are reported to be willing to abandon their South American projects generally. This is said to be particularly possible in case legitimate trade relations with Russia can be established, since Russia has raw materials essential to German industry and Germany has machinery and other products needed in Russia.

SOVIET CAN'T SUE, BUT MAY BE SUED

Justice Giegerich Rules That Immunity From Suit Is Based on International Comity.

FURRIERS CLAIM $800,000

Recent Appellate Decision Held That Unrecognized Government Had No Status in Our Courts.

Supreme Court Justice Giegerich decided yesterday that while the Russian Soviet Republic has no authority to maintain an action in the courts of this country, that Government may be sued here, and accordingly denied an application by Charles Recht, attorney for the Russian Government, to dismiss a suit brought by Max Wulfsohn & Sons, furriers, to recover $800,000. The firm complains that skins purchased abroad by them were seized by the Soviet Government while passing through Russia consigned to America.

The application for the dismissal of the suit was based on the recent ruling by the Appellate Division dismissing an action by the Soviet Government against Jacques Cibrario for $1,000,000 for the conversion of funds, on the ground that since the American Government has not recognized the Soviet Republic it has no standing in the courts. Justice Giegerich pointed out that because the Soviet Government cannot sue here it does not mean that it cannot be sued.

"It is settled that the immunity of a foreign Government from suit is not based upon any absolute right by virtue of its sovereignty, but upon international comity," he said, "and as there is no international comity existing between the United States Government and the Russian Socialist Federated Government, it has no claim to such immunity. In the present case the ability to sue arises by reason of the non-recognition of the Russian Soviet Government by the United States Government, but it does not seem that the fact creates any immunity from suit."

In a similar case recently it was decided in the Supreme Court that the Mexican Government could not maintain a suit here for breach of contract on the purchase of submarine chasers, and the suit was dismissed because the Mexican Government has not been recognized.

SAY GIRL CAN DRESS WELL ON $90 A YEAR

Kansas Merchants Give Industrial Relations Court Prices to Uphold the Claim.

Special to The New York Times.

EMPORIA, Kan., Feb. 14.—A working girl can dress comfortably and neatly on $90 a year, according to testimony introduced by Emporia merchants at a hearing conducted here by the Kansas Court of Industrial Relations.

To prove this claim, H. W. Glass, manager of a chain store in Emporia, exhibited a year's wardrobe which could be purchased for between $85 and $90. The budget for the working woman made by investigators of the Industrial Court in 1921 estimated the yearly clothing expense at $161. Prices have gone down since then, the merchants testified.

Principal items in the $90 wardrobe are:

One wool dress, $13 90 (to wear four seasons); one cotton dress, $5.95; one gingham apron, 73 cents; one coat, $22.50 (to wear three years); one coat suit, $14.75 (to wear three seasons); one outing flannel nightgown, 79 cents; one muslin gown, 98 cents; one kimono, $1.49; one pair high shoes, $3.98; one pair oxfords, $2.98; two hats, $4 each; one georgette blouse, $3.98; two cotton blouses; two cotton dresses; cotton stockings, 23 cents; four vests, 15 cents; underwear, 49 cents a pair; corset, 98 cents; teddies, 98 cents; gloves, handkerchiefs and other incidentals could be paid for with the balance.

Henry Nichols, a cafe owner, testified a woman could live on 60 cents a day for meals. He allowed doughnuts and coffee for breakfast, a hot sandwich and coffee for lunch, and meat, potatoes and vegetables for dinner.

PALERMO JOB TO AMERICAN.

Contract Signed for Harbor Improvements by John R. MacArthur.

ROME, Feb. 14.—After several weeks of negotiations, to which Richard W. Child, the American Ambassador, lent his assistance, a contract with the municipality of Palermo and the Italian Government was signed today by John R. MacArthur of New York, who has formed an Italian company to make extensive improvements in the harbor of Palermo. The work is to be done in ten years.

For a long time Palermo has needed harbor improvements, and it is believed that the work now to be undertaken promises new prosperity to the port through the giving of years of employment to a large number of laborers and that it also will contribute to all Sicilian activities.

Ambassador Child visited Palermo last Fall on board an American naval vessel and inspected the harbor and the improvements required. The improvements include dredging and the building of sea walls and moles. Mr. MacArthur is to return immediately to New York to make arrangements for the commencement of the work.

cattle to the finish look like a ghastly joke.

"This matter is the direct vital and immediate concern of New York City," said Senator Straus. "It affects the food supply. You cannot in fairness ask us to vote for this measure, which admittedly is full of jokers and imperfections, until there has been some further study of it. This committee held hearings in small localities up State, but New York City was neglected, although two-thirds of the dairy products from this State are consumed there. We should have the city's viewpoint on this bill. There should be public hearings in all the big cities before we go any further, but more especially in the unfortunate city which I represent, and which pays 90 per cent. of the money spent for the maintenance of the State Government."

Senator Straus, who was the lone Democratic representative from the City of New York on the Farris Committee, pleaded to no avail. He told the Senate that while the committee was at work, in order to give that body the benefit of their advice with regard to the consumers' end of the problems before that body, he had prevailed on some prominent lawyers who understood the problems and were familiar with agriculture to volunteer their services. These, the Senator said, had been refused.

Senator Lusk and Senators Ferris and Knight said there would be ample time to consider amendments like those suggested by Senator Straus after the reodification and reorganization bills had been passed.

The roll cannot be called on the advancement of bills in the Senate, but a rising vote was taken which stood 21 to 8 in favor of advancing the Ferris bills. Senator Meyer was the only New York City man voting with the farm bloc.

POPE IS GREETED BY GREEK CHURCH

Constantinople Body Breaks Tradition of 1,000 Years in Calling on Apostolic Delegate.

PIUS MEETS TOWN'S PEOPLE

Says Mass and Addresses Citizens of Desio, Promising That His Memory Will Always Be There.

ROME, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—For the first time in exactly 1,000 years representatives of the Greek Orthodox Church in Constantinople have acknowledged a representative of the Roman Catholic Church. This information has been sent to Pope Pius by Mgr. Dolci, Apostolic Delegate in Turkey.

The Pontiff is said to have been much gratified to learn that a delegation from the Greek Ecumenical Patriarch, headed by the great Archdeacon, Mgr. Neofitos, called officially on the apostolic delegation and expressed condolences for the death of Pope Benedict and good wishes for the advent of Pius XI.

The recognition is considered an important step toward the reunion of the Orthodox Greek Church with the Catholic Church. It is believed to be due to efforts in this direction first made by Pope Leo XIII., which were continued by Pius X. and Benedict XV.

Pope Pius today celebrated mass in the Matilde Hall in the presence of a large number of citizens of the town of Desio, the Pontiff's birthplace. Those present included the Mayor, the Aldermen and City Councilors. After the mass the Pontiff gave the visitors holy communion, and later granted them an audience in the hall of the consistory, where he addressed them in affectionate terms.

Pius told his auditors that he would never forget his beloved birthplace, its valleys and its mountains; that his memory ever would be there. As he gave his hand to his former townspeople to be kissed he addressed a few words to each of them, recalling episodes of his youth or asking to be remembered to absent friends.

The brother, sister and nephew of the Pontiff were present.

Cardinal Lualdi, Archbishop of Palermo, in an interview published in the Corriere d'Italia, gives some interesting sidelights on the life of Pope Pius XI. while he was yet Cardinal Ratti. Cardinal Lualdi was born in Milan and is an old friend of Pius, who was a fellow student. They attended seminary together and Lualdi served the new Pope's first mass, on Christmas Day, 1870, in Rome.

The cornerstones in Pius's character, says the interview, are prayer and calm, and his whole life has been dominated by the rule of the Sacred Office, his breviary, meditation and the rosary.

He has a great capacity to feel and cultivate friendship, but with him duty is always first. His immense correspondence is methodically arranged, and is always attended to eventually.

Cardinal Lualdi is enthusiastic over Pius's Alpine ascensions and his strength and calmness as a mountain climber. The Pontiff's climbing costume he described as including high gaiters, reaching to his priest's knickerbockers, and a coat of military cut, but always with the usual clerical collar. He wore the berretta and never failed to carry his soutane (a cassock) in a little English knapsack.

Lualdi recalled climbing in August, 1883, with Pius to the Alpine village of Macugnaga, on the Italo-Swiss frontier, where they celebrated a solemn function for the lonely mountaineers at an altitude of 4,500 feet.

SAYS 'TRUTH SERUM' WORKED ON CONVICTS

Dallas District Attorney Tests Accused Men After Injections of Scopolamin.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, Feb. 14.—"Truth Serum" are said to have proved its power to paralyze a criminal's will to lie in an experiment attempted at the county jail yesterday.

Hypodermic doses of scopolamin were given to Ed Smith, negro, charged with murder, and W. S. Scrivner, convicted of Post Office robbery. Murry Hughes, District Attorney, said later that he would probably dismiss murder charges against Smith as a result of the experiment. Scrivner is under an appealed sentence in the Federal District Court, so he was asked no questions concerning the Post Office robbery of which he was convicted, but gave officials information concerning other "jobs."

"Questions asked the negro were answered truthfully, as far as we know," said Mr. Hughes. "Test questions were included, answers to which we knew. These questions were interspersed with questions intended to prove the guilt or innocence of Smith."

Doctors who examined the patients said that they would come out of their anesthesia with no ill-effects.

BECK CITES CRIME GAIN.

Solicitor General Ascribes Increase to Federal Laws in Speech.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Startling figures on the crime situation in the United States were given tonight by James M. Beck, Solicitor General of the United States, in support of his contention that there has been a deterioration of character in the individual.

Speaking before the Industrial Club, he told how burglary insurance payments had jumped from $886,000 in 1914 to $10,000,000 in 1920; how criminal indictments in the Federal courts had increased from 10,000 to 70,000 in ten years and how there is a murder almost every day in Chicago and New York.

"This deterioration of character, this revolt against law and order," Mr. Beck said, "is primarily due to the increasing power of the Government, which tells us what we can drink and what we can do, thus diminishing individualism."

HARDING PLANS ALASKA TRIP

Hopes to Leave in July, He Tells a Marion Committee.

MARION, Ohio, Feb. 14.—President Harding may return in June to his home here for the first time since his inauguration to attend the Marion centennial celebration, it was announced tonight by James A. Knapp, Chairman of the committee. The centennial dates have been set tentatively as June 11 to 14. In a letter to Mr. Knapp the President said:

"I think it reasonable to assume if the celebration is held in June I can be in attendance. If a later time is fixed I think my participation quite unlikely because I am hoping to successfully work out plans to leave very early in July for a trip to the Pacific Coast and Alaska."

BLAZE DAMAGES CHURCH.

Priest and Altar Boys Save Vestments From Fire in St. Paul's, Brooklyn.

A fire of mysterious origin did $5,000 damage last night to the basement and vestry of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church at Court and Congress Streets, Brooklyn. The church is one of the oldest Catholic edifices in Brooklyn.

Workmen yesterday were making repairs to the church, which were to cost $50,000, when smoke was seen coming through a basement window. An alarm was turned in and Msgr. Michael G. Flannery, the pastor, and the Rev. Thomas Sharkey, a curate, were notified.

BLAMES PRISONER FOR HIS OWN DEATH

Detective on Trial for Murder Says Victim Seized Pistol, Inflicting Wound.

FIRST DENIED SHOOTING

Picked Out of Line-Up by Dead Man's Companion and Accused of Crime.

Detective Sergeant Jeremiah Haggerty, on trial before Judge Louis D. Gibbs and a jury in the Bronx Court for the murder of Joseph Lazaro, a barber, on the night of Aug. 13, took the stand in his own defense at the continuation of the trial yesterday.

Under examination by William J. Fallon, his counsel, he said that Lazaro attempted to grab his pistol, causing it to be discharged. On cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney A. Cohn, the defendant said that Lazaro and his friend, Joseph Pellosollo, were "stubborn," and halted several times after he had told them they were under arrest. He denied Pellosollo's statement that he offered to free them for $500. It was Lazaro, Haggerty said, who mentioned a $300 bribe.

Before Haggerty took the stand detectives called as witnesses said that the accused had escaped from the Forty-ninth Precinct Station, where he was being questioned about the shooting, two days after it took place. Following a warning, he returned and was accused of the crime.

Haggerty was said to have denied all knowledge of the shooting, but he was picked from a line-up of ten men as Lazaro's slayer by Pellosollo.

Haggerty said that when he first saw the men on the elevated station at Gun Hill Road, about fifteen minutes before the shooting, he watched them, because "it had been rumored there was a still in the neighborhood," and he believed they could lead him to it.

He told them he was a police officer, he testified, and not a revenue officer as Pellosollo had testified, when making the arrest. After going a short distance, he said, he "believed there would be trouble because they were stubborn" and shot at the ground and called for help. No assistance came so he continued walking with them. It was then the men suggested buying their freedom for $500, he said.

The nearest station house was at 229th Street and White Plains Avenue, he admitted, but, bent upon finding the still, he walked with the men in 212th Street in the direction of Barnes Avenue. Lazaro, who was carrying a can of wine, stopped and placed it on the ground.

"We halted and I was afraid Lazaro was going to do something to me," he said. "I aimed my gun at him. He put out his arm and clutched at my right hand, which was holding the gun. My fingers tightened and the gun exploded. Lazaro ran and I did not know I had shot him. I followed him but he disappeared.

"Then I thought of Pellosollo and the wine and I ran back to the scene, but both were gone. I did not know I had shot Lazaro and did not tell Captain Wines I had two prisoners and allowed them to escape because this is a violation of the police rule and I knew I would be demoted."

He weighed 170 pounds last August, he said, and Lazaro weighed 115 pounds. The case is expected to go to the jury late this afternoon.

porter for THE TIMES, to whom she gave an interview in the Hotel St. Regis, where she is staying. Through a personal representative, she said that her interpretation of Salomé was such that it won the approval of the people of Stockholm, where she gave it successfully despite the fact that it had been prohibited in the Swedish city. She also has sung the rôle many times in Vienna.

"It is too late to make arrangements for singing 'Salome' this season," said Mme. Jeritza. "The program for next season will be made up in May, and if they decide to produce 'Salome' and ask me to sing it, I shall be very glad to do so. It is for the management of the company to decide. As yet I have not been asked, and I would not request to sing the rôle."

Mme. Jeritza, who often sang Salome abroad, was asked if she liked the rôle.

"Of course," she replied, "for I do not sing a rôle unless I like it."

In reply to a request that she describe her conception of the part, Mme. Jeritza said: "My interpretation of Salome is of a young, innocent girl, with a childish mind. She has been badly brought up and educated, and has been allowed to have everything she desires. So her, with her environment and history, to want the head of John the Baptist is like another girl wanting a doll. She simply does not realize the enormity and horror of what she does. There is nothing sensuous or immoral about it. The end of the opera is moral, for she is punished for her wickedness."

"I only hope that New York will be saved from the indignity to public taste and morals of a production of 'Salome' at the Metropolitan Opera House," said Dr. Straton. "The statement that a different, non-sensual version would be given, sounds like part of the usual plea of excusing all sorts of positive indecency on the ground that it is artistic. I think that to take a Biblical theme and put it on the stage under the present conditions of stage life and stage people is in itself an abomination."

Saying that a singer of the Chicago Opera Company and his companion had been put out of a hotel, and that his last singers attended him, Dr. Straton went on: "The whole theatrical field, including the opera, needs a thorough housecleaning. Conditions are deplorable in opera, which needs to be linked up to educational movements rather than commercials. I have never thought highly of modern grand opera because of its commercial aspect. The prices are so high that only the rich can attend and opera is monopolized by the fashionable circles. Opera is distinctly exotic and un-American, in contrast to painting and sculpture, with free museums, where the poor can go. The same thing is true of opera as of the theatre, and the opera needs just as much attention as the theatre."

Canon William Sheafe Chase of Brooklyn, a leading spirit of the International Reform Bureau, said that any attempt to revive "Salome" in the Metropolitan should be stopped by the city authorities.

"I think the Commissioner of Licenses should exercise his power and forbid it being shown," he said. "I do not know that I would take any action myself, although I might request that the Commissioner exercise his power. That would be the most effective way."

Although Mary Garden and the Chicago Opera Company were compelled by popular protest to refrain from producing "Salome" in Chicago, they have produced it twice in the Manhattan Opera House this season. Both productions were very successful and did not arouse protest.

MORE ARRESTS MADE IN CHICAGO SWINDLE

Bischoff's Get - Rich - Quick Agents Charged With Running Confidence Game.

MUCH STOCK IS MISSING

Creditors' Search for Assets Uncovers $2,000 in Gold Coin in One Bank.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Police and Government officials made considerable headway today in clearing up the tangled affairs of Raymond T. Bischoff and Leslie Harrington, the heads of two get-rich-quick concerns, charged with having mulcted stock yard residents of millions of dollars.

Warrants charging a confidence game and the obtaining of money under false pretenses were issued for Bischoff, for his brother-in-law, E. J. Geer, and for Joseph Florek, said to be one of his stock peddlers.

Detectives again raided the office of Leslie Harrington at 20 East Jackson Boulevard, and swept it bare of records, books and papers. Two hundred and fifty thousand shares of stock in the United States' Novaculite Company and $500 worth of Government stamps were seized. Search for Harrington himself turned to Philadelphia, whither he is believed to have gone.

While Judge Joseph B. David was refusing to issue writs of habeas corpus for the three Harrington agents already under arrest, J. Yuskenas, a fourth Harrington field agent, was locked up.

Judge Landis appointed the Central Trust Company receiver for the Western Land Operators Company, 127 North Dearborn Street, said to be one of Harrington's enterprises, and in connection with which two men already are in custody.

While all these things were happening attorneys for the creditors and the Central Trust Company were digging away in the hope of finding a definite trace of the assets of Bischoff & Company at an all-day hearing before Referee Sidney C. Eastman. In the afternoon attorneys for the Receiver accompanied Mrs. Frank O. Davis, Bischoff's mother, on a tour to various banks where she held safety deposit boxes in the hope of finding some of the stock of the Y. Oil and Gas Co., the only securities in his possession believed to be of any value.

Bischoff has admitted that his holdings of 5,010,000 shares had dwindled to 70,000 shares, now quoted at 22 cents, but even these the receivers so far have failed to find. The only find of any consequence was $2,000 in gold coin, discovered in a lock box in the First National Bank, possession of which neither Mrs. Davis nor her daughter, Mrs. Normal Catherine Geer, admitted on the witness stand. Mrs. Davis gave the explanation that she had forgotten about his money, half of which, she said, belonged to her and half to her daughter.

The high lights of the hearing before Referee Eastman came when Bischoff himself again took the stand in the afternoon and when Geer, his brother-in-law, attempted to explain his duties as Assistant General Manager of the Bischoff business. He was questioned by Attorney James Rosenthal, representing the Central Trust Company, as to how Bischoff's stepfather, Frank O. Davis, who is blind, managed to perform the duties of general manager. He admitted that Davis, although he could not see to read, took charge of all the books and checked all cash in and out.

Geer said Bischoff started him in at $30 a week and raised his salary last July to $4,800 a year. "About a month ago Bischoff decided to reorganize the company and asked all the customers if they would go in with him," he said. "He asked them if they were willing to turn in their notes for stock in the R. J. Bischoff Company. About 300 notes were turned in and they were given receipts for stock."

"What was the capitalization of the R. J. Bischoff Company?"

"Then if Bischoff could have collected all these $4,500,000 worth of notes and converted them into stock there would have been a surplus of $500,000?"

"Yes."

The witness said that during the last month the notes surrendered in exchange for receipts for stock amount to about $250,000. Thirty-nine dollars in actual cash, he said, also had been contributed to make the amount "come out even."

Bischoff, recalled to the stand, declared he was in the midst of negotiating a very important deal which would have netted the company "hundreds of thousands of dollars" when the receiver was appointed. This, he said, had made the completion of the deal impossible. He could not reveal its nature, because he would be divulging the confidence of some men of "great wealth" in Chicago and New York. "some really big men." He would have to get permission from these men before he could even whisper it in the ear of the attorney for the receiver.

CLERK STOLE $120,000; LOST IT IN WALL STREET

Bank Employe Confesses to Taking Author's Bonds and Tells of Other Thefts.

Judge Rosalsky, in General Sessions yesterday, remanded John H. Grassman, 34, of 630 Seventy-fifth Street, Brooklyn, to the Tombs for sentence next Tuesday on an indictment charging him with the theft of two bonds, valued at $1,800, from the office of the National City Company at 514 Fifth Avenue in 1919. The bonds had been entrusted to the company by George Kibbe Turner, the author, and when Grassman was called for trial yesterday he not only pleaded guilty, but told Judge Rosalsky that while he was employed by the National City Company he stole approximately $120,000 worth of bonds.

He obtained Mr. Turner's bonds by telling Harry F. Mayer, manager for the National City Company, that the author had requested him to get them for him. He said that he had endeavored to make restitution for his thefts, but found he was unable to do so.

"Now I am here to take my medicine," he added. "I speculated in Wall Street and lost. I pledged the securities I am charged with stealing with Morgan, Livermore & Co., 71 Broadway, turning them in as collateral on Nov. 24, 1919, against a debit balance of $20,000."

What you should know about a Fountain Pen

A FOUNTAIN PEN is nothing more or less than a writing instrument which carries its own supply of ink. It is virtually a tube containing ink, with a pen point inserted in one end of it.

The difference in efficiency between one make of fountain pen and another lies in how closely they approach perfection in controlling automatically the flow of ink from the tube to the pen point during the act of writing.

Thirty-eight years ago, Mr. L. E. Waterman invented Waterman's Ideal Fountain Pen. It was the first fountain pen with a device that in scientific conception and practical application automatically controlled the flow of ink from the barrel to the point of the pen. It did this with a degree of perfection never before known and which, to the present moment, has never been equalled.

This device is the famous Waterman spoon feed and it can be found only in

A startling new discovery about the cause of constipation

The quotation is taken from an important paper on the treatment of constipation by a well-known physician

DID it ever occur to you that the cathartic you take to relieve constipation, may be the cause of your trouble?

Yet when a number of doctors were discussing this almost universal complaint one of them said: "Probably one of the most frequent causes of constipation is the indiscriminate use of cathartics." For years physicians have tried to persuade people to give up laxatives and to eat corrective foods instead.

It is now known that Fleischmann's Yeast is a food which makes the use of cathartics unnecessary. Because of its freshness it helps the intestines eliminate waste matter.

People who are adding Fleischmann's Yeast to their daily diet find that their body functions are kept normal and regular. Eat 2 or 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast before or between meals every day. Place a standing order with your grocer. He will deliver Fleischmann's Yeast fresh daily.

HAMILTON FARMS MAKES CLEAN SWEEP

Brady Kennels Carry Off All Major Honors in Shepherd Class at Dog Show.

IMPORTED AIREDALE LOSES

Boxwood Barkentine of U. S. Defeats Warland Ditto of England for Best of Breed.

With unabated enthusiasm among the spectators, the second session of the annual Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show went its merry way yesterday at Madison Square Garden. The crowd was not as dense as on the first day, but it seemed more discerning and appreciative, carefully scanning the winners of the day before or the morning judging, in the hope of being the first to select the entry that will be crowned the monarch of dogdom for 1922. The "Best of Breed" at the Westminster show is a shining feather in the cap of any owner, exhibitor or breeder, but the "Best in Show" is the highest honor that American field for the blooded aristocrats of the dog world.

Discussion was rife on this topic yesterday, but the amateur and professional experts could not even agree on the type of dog that would be selected, much less narrow the matter down to a few individual animals. The debate was bitter, but not at all brief. Nothing triumphs quoted in the wonderful Shepherd class, the Wire-haired terrier class and the Airedale division encouraged the supporters of these breeds to proclaim loudly their respective merits. But the show went on just the same.

The judges were busy from morning until long after nightfall, marking up for good condition and down for under weights, scanning noses, eyes, jaws, necks, chests, legs, backs, feet, backs, hindquarters, tails and the other myriad details that go to make up the 100-point total for the perfect specimen of the canine tribe. In the case of the 178 Shepherds, the lot of the judges—G. Muss-Arnolt—was not to be envied. He had them in all ages, weights, colors, shapes and previous conditions of servitude.

Dog Gives Spectator.

Some were as gentle as lambkins and others were for raising the roof of the Garden without preliminary debate. At least one specimen of this breed is alleged to have expressed his appreciation of a passer-by by removing a section of the gentleman's arm. They were mansize enough in the ring, however, and no disappointed competitor even so much as snarled at Judge Muss-Arnolt when he awarded the highest honors in this class to the Hamilton Farm Kennels, owned by James Cox Brady, and located at Gladstone, N. J.

It was more than a remarkable triumph for the Brady entry. It was a double-barreled victory. In this class of 178 dogs, valued conservatively at $100,000, the Hamilton Farms Kennel won the best of both sexes. Erick von Graffenworth, a magnificent animal in top form and wonderful coat, with great limbs and exceptional vitality, scored the first point for the Hamilton Farms Kennel by taking the Winners Dogs award. But the bigger prize was still to come. A keenly-fought Anal Can Humbold Park, which only swept everything before her in the female sex, but when she went on the stand for the "Best of Breed," she defeated even Erick Von Graffenworth himself.

"A new broom sweeps clean" is an old adage that was once more proved yesterday, as the Hamilton Farms Kennel did not even pause at these successes. James Cox Brady was showing his dogs for the first time, and in order that there might be no misunderstanding about their merits, after taking best in both male and female, he calmly reached out and gathered in the prizes for brace and team. It was a clean sweep in a great field, and the awards were with unanimous approval from the spectators.

While G. Muss-Arnolt was handling this great convention of shepherds, Judge Turner P. Breese was having a much easier time in several classes at least. At the call to the ring, big, black, curly-haired Jake, the "hero" dog of the show, ambled up from his solitary corner in the basement and solemnly went through his paces. He was unanimously elected novice winner, open dog, winners dog, best of both sexes and best of breed. That formality completed, Jake retired to his dungeon and wagged tail at the advances of the children who came to see the big dog that was largely to blame for the loss of little lives in his off hours.

Why So Baleful?

Why should Yankee Bligh, the wrinkled and melancholy bloodhound owned by Norwin Trent Harris, go through the day with a face as long and mournful as if he had just been sold "down the river" to Simon Legree? He also spoiled everything before him in his breed. It is true that he was the sole representative of this mighty race at the show, and that might have influenced Judge Breese in his decision, but Yankee Bligh has the blue ribbon of his class at the great Westminster Show to adorn the his kennel for the coming season.

There was one spectacle at the show that almost brought tears to the eyes of old-time fanciers—the solitary pug, Morton Boy, judged by Mrs. M. Thorpe. Naturally it took first, second and third prizes in all classes for that breed, but that was inside the ropes. The question was, "What has become of the good old pug that sat so comfortably by armchair and fire?" There was a funeral gathering at the cage of this last representative of the vanishing variety, and many passers were interested in solemn delight.

Turning to more exciting topics, the Welwyn Miss Springtime from the Welwyn Kennels scored a knockout blow in the novice bitch class, defeating

BAKER WITHDRAWS 'TAMPERING' CHARGE

NO SPECIAL PLAYER PRIZE

National League, at Schedule Meeting, Against Individual Award—Behind Landis on Draft.

The bomb which President William F. Baker of the Phillies was expected to toss into the annual schedule meeting of the National League yesterday turned out to be only a dud. After more than four hours of what those on the outside anxiously conceived to be the bitterest wrangling, the doors of the assembly room in the Waldorf opened, the magnates streamed forth, and out came Baker and President Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn, arm in arm. Sam Breadon, the President of the St. Louis Cardinals, also involved in Baker's tampering charges, lurked in the background with a smile of peace and goodwill toward all. Thus ended the National League's private "war" over the question of tampering.

The explanation of this happy tableau was furnished later by President John A. Heydler. The head of the National League said that Baker, after hearing explanations by Presidents Ebbets and Breadon, had decided not to press his charges that the Brooklyn and St. Louis managers had approached Arthur Fletcher in an improper manner. Fletcher, who was traded to the Phillies from the Giants had retired from active service last Spring, but later in the Summer and this Winter he received "feelers" from Manager Wilbert Robinson of Brooklyn and Branch Rickey, leader of the Cardinals. It was over these episodes that President Baker became incensed and on which he based his charges of "tampering" against the Dodgers and the Cardinals.

Although the Philadelphia President expressed himself as satisfied with the explanations of Ebbets and Breadon, the league club owners upheld him in his action yesterday. After hearing the situation discussed from all angles, the league went on record as stating that Baker had been within his right in preferring the charges, and had been entitled to some explanation from the St. Louis and Brooklyn clubs.

No Special Prize for Players.

Other developments at the league meeting were these:

The usual schedule of 154 games was ratified.

The proposed establishment of a prize, or emblem, for the most valuable player in the league each year was voted down.

A long discussion of the draft question was held, and the club owners took no action beyond a pledge to support Judge Landis in whatever steps he may take to restore the selective system.

The staff of umpires, containing the names of two new arbiters, was announced for the 1922 season.

The National League's action on the draft question went beyond that taken by the American last week in Washington, and it practically gives Commissioner Landis carte blanche in his efforts to settle the draft tangle. Without condemning the minor leagues which have refused the principle of selection, or suggesting a baseball "war" over the question, the Heydler circuit, at the same time, opens the door for future negotiations. Its resolution yesterday shows that the league owners have not yet given up hope that the problem will be settled in time.

"Every action of Judge Landis in regard to the draft," the resolution says, "is endorsed by the National League. Furthermore, he is assured of the support of the league in whatever future steps he may take in connection with the restoration of the selective system."

By this move the question is automatically passed along to Judge Landis and the other members of the Advisory Council. If the High Commissioner of baseball should decide on a war, the National League would follow him. If he should decide on a boycott of the recalcitrant minors, he would have the support of the older organization. If the Advisory Council should decide to "outlaw" the minor leagues in question, the National, if bound by its own resolution, would be behind the decision. All this, according to baseball men in the Waldorf yesterday, is contained in the phrase, "Whatever future steps" the Commissioner may take.

Merely Final Echo.

This fiat declaration, however, was believed to be nothing more than the final echo of the draft controversy. The International League has rejected, the American and National approved, the principle of selection, all within the last week, and the question will now be passed along to Commissioner Landis. Unless the Judge should call for a joint meeting of the major leagues, no further developments are looked for until the Winter meetings.

Manager Irving Wilhelm of the Phillies was drawn into the tampering altercation before the magnates had settled the affair to their own satisfaction. Wilhelm was questioned by the owners, and he denied that he had told Manager Wilbert Robinson of the Dodgers that it would be all right for him (Robinson) to write a letter to Fletcher. President Breadon of the Cardinals offered as his defense the fact that Baker had told him in mid-Summer that Fletcher was of no use to the Phillies and that the former Giant might be valuable to the Cardinals. Nothing was done about the matter then, but later in the Fall, and also this Winter, Branch Rickey of the Cardinals got into touch with Fletcher on the theory that Baker's earlier permission was still valid.

After this misunderstanding had been thoroughly aired Baker withdrew his allegations. The club owners, however, went on record as enjoining all clubs, their agents and managers, from dealing in any way with players of other clubs. Each club, it was stated, accepted this resolution as a pledge, and promised to be bound by it in the future. On this basis the controversy came to a peaceful end.

The league declined to accept the proposal that a prize be established for the most valuable player, taking the attitude that such an emblem would encourage individual playing and not be conducive to team work. This decision was in direct opposition to that of the American League, which voted at its recent meeting to hang up a $1,000 prize for the greatest star of each season.

Newark Lease Discussed.

The question of continuing the lease to the Newark club of the ball park at Harrison, N. J., owned jointly by the National and American Leagues, was discussed, with this result: that the International League club be informed that the lease would be continued if the Newark officials agree to take the park for a four-year term, or the unfinished part of the major leagues' lease. President Heydler denied that such action was in retaliation for the refusal of the International to embrace the draft. He maintained that it was only just to ask the Newark club to assume the obligations of the lease if they wished to use the ball park.

The meeting was one of the quietest in recent years, both inside and outside the council doors. Hardly a ripple disturbed the deliberations of the magnates, despite the fact that the session lasted from 2:30 o'clock to nearly 7; and in the lobby outside there was a somnolent air that was soothing if not exciting. Pat Moran of the Cincinnati Reds was the only one seen in the lobby, and Pat quickly found great difficulty in talking trades with himself. His reported deals by various clubs, among them Boston, Chicago and Pittsburgh, vanished into the empty air, and not a dicker was observed by the scouts in the lobby.

Barney Dreyfuss, the Pittsburgh President, was the first to put the quietus on the trade rumors. The Pirates' head had been pictured as pulling at the bit in his eagerness to get rid of Catcher Walter Schmidt, outfielders Max Carey and George Whitted, and infielder Clyde Barnhart. But Dreyfuss said "tut, tut," to all reports of trouble with Schmidt and said that he had nothing but the best of feelings toward the outspoken catcher. The other players were not even mentioned in the same breath as trades.

Admission Not to Be Less.

There is no prospect of admission prices being reduced this year, the magnates decided after consideration of the question. On the contrary, it was said, the total price will be higher if the proposed amusement tax in connection with the Soldier Bonus bill is adopted. These taxes include a 10 per cent. increase in the impost on all amusement tickets, and the National League has been informed officially that this will apply to baseball. In this case the fan will pay a tax of 20 per cent. on his baseball ticket instead of the usual 10.

The league took no action on this matter, but President Heydler intimated that, as a matter of course, both major circuits would protest against and oppose the imposition of such a tax. It was predicted that representatives of organized baseball will appeal to Congress to kill this provision for raising revenue for the Bonus bill, pointing out that the sentiment among baseball fans is now for a revision downward instead of upward.

Ratification of the schedule was a mere formality, since the playing dates had already been drafted by President Heydler and Barney Dreyfuss in conjunction with a committee from the American League. An interesting sidelight in connection with the schedule is the fact that the eight clubs will travel a total of 89,525 miles during the season. Statisticians who had nothing else to do have discovered that the Pirates will cover the most ground—13,754 miles—and that the Giants will travel the minimum—9,622 miles. Some took this to indicate tampering by the Giants with the schedule makers.

HEYDLER ANNOUNCES STAFF OF ARBITERS

Two New Men, Pfirman and Sentell, Will Officiate in the National League.

Two brand new umpires will call balls and strikes as they see them on the National League circuit this season. The complete list, as announced yesterday by President John A. Heydler after the schedule meeting, shows that Charles Pfirman and Paul Sentell have been added to the staff of arbiters, which consists, in addition of Robert D. Emslie, Henry O'Day, William J. Klem, Charles Rigler, Ernest C. Quigley, Barry McCormick, Charles Moran and Robert Hart, all present and accounted for last Summer.

Only Bill Brennan of the 1921 staff is missing from this year's complement. He has been released to the Southern League, from which organization he came last Spring for another trial with the majors. His place as a regular umpire will be taken by either Pfirman or Sentell, with the other new arbiter doing relief duty around the circuit. In fact, Heydler will have two extra umpires and will be able to assign the two new men to duty with other and experienced umpires, three of the arbiters working in one game.

HOYT AND YANKS AGREE ON TERMS

Pitcher Is Expected to Sign Contract Today—Salary Reported to Be $10,000.

Waite Hoyt, whose pitching in the 1921 world's series made old-timers hark back to the days of Christy Mathewson, came to terms with the Yankees yesterday after a more or less protracted career as a hold-out. At least, the youthful flinger paid a call at the local American League offices, and was in a lengthy conference with Business Manager Ed Barrow, after which the latter admitted that Hoyt and the club had agreed to the same figure.

Gossip, which seemed to be well established, placed this figure at $10,000, or double what Hoyt is supposed to have received last season. This disposed of the report, credited to Hoyt himself, that he was the victim of a $200 decrease, and it also put to rout the rumor that Hoyt's demands were for a $15,000 contract.

According to Barrow, the pitcher left his contract at his home in Flatbush. But will return to local headquarters today to put his signature at the bottom of the document. If Hoyt does not follow in the footsteps of Mike McNally, who failed to appear last Saturday to perform the same feat, he will be completely signed and take his place shoulder to shoulder with Elmer Miller, Frank Baker and Chick Fewster, the regulars who have been announced thus far as having signed.

The case of McNally, who disappeared in a manner that would have put Joe Dugan to shame, has apparently degenerated into that of a plain hold-out. The Scranton infielder was in this city on Friday and came to the Yankee offices to announce that he would sign on Saturday. Since then he has dropped out of sight. Other Yanks unannounced as contract signers are Babe Ruth, Bob Meusel, Everett Scott, Aaron Ward, Wally Pipp, Carl Mays, Sam Jones, Joe Bush, Bob Shawkey and Wally Schang.

Since the departure of John McGraw for Havana the Giants have failed to announce the receipt of a contract from a singular regular. The unsigned list contains such names as Dave Bancroft, Irish Meusel, George Kelly, Frank Snyder, Earl Smith, Johnny Rawlings, Phil Douglas and Jess Barnes.

Hoyt returned yesterday from his honeymoon. He said that he lost weight while on the stage but had regained all of it since then. He now weighs about the same as at the end of the world's series.

The Yankees have scheduled an exhibition game with New Haven on April 16. This is an open date between the series at Washington and Boston, and the Hugmen will stop off at the Connecticut city on the way to Boston.

Hy Myers, one of the Brooklyn squad of holdouts, surrendered yesterday and signed a 1922 contract. In the day's mail was also a signed contract from Charles W. Hockett, a free agent who played on clubs around Seattle, Wash. He is a southpaw pitcher, 19 years old, and 6 feet 2 inches in height.

GIANTS OPEN HERE AGAINST THE ROBINS

McGrawmen Draw 13 Saturday and as Many Sunday Dates at Home.

The National League schedule, released for publication yesterday following the meetings in the Waldorf-Astoria, discloses that the Giants will fare better than the Yankees this year in the matter of Saturday and Sunday games at the Polo Grounds. The McGraw team receives thirteen Saturday dates and a similar number of Sunday engagements, which is one Saturday and one Sunday more than the American League club.

To counterbalance this, the Yankees will play at the Polo Grounds on two of the three holidays. The Giants get only one, July 4, with the Brooklyn Robins. On Memorial Day they will be at Philadelphia and on Labor Day at Boston.

One rather staggering fact for the Giants is that eight of the first twelve games will be with the Dodgers. The Flatbush troupe will open the season here on April 12, playing a four-game series. From April 16 to 19 the McGravians will be at home with the Braves, but following this engagement the Brooklyn tilts will be resumed to the death, the Giants helping to open the season at Ebbets Field on April 20 and continuing on the 21st, 22d and 21d. The local team then switches to Philadelphia and Boston for four-game series, after which the first Western invasion of the Polo Grounds will be on in full blast. St. Louis will come first, with Chicago, Pittsburgh and Cincinnati following in that order.

The opening games on April 12 will be as follows: Brooklyn at New York, Boston at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh at St. Louis, Chicago at Cincinnati.

HERZOG AFTER I. L. CLUB.

Former Giant Infielder Has Made Offer for Jersey City Team.

Buck Herzog, at one time a star infielder of John McGraw's Giants, and L. C. Page, former part owner of the Boston Braves, made an offer yesterday for the franchise of the Jersey City club of the International League. Herzog said that Owner) Joseph Moran of the Skeeters had the offer under consideration. Moran is understood to have asked $90,000 for the franchise, which has been on the market since the close of the season last Fall.

Page owned part of the Boston National League club in 1911 and 1912, selling out later with his partners to James Gaffney, who owned the club when the Braves won the pennant in 1914. He is a member of the Page Publishing Company of Boston.

If Herzog gets the franchise he will become playing manager.

HYDE WINS OPENING MATCH IN TOURNEY

Champion Defeats Riley in First Day's Play for National Squash Tennis Title.

All of the first-round matches were cleared away yesterday afternoon in the first day's play at the Harvard Club in the squash tennis tournament for the national individual championship. Evidently squash tennis players are not immune from the general influence of the influenza germ. At any rate, there were five defaults in the eleven matches which constituted the opening round. Especially unfortunate was the enforced withdrawal of Augusta J. Cordier of the Yale Club, a former champion and the No. 3 player of a year ago, who was regarded as one of the foremost contenders. Cordier has been playing in his best form of late, but has now been forced to yield to an attack of tonsilitis.

The present champion, Filmore Van S. Hyde of the Harvard Club, won his opening match handily from Armin W. Riley of the Princeton Club, a No. 10 player of a year ago. The scores were 15—9, 15—2. Hyde had the match well in hand at all times, despite the fact that, especially in the first game, Riley did much forceful hitting and made many good recoveries. Hyde always had plenty of power in reserve. He will meet his clubmate, Ralph G. Coburn, in the second round today, the latter having obtained an impressive victory over Felix Jenkins of the D. K. E. Club in straight games. Cordier's enforced default makes smoother the champion's pathway to the semifinals. In the due course of events Hyde and Cordier would have met in the round before the semifinals.

Keeps Putnam Busy.

The closest and most stirring contest of yesterday was that between Edward W. Putnam of the Columbia Club and Otis L. Guernsey, Yale Club. Putnam won by scores of 13—18, 15—12, 15—10. The Columbia man's finished court tactics and excellent position play figured importantly in his victory, but Guernsey covered court so industriously and hit with such power as to keep the result in the balance to the very end.

Anderson Dana of the Harvard Club, one of the most expert racquet-wielders in the game and a veteran of many tournaments during which he has approached closely to the highest national honors, was the victor over Donald Mackay of the Yale Club in straight games, 15—7, 18—13. Dana outmaneuvered Mackay readily enough in the opener, but had to work harder for the second game, which Mackay managed to get for extra points. W. Prentice Sanger was another Harvard Club topnotcher to come through with a victory. He defeated I. H. Cornell, Columbia Club, in straight games. C. J. MacGuire of the Yale Club gained a well-earned decision over his clubmate, H. R. Stern, also in straight games.

Favorite to Play Today.

Jay Gould of the Columbia Club, one of the favorites for the title, will make his first appearance this afternoon. He drew a first-round bye and will meet G. L. Smith of the Yale Club in the second round. In the other half of the draw Thomas R. Coward of the Yale Club, a probable finalist, who also drew a bye, will meet Basil Harris of the Princeton Club in his opening match. One of today's closest battles should be that between Livingston Piatt of the Yale Club and John Taylor of the Princeton Club. Other stars who will get into action today for the first time are John W. Appel Jr., Harvard Club; R. Earl Fink, Crescent A. C.; C. M. Bull Jr., Crescent, who will oppose Carroll T. Cooney of the Yale Club; Douglas Bomeisler, Yale Club, and F. S. Whitlock, Harvard Club.

The summaries:

National Championship, First Round—Anderson Dana, Harvard Club, defeated Donald Mackay, Yale Club, 15—7, 18—13; G. B. Abbet, Harvard Club, won from C. W. Dingee, Crescent A. C., by default; Fisher Goodhue, Yale Club, won from R. H. Meeks, Princeton Club, by default; W. Prentice Sanger, Harvard Club, defeated I. H. Cornell, Columbia Club, 18—3, 15—8; David C. Baker, Yale Club, won from Kenneth O'Brien, Yale Club, by default; Filmore Van S. Hyde, Harvard Club, defeated Armin W. Riley, Princeton Club, 15—9, 15—2; Ralph G. Coburn, Harvard Club, defeated Felix Jenkins, D. K. E. Club, 15—10, 15—8; Edward W. Putnam, Columbia Club, defeated Otis L. Guernsey, Yale Club, 13—18, 15—12, 15—10; C. J. MacGuire, Yale Club, defeated H. R. Stern, Yale Club, 15—2, 15—12; George K. Walker Jr., Princeton Club, won from Augusta J. Cordier, Yale Club, by default; Harold R. Mixsell, Princeton Club, by default.

Second Round—C. F. Fuller, Harvard Club, defeated Willis Putnam, Columbia Club, 15—13, 15—7; H. R. Mixsell, Princeton Club, defeated G. A. Walker Jr., Princeton Club, 15—3, 15—11.

CRIMSON STARTS DRILL.

Harvard Battery Candidates Unlimber in Soldiers Field Cage.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 14.—Coach Jack Slattery of the Harvard varsity ball team started workouts for the Crimson battery candidates in the Soldiers' Field cage this afternoon, a score of ambitious boys, most of them without varsity experience, being on hand for the first drill.

Eddie Goode, of last year's team, and Jerry Murphy, the first string catcher in 1922, were the only men who have played in any important games, but Gehrke, of last year's freshmen, and Hill, also of the 1921 yearlings, shape up well for the box; and Larrabee, last season's freshman catcher, together wit season's freshman catcher, together with Keegan of the second team, stand out among the catchers.

FIFTY OUT FOR BASEBALL.

Six Letter Men Among Baseball Candidates at Brown.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 14.—Six letter men were among the fifty Brown baseball candidates who reported for first practice here today. Immediate workouts in the cage were ordered by Coach Snell, who intends to devote all the early training to developing hitters and battery men. Twelve of the candidates are pitchers and eight catchers.

Templar Increases
March 6th, 1922

THE pendulum swings. The motoring public is awakening to the realization that its best interests are served only by cars priced to permit the proper maintenance of quality through uncompromised design, construction, inspection and service—and a fair profit to the maker.

Templar, believing that low cost per mile means more to the owner than low cost per car, follows the logical course and announces a coming increase in price. The present pre-war prices are too low.

Templar's value is visible in every sturdy line of the car, and most of all in its performance.

The most critical judges of motor car values admit that the new Templar combines the maximum of economy, dependability, comfort, speed and beauty, with convenient size—and at an equitable price.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—Percy N. Collins of the Illinois A. C. sprang another surprise at the International Amateur 18.2 Balkline Billiard Tournament here this afternoon when he defeated Ary Bos of Holland, champion of Europe, by 300 to 263. Collins led the foreign champion all the way and averaged 11 14-26 against Bos's 10 9-26.

To Collins also went the honor of making the high run of the afternoon, with a well-played 61 in the seventh inning. During this splendid exhibition the Westerner made only six drives and seemed to have the balls under perfect control. He missed on a long masse, close to the short rail.

Bos, who was playing his first match in America, had a high run of 47 in the twenty-fifth inning, which threw a scare into Collins, and advanced to within 24 points of tying the Westerner. During this rally, the European champion counted with remarkable speed. To many in the crowd of 1,000 it appeared that Bos was playing entirely too fast, but he is naturally a quick shot.

Bos did not get the better of the breaks against Collins, as five times the balls froze while he was shooting. He missed but one masse, but in open table playing he was excelled by Collins. The Illinois star did not play as fast as Bos, but made a number of remarkable shots and his position play was accurate.

The score by innings:

Collins—9 7 1 1 0 5 20 37 8 21 19 23 9 0 12 11 0 0 12 5 3 15 0 0 47 5. Total, 300; high run, 61; average, 11 14-26.

Bos—3 7 1 1 0 5 20 37 8 21 19 23 9 0 12 11 0 0 12 5 3 15 0 0 47 5. Total, 263; high run, 47; average, 10 9-26.

Referee—J. Herbert Levis, Chicago.

In a long drawn-out match which went thirty-five innings, Edgar T. Appleby of New York defeated J. E. Cope Morton of this city in tonight's game by 300 to 206.

Appleby played good, bad and indifferent billiards but featured it all with a high run of 91 in the thirteenth inning. This is the longest run of the tournament so far. Appleby went out with an unfinished run of 43. The New Yorker averaged 8 20-25, and Morton, the star of the Union League, averaged 5 21-25. Morton's best run was 25 which he made in the twenty-third inning. Morton injected considerable merriment into the match when he pulled out a rabbit's foot in the fourth inning and again in the eighth but the last time it brought him hard luck as he missed a long one cushion shot after stroking the lucky piece.

The Philadelphian goth the jump on the national champion and led him at the end of the twelfth inning, 75 to 61, but then followed Appleby's sensational run of 91 and there was very little to the game after that. During his long run, Appleby made all kinds of difficult shots, including a four-cushion around the table stroke that brought forth rounds of applause from the crowd of 1,200. Trying for his ninety-second point, Appleby missed a draw of about twelve inches, but left a hard shot for Morton.

In Morton's thirteenth inning he started to shoot with the wrong ball. Some one in the crowd noticed it and whispered almost aloud, and Morton realizing what he had done stepped away from the table. Appleby, showing real sportsmanship, insisted Morton take his inning, which the Philadelphian reluctantly did. He made a hurried shot, not trying for the point, but in some miraculous manner it skimmed around the table several times and finally counted.

The score by innings:

E. T. Appleby—0 0 16 16 1 2 10 1 0 0 0 15 91 17 0 4 0 28 13 10 15 0 0 1 7 0 0 1 13 1 1 0 12 43. Total—300. High run—91. Average—8 20-25.

J. E. C. Morton—13 4 1 3 2 0 8 20 10 0 0 1 13 0 0 1 0 0 3 5 8 8 21 25 1 0 4 0 5 4 20 0 1 2 16. Total—206. High run—25. Average—5 21-25.

Referee—J. Herbert Levis, Chicago.

Tomorrow afternoon Roudil will play Morton and in the evening Bos will meet Francis Appleby.

The score was 50 to 31, Northrup playing for 35 points while Frisch played for 50. A considerable part of Frisch's string was accumulated in bunches. He made three runs of 5 each and one of 4. Northrup made a 3 and two 2s. The game consumed 79 innings.

LANG, ON GOURMAND, WINS FEATURE RACE

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 14.—Threatening clouds overhung the Crescent City this afternoon, and late in the proceedings at the Fair Grounds race course they unloaded their burden of moisture with such vigor that the final event of the card was run off on a muddy track, although the going had been good for the first six contests.

In only one of the numbers on the program, the E. W. Magin Memorial Handicap, was there more than a pretense of class. The other six races were claiming affairs which enlisted the services generally only of platers and of the cheaper performers.

In the handicap, Lang bestrode his first winning mount since his return yesterday to action after his suspension. He had the mount on J. Cunniffe's Gourmand, and won a creditable victory with the bay son of Braxted. Gourmand came from behind in the stretch and drew away in the last seventy yards.

The sixth race was enlivened by a peculiar incident. Tody, a filly recently taken out of a claiming race by H. L. Crain, developed an attack of nervousness at the post because of the weaving about of Attorney and Lucky B., and made up her mind to go away from there without awaiting Starter Dade's signal. She shook off Gantner, her rider, and, jumping the fence, put off across-lots for her barn. She reached it, all right, and apparently figured that she had come into safe harbor. Her confidence was misplaced, however, for attendants promptly took her back to the barrier, where the field was waiting.

At this stage of the proceedings those among the onlookers who had backed her from 5 to 1 down to 9 to 2 would have sold their chances of cashing very cheaply. Nevertheless, the filly took an early lead when the contestants were finally sent away and held it all the route, standing a hard drive to beat Cimarron by a head. Brotherly Love ran into third place.

PRIBBLE RIDES FIVE WINNERS AT HAVANA

Jockey Has No Mount in the Second Race, but Sweeps Remainder of the Card.

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 14.—Jockey Pribble had a field day at Oriental Park today, making a clean sweep with his five mounts. He had no mount in the second race. Pribble, who is only an apprentice rider under contract to E. E. Major, began the afternoon by upsetting the calculations of the form players, when, with a leg up on Tatting, he beat the favorite Ostelle by half a length in a driving finish.

After skipping the second, Pribble came back in the third and scored on Springvale. The winner was off none too well, but gained steadily on the leaders in the stretch run and closing with a fine burst of speed was going away at the end.

In the fourth race Pribble brought Golden Chance home in front. The Major Stable's entry came from far behind in the stretch run and also won handily.

Pribble's victory in the fifth was not so easily earned, Au Revoir just managing to stagger home in front of Marauder. The latter came from a long way back and was wearing down the winner at the finish.

Chinootsague set out to make a runaway affair of the sixth, but tired badly in the last sixteenth and in a sinew-straining finish just lasted long enough to stave off Harlock's rush.

Mollie Puff won the only race of the day in which the victorious Pribble did not figure. It was the second victory in succession for the de Estrampes's filly.

MAKING THE COUNTRY "TIRED."

Senator NORRIS of Nebraska said bluntly in the Senate last week: "There is no doubt that the country is already tired of the Republican party." Coming from a Republican, this was certainly horrifying frankness. He was speaking to the general theme that the voters in America usually cast their ballots with an ahimus against one party more than with enthusiasm for the other. Senator NORRIS remarked that the great Republican majority in 1920 was in reality a vote against the Democratic party. And he plainly intimated that the dissatisfaction of the electorate is now strongly swinging to the disadvantage of the Republicans, and that their turn will come next to be turned out of office, not for the reason that the country loves the Democrats more, but simply at the time dislikes the Republicans more and wishes to punish them for their shortcomings.

Some such acute apprehension must be in the minds of a great many Republican leaders in Washington. Otherwise it would be impossible to account for the panic fear which they show in the presence of the troublesome bonus question. All of them are thinking and most of them are talking of the Congressional elections of next November. Had they not such a fearful looking for of judgment at that time, it is hard to believe that they would not show more backbone, more courage, more patriotic concern for the state of the public finances. As it is, everything seems to be thrown aside for the sake of the coming election. It will be noted that in all the plans to finance the bonus payment—and some of these plans are fantastic in the extreme—it is always insisted that somehow the first payment must be managed for next October. It must come, as they say, "just before the election." No phrase could better measure the low motives which are actuating the majority of the members of Congress as they urge forward bonus legislation at all hazards.

The whole spectacle is, indeed, one to make the country "tired." It is tired of seeing parties play fast and loose with their principles. It is tired of the lack of leadership in Congress. It is tired of seeing responsible officials consult together, not for what the best and largest interests of the nation demand, but for what measures can prevent the loss of a few votes in this or that Congressional district. It is tired of seeing taxation and public economy and sound finance made the sport of politics. It is tired of asking a Congress, elected to represent the whole people, running away in abject cowardice before the demands of a minority of a minority.

This feeling of national fatigue will last until some one rises at Washington to give the country encouragement. The critical situation calls loudly for a man, a group of real leaders. If the voters could get a strong and definite lead in this time of confusion, from men who would let their political chances go hang for the sake of telling the truth and laying down a correct and safe policy, there is no doubt that approval from the people would come to such a leadership like the sound of many waters.

A PROBLEM IN REPARATIONS.

Bulgaria has asked for a three years' postponement of beginning of payment of her reparations bill, amounting to $440,000,000 in gold. As two years' instalments have already been deferred, it is not clear whether this request covers only next year or three years more. At any rate, officials of the Reparations Commission in Belgrade were ready to accept provided the Government gives guarantees that it will "follow a sane economic policy."

This is a polite but pointed commentary on the economics of the "farm bloc" which under STAMBULISKY has governed Bulgaria since the armistice. Politically, that Government was pacifistic, eager to come to terms with the Serbs, and much safer from the allied viewpoint than any other that could possibly have been formed. But it was affected by the not uncommon agrarian view that every man with money and every man who lives in town is the farmer's natural enemy. Just at present Bulgaria is unable to pay any reparations at all; for that, the economics of the former Government is chiefly to blame. The overhead of reparation has been heavy; the cost of the numerous commissions has run to a good deal of money, measured by the Bulgarian standard. But the Reparations Commission has at least kept the Stambulisky Government from running too far off the track in its war on capital.

What will Bulgaria's neighbors have to say about it? The Jugoslav Government is still borrowing money to repair the devastations of the Bulgarian Army. Bulgaria owes that money, and justly; but her plea of inability to pay is accepted by outsiders who know her condition best. Interest on reparations alone amounts to more than her national budget. Reparations in kind to Serbia and Rumania have been pretty nearly completed. It would pay both those nations in the long run to cultivate the tendency to political reconciliation which is now so evident in Bulgaria rather than to hold out for the payment of indemnities which are justly due, but which never can be paid.

The situation differs considerably from that of Germany, for Germany can certainly pay a good deal, and almost certainly can pay more than her public man will admit. Her smaller allies are in a different case. The idea of getting reparation in cash from Austria has practically disappeared; and it would probably be a good thing for Southeastern Europe if the creditors of Hungary and Bulgaria would be content with what restitution in kind can be exacted and let the cash claims go. There the object of reparations, the neutralizing of the advantage taken by the invader, has already been attained.

UNCLE JOE.

The best of friends must part, but the next House of Representatives will seem like an orphan, deprived of its ancient guardian and familiar genius. At the end of his present term Mr. CANNON will have served forty-six years. There were two breaks of continuity in his record, but he had long passed the thirty-odd years of his nearest competitors in the House, BINGHAM of Pennsylvania, HOLMAN of Indiana, KITCHIN of New York. And he overtook and distanced famous veterans like ALLISON and MORRILL, who also became Senators. The long-term men in the British Parliament were beyond even his reach. CHARLES VILLIERS, for instance, represented one constituency from 1834 to 1885, and another one till his death in 1898.

When Mr. CANNON entered the House, in 1873, of the Forty-third Congress, there were among its members such men as GARFIELD, General HAWLEY, EUGENE HALE, BLAINE, GEORGE F. HOAR and B. F. BUTLER, ALEXANDER H. STEPHENS, W. R. MORRISON, "Sunset" COX. Four Presidents, GARFIELD, MCKINLEY, HARRISON and HARDING, have served in Congress with him. He was 18 years old when the Republican Party was born. He is a remembrancer of more than two generations of American history. His salient personal traits, the homespun legend which he has always thoughtfully preserved for effect in the Eighteenth Illinois District, the myths of his iniquity that gathered about him in the curious days when infant Insurgents were frightened to sleep by his dreaded name, have somewhat obscured the essential CANNON. He is a man with an extraordinary knowledge of and capacity for transacting the public business.

As a member of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads he reported and secured the passage of the first law for the transmission of mail matter at the pound rate. Doubtless a few halting Methuselahs recall the "good old times" when the subscriber to a newspaper had to pay postage on it before taking it from the office. In the Forty-fourth Congress Speaker RANDALL, who probably had a fuller knowledge of Government business than any other man then in public life, appointed Mr. CANNON to the Committee on Appropriations for the grasp of postal affairs that he had shown. It was a high compliment to a young member. The Appropriations Committee then made all the general appropriation bills, afterward discovered seeing a path of economies with great cost to the country.

A Democratic Speaker, Mr. CARLISLE, assigned Mr. CANNON to the Rules Committee, which was in time to become the sum of all villainies. In the Fifty-first Congress Speaker REED made him Chairman of the Appropriations Committee. Mr. REED thought so much of his qualifications that in the Fifty-fourth Congress he again made Mr. CANNON, who had lost the right of seniority by his defeat as a candidate for the Fifty-second Congress, Chairman of that all-important committee. Mr. CANNON knew his job thoroughly. It is worth remembering, by the way, that the man who spoke of himself jocularly as "putting up the tariff by day and the ante at night" once deviated into "free trade." To the so "infamous" Mills Tariff bill he proposed an amendment for free sugar. Believed to be a ferocious partisan, he showed his political judgment in the Fifty-first Congress. He tried to beat, and almost succeeded in beating, in the Republican caucus, the resolution to make Mr. LODGE's Force bill a party measure.

It is true that, as a devoted "regular" and a member of the Committee on Rules, he did his best to pass the bill, but he knew its unwisdom and attributed to it the defeat of the Republicans at the next election. Much more temperately than a dozen years ago do men speak of Mr. CANNON's service as Speaker and the tempest in his last years in that office against "Cannonism"—that is, the Speaker's "power of inquisitorial recognition," control over the business of the House by the appointment of committees, and membership and control of the Committee on Rules, and so on. Men like REED and CANNON believed that the House should be able to transact business. The machine is gone. The Speaker is a figurehead. Some of the reformers must sigh for the restoration, in large part at least, of the old "arbitrary" procedure.

Mr. CANNON has plenty of faults and has had plenty of congested partisanship, but he has been a mighty able and useful Representative. He is entitled to discharge, if he insists on it, but it must be given to him only on condition that he lives to be at least 100.

HYPERBOLUS.

Mr. HIRSHFIELD'S historical investigations have led to a more general reading of certain modern writers of history, and to a more general acquaintance with certain characters in our annals. Will he not be good enough some morning, when there is a free hour on his calendar, to investigate PLUTARCH and THUCYDIDES? His particular attention is asked to a character of whom both spoke disparagingly, HYPERBOLUS.

This ancient public type—or perhaps prototype—seemed to be unconcerned over the worst things said about him, "being careless of glory, also insensible of shame"—a temper, PLUTARCH remarks, "which some people call boldness and courage, whereas it is indeed impudence and recklessness." Despite the fact that HYPERBOLUS was not liked, the people made frequent use of him "when they had a mind to disgrace or calumniate any persons in authority." At last, however, he overreached himself. He brought the people to the point of pronouncing the sentence of ostracism upon some one of such citizens as "outdid the rest in credit and power." But when the referendum was held, the sentence was against HYPERBOLUS himself. A critical contemporary writer said that the man deserved this fate; but he added a more cutting remark, to the effect that "the fate did not deserve the man," the intimation being that ostracizing had not been given to such a city for use in punishing "a mean or obscure citizen."

If the industrious Commissioner of Accounts has one more spare moment, he might read what illustrious precedent his own occupation has. ALCIBIADES, calling at the house of PERICLES, was told that the latter was busied in "considering how to give up his accounts to the Athenians." The comment of the departing ALCIBIADES was that "it were better for him to consider how he might avoid giving up his accounts at all."

RULES FOR RAILWAY WORKERS.

Washington telegrams announce that the Railroad Labor Board is nearing the end of its fixing of rules regulating working conditions for the railways. The board holds that working conditions have a money value in the labor contract. Therefore it seems to the board that the rules must precede the wage question. If so, it follows that the wage schedules must be fixed before there can arise a "dispute" under them. It is doubtful where the board gets authority to take action before there is a dispute. The board assumed to tell the Pennsylvania how it should conduct an election, there being no dispute between the railway and its workers, and the company promptly sought the protection of the courts. There the question rests, and there it must be left for the present.

The board assumed jurisdiction to fix national rules because it inherited a situation where the railway workers were protected by the national agreements made under Government administration. The railways asked that the agreements be abolished. The board first inquired into the facts and found that the agreements required the railways to pay out hundreds of millions for unproductive labor. Yet to have abolished the agreements would have produced chaos. Hence the national rules, announced from time to time for various classes of labor. Disputes under the rules and wage decisions have been made public in fifty cases. Analysis discloses more disputes with the unions affiliated with the Federation of Labor than with the train service. Director General HINES, in defense of his administration, stated that many railways had working rules covering the points of the national agreements. But the latter gave more to the unions affiliated with the Federation and more than the train services ever had had. The result was that it became necessary to revise the train service rules. They relate to distinctively railway labor. The train services are not competitive with other sorts of labor, but Federation railway unions are.

The Labor Board rules have lessened the discrimination of the national agreements, but seem to have produced a situation in which the railways and the unions are alike dissatisfied. The Erie Railroad, by transferring its machine shop work to private shops, has no dispute with labor of which the Labor Board can take notice. Also, there is a disposition to reach agreements between railways and their workers and thus to sidetrack the Labor Board. Yet it may be expected to be jealous of its jurisdiction and to assert it aggressively.

ARMY AND NAVY REDUCTION.

It is not to be doubted that the agreements reached at the Washington conference have laid the spectre of war in the Far East. Before the conference men talked of a conflict between Japan and the United States as one of the certainties of the future. But that cloud has vanished from the horizon. The naval treaty, assuming that it is to be ratified, will reduce the danger of a struggle for mastery in the Pacific to a minimum. Therefore, cut the personnel of the navy and put more ships out of commission, is the argument of the economists in Congress.

Secretary DENBY proposes an enlisted personnel of 90,000, instead of 100,000. By laying off 100 destroyers $70,000,000 a year could be saved. Certainly the crews of these destroyers could be spared, for they are a war and not a peace type of vessel. In an emergency they could be quickly restored to commission. There would remain enough destroyers for training and manœuvres. The Secretary would keep in service all the eighteen capital ships allowed the United States, and other units in proportion. Congress may not agree with him that such a first line of battle would be a peace establishment. Could it be maintained that we should then have limited ourselves to "a navy for protection and to discharge the many missions not even connected with war and required by our Government at all times"? If Great Britain and Japan should reduce their fleets below the maximum agreed upon, there would be no justification for keeping all of the eighteen American capital ships ready for war. Should the British Government approve of the cuts in estimates recommended by the Economy Commission, the maximum of twenty-two capital ships will certainly not be maintained. Japan, no longer fearing aggression by the United States, will be disposed to avail herself of the opportunity to save money. The United States took the lead in proposing to scrap nearly every ship of its three-year program. Why should it not be satisfied with a navy adequate to the new conditions?

Reduction of the land forces must be considered from another point of view. The demand for making a cut in the complement of enlisted men cannot be resisted. The success of the Washington conference has made a difference. But the amended National Defense act must not be forgotten. There should be a substantial regular army nucleus for expansion, as that act provides. If Congress is ready to discard that legislation, which was intended to afford the country the protection of a modern army, then the land forces can be cut to any figure that suits the extreme economist. But is preparedness to be scrapped? Shall the army be considered only as auxiliary to the police forces of States and cities? Even little Cuba, protected by the Platt amendment, has an army of ten to fifteen thousand men. It would be the part of wisdom not to cut the regular army below the irreducible nucleus. The General Staff should be heeded on that point.

SCHOOLING THE VACANT MIND.

The second questionnaire on current events conducted by the Institute for Public Service has attracted attention primarily because it seemed to show that pupils in high schools and the upper grades were no better informed about sports than about world politics. More important is the fact that current events can be taught, by the right kind of teacher. The general average of 20,000 pupils was only 41 per cent. of correct answers; but the 44 pupils in a St. Louis eighth grade averaged 92 per cent. Unless they had been specially pointed for this examination, one may infer that that grade has a teacher who knows something about current events himself, or more probably herself, and also knows something about the art of teaching.

Generally speaking, the results are, of course, discouraging. But one can hardly agree with the report that "the significant fact is not so much the not knowing as all as the believing what is entirely wrong." Here is a moral question that has been debated ever since the days of SOCRATES, and the optimists, from now on, have always held that not knowing at all is a virtue to be cherished, while the possibility of believing what is entirely wrong is a hazard sufficient to justify the abolition of free thought. But that has not, in modern times, been the opinion of educators. No doubt it is regrettable that schoolboys should think that LUCRETIA WOOD is Governor General of Philadelphia, and HUGO STINNES the leader of the Ku Klux Klan; still more that high school seniors should think that THEODORE ROOSEVELT or JOHN MARSHALL had lately been appointed Chief Justice of the United States. Still, it shows that they have at least heard the names, which is some ground for encouragement. Also, one must suspect that the student who set down SUSANNE LENGLEN as a Japanese delegate to the Washington conference may have been actuated by a spirit of levity, no less than the youth who answered the question, "What is a much-discussed book, recently published, which gives a detailed story of life in a small town?" "Robinson Crusoe." Testers of the adolescent mind must always face the possibility that adolescents may not take the test with entire seriousness.

Certainly the general impression is painful. But when one-fourth of the students couldn't mention a news item of current interest connected with Washington, that may be only one more token that the country is finding Washington rather wearisome and multitudinous; and the announcement that 970 out of 1,000 high school seniors failed to recognize the photograph of the United States Commissioner of Education tells more about the ingenious malice of some educational rival than about the quality of the high school mind.

Despite the conclusions of the Institute, we insist that it is better to know something than to know nothing, even if what you know is wrong. For the rest, it might pay somebody to look up that St. Louis teacher whose pupils averaged 92 per cent. and find out how she does it.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Full Warning Did Not Save Them.

So easy did the expedient of human credulity and greed find it in Chicago to emulate, and even to surpass, the so recent achievements of the Boston man, PONZI, that really there should be a searching of journalistic consciences. For if something was not the matter with the publicity which PONZI received—if some negligence or incompetence did not mask the presentation by the papers of what he did—how could great numbers of people have been induced to part with their money by a repetition of promises obviously beyond fulfillment?

Indeed, in Chicago not even so much ingenuity was displayed as in Boston. There was no talk there about mysterious and indisputable dealings abroad in postal orders; there was only the declaration that the money contributed was to be used in speculation by a young man of no known financial knowledge or experience. And he only had to say that the profits would be large to get several millions into his hands.

As a matter of fact, however, the newspapers did their full duty at the time of the PONZI excitement. They printed in full all the details of his operations. Even people who could not read must have heard about him, and, if they were not put on their guard against subsequent financing of that sort, it must have been that great numbers of people will believe anything except the truth and that what they are readiest to believe is the impossible.

But Chicago has no monopoly of credulous ignorance. Here in New York bucket shops have been flourishing wonderfully of late, in spite of making merely a pretense of dealing in stocks, and to them have flocked in multitudes exactly the persons who least could afford to risk their money in speculations. They could have had good advice for the asking at the savings banks where most of them have had deposits, but if they received it they ignored it.

Apparently, there is no saving these lambs from their predestined and periodic shearing, and they grow a new crop of wool every year. They learn nothing from the experiences of others—or from their own.

Perhaps He Deserved Punishment.

They must have some interesting laws up in the Province of Quebec if a story which comes from there by way of London is true. According to the tale as told, a woman in Montreal whose husband was away at sea endeavored to increase her income by the illicit sale of intoxicants. She was detected, arrested, tried and convicted of violating Quebec's liquor laws. Then the husband returned from his voyage, and he, under the provincial statutes, was held responsible for his wife's offense, was prosecuted and convicted, and was sentenced to a month in what our cousins insist on calling, or at any rate on spelling, "gaol."

And he is still there, for an appeal taken by him to the Superior Court was denied. How he likes it is not revealed. How he should like it and the opinions of his wife are rather interesting problems on which to exercise powers of deduction and induction, especially by the professional feminists.

It is evident that up in Quebec—always assuming that the story is true—they still regard man and wife as one, with the man very much the one, and the holding of him responsible for his wife's crimes and misdemeanors must be based on the assumption that it is his duty to keep her in order or pay the penalty. Probably our advocates of perfect equality as between the sexes would say that, if this obligation exists, its opposite also exists; and there is at least as much reason for saying so, for men are by no means alone in having powers of compulsion or persuasion over marital partners.

As a matter of fact, each such partner does have to suffer for the other's transgression, but only Quebec, with the possible exception of China, seems to have kept up the old identifications as a matter of law.

"Politicians" Held Responsible.

Not very far from the New York City Hall lives one JEFF. He served in the war, as a noncombatant, indeed, but as a noncombatant of the sort that had about as many chances to get killed as did the men in the front trenches. In other words, JEFF for many months drove an ambulance back and forth between the firing lines and the advanced field hospitals. So he has a right as good as any soldier to have and express an opinion in regard to the "adjusted compensation" that will come to him if it comes to anybody.

And here, practically word for word, is what he was heard to say on that subject this week:

"Bonus? No, I don't want it! I don't need it. Look at me! When I went overseas I was like a common tin pail. I came back galvanized and ready for any kind of work! None of the boys really want it. It was put in their heads by politicians. Sometimes, when I see how much money some fellows that stayed home have made I feel a little bitter, but I wouldn't exchange my experience for their money. No, sir! Let the Government spend all the money on the sick boys. Why, I heard about a blind fellow the other day! One of my chums saw him and we both said give him our money and more, too! No bonus for me!"

Not the least interesting point in this utterance is the hint it gives as to the possible source of the demand for a bonus. Nobody else, so far as can be remembered, has suggested that "politicians," instead of yielding to pressure exerted by an organized "vote," have themselves, for reasons not wholly unimaginable by ingenious thinkers, started the whole movement. But the "politicians" JEFF meant probably are among the veterans, not the officeholders.

Their Envy Rather Mysterious.

Porto Rico's Unionist Party—so called, presumably, because it is one of three into which the island voters are divided and is bitterly hostile to the other two—has heard the news from Ireland and is demanding for Porto Rico the status of a Free State!

This is far in advance of the aspiration to be the forty-ninth State in the United States, which would content either of the other parties, but to be the rulers of an independent, or almost independent, little republic has comprehensible attractions for ambitious gentlemen, and it is natural enough that they should try to get what they want.

That they should get it is not quite so natural, fortunately for the great majority of the islanders. They have not been treated as well as they might have been by our Government, but still more easily they might have been treated worse; and, on the whole, they have no excuse for dreaming of a freedom that would benefit nobody except a few politicians. Statehood, some day, is their manifest destiny, not Free Statehood.

"MORE STATESMANSHIP."

Feels "Politics" Will Prove Fatal in Present World Unrest.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The utterances of two great men seem to be prophetic. Napoleon said, "Europe would be either all Cossack or all republic." The Cossack nightmare has disappeared; the sunburst of all republics is illuminating Europe. The year 1914 is avenging 1814; the seed the American revolution and its offspring, the French Revolution, sowed has grown into full fruition.

The other utterance, that of Gladstone, is unfortunately coming true. He said, "Let us give Ireland home rule and instead of Englishmen being murdered, the Irish will murder each other."

The raid of yesterday is evidence that there is no peace in Ireland, unless they have, as we have a North and South Dakota, a North and South Ireland, and then it is a grave problem, the sectarian differences widening the gulf.

Grave problems confront the whole world, and we are not free from still greater perils. The reduction of expenditures while lessening taxation is bound to increase the volume of jobless and swell the army of discontented. Crime and hold-ups will be stimulated to a yet greater degree. All the treaties of the two conferences, Versailles and Washington, cannot cure the economic upheaval the late World War has created.

The possible solution is more statesmanship and less politics. On the world chessboard kings, queens and castles have been relegated to the waste basket, but the bishops and pawns are more dominant than ever.

We are, I regret to say, on the eve of a struggle. Labor is more defiant than ever; its demands are decrees of the secret chamber. Feudal venire courts modernized, the national and State legislators are bowing in humble submission and the edicts for all the patriotic citizens will be obeyed by the unions, provided they do not conflict with their arrogant claims.

How curious history is! The new Minister to Hungary is the son of the Chevalier of Ridder of 1848. Lorenz Berantzen, who served several terms in our Congress, and now the son goes to the land of KOSSUTH.

Ga-he-nah-gawn-wonse.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of your articles regarding the Chippewa chief Ga-he-nah-gawn-wonse who died recently, it might interest some of your readers to know that in 1911 when I met him, while on tour through the Middle West and Canada, he was then reported to be over 121, which would make his age at least 132.

There were several other old Indians stopping at the Seneca hotel and these he spoke of as "youngsters," one in particular who was a mere youth of 112 years of age. One of his peculiarities was his name, which resembled a cross of pretty nearly every Indian tribe through which an orange-stick, and whenever he spoke it would wag energetically.

Through his interpreter, he christened me "Wabbeno," which means "White Rabbit," or "Wabbeno-wa," meaning "Rabbit."

He showed a great affection for the little one-year-old daughter of one of our party, and wanted to adopt her. The activity was wonderful and his walk is brisk and active as that of any of us.

DEAD OF WINTER.

How wise are They!—
Little children that fear the Forest
When the Shut Wind flies low,
For they mind how one fled yonder,
A long time ago—
She that was called of her merry brethren, Little Whites-Than-Snow.

It seems the Wind cried to her:
"There's a stark tree where your beauty may hang high,
In the Forest; there's a chill brook where your beauty low may lie)
There's a black cave where your fair face may hide and none ever spy."

Her white bones rest in peace,
Yet, paler than snowflake, threading dark Forest's stilly way,
Her spirit seeks ever solace, . . . Ah! happy are they,
Quaint children of the Forest, when across her path they stray.

White Owl or beauteous Vixen,
Bird of beastie, look up bright-eyed out of nest or leafed den.
When the gods most jovial and friendly,
As their Lady come home again—
But woe to him she leads thither from the trodden paths of men.

Alack! poor Wilson!
Her heart's cold to him as the fay frost that melts savoyards.
He shall have as fares the innocent maniac, more weary and footsore,
To find how wry a wisdom at Dame Gothamina's door!

THE COMING CHILEAN-PERUVIAN CONFERENCE.

An Estimate of the Far-Reaching Importance of Its Effect on Pan-American Relations.

By JOHN BARRETT,
Late Director General of the Pan-American Union and former United States Minister to Argentina, Panama and Colombia.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 12, 1922.

The chief topic of discussion today in Pan-American diplomatic circles is the coming conference in March at Washington between the plenipotentiaries of Chile and Peru. No other announcement relating to Pan-American affairs during many years has awakened more interest and favorable comment. Cabled reports received by the diplomats show that the press and people of all Latin America are applauding this great step to settle the most important outstanding difference which interferes with Pan-American solidarity.

Credit is equally divided between Chile and Peru for jointly taking the initiative and the United States for attending its good offices. While there is no undue optimism as to results, everybody is genuinely hopeful of a successful conclusion, and profound disappointment throughout the Americas will result if it is unsuccessful. Latin Americans are almost unanimous in agreeing that the vital differences between Chile and Peru over Tacna and Arica, which have grown more serious with the passing years and have extended back through four decades to the war between those countries, have been and are the greatest menace of any Pan-American issue to continental peace, solidarity and cooperation. No wonder, then, that they herald with satisfaction the approaching conference.

It is known that both President Harding and Secretary Hughes, who have a deep sincere interest in Pan-American relations and in whom Latin America has confidence, are also profoundly pleased that the arms conference affecting the entire world is to be soon to be followed by the Chilean-Peruvian conference which has a special appeal to the Western Hemisphere. Secretary Hughes leaves tomorrow for Bermuda with the best wishes of the entire Latin-American diplomatic corps, and they hope that he will return well rested and better able to prepare the way for this meeting of the plenipotentiaries of two sister American republics. There is no doubt that he, as well as the Presidents and the Ambassadors and Ministers of Latin America, believes that the atmosphere of international conciliation and concession in Washington which characterized the arms conference will have a powerful influence in bringing Chile and Peru together in this their biggest international issue. It is gratifying, moreover, to note the conciliatory and optimistic official and personal attitude of both Ambassador Matheu of Chile and Ambassador Pezet of Peru. They are co-operating in preparation for the conference in a thoroughly, kindly and unselfish spirit.

Almost simultaneous with the announcement of arrangements for this unique meeting and the departure of Secretary Hughes is the tacit decision of the members of the Governing Board of the Pan American Union, composed of the Secretary of State and the Latin American diplomatic representatives, that the Fifth Pan-American Conference, which was about to be called to meet at Santiago, Chile, in September, should not meet until the result is known of the Chilean-Peruvian Conference.

During the arms meeting Chile had taken the initiative in preparing for the Fifth Congress of the American Republics, in accordance with the resolution of the Fourth Conference, which was held in Buenos Aires in 1910, and the Governing Board of the Pan American Union would probably have approved of Chile's suggestion if there had not suddenly arisen this extraordinary opportunity of settling first the long-standing dispute between Chile and Peru and thereby removing the chief obstacle to the success of the Fifth Pan-American Conference. The United States and the majority of Latin American Governments looked favorably on the calling of this gathering after twelve years of no meeting, due largely to the World War, but they are now unanimous that it is secondary in importance to the getting together of Chile and Peru.

In this connection it should be further pointed out that while South America regards the possible permanent adjustment of the Chilean-Peruvian dispute as the most important step that no doubt can be taken for Pan American solidarity, it hopes that the same spirit of conciliation which prompts this effort may also bring about an early settlement of the difficulties between Mexico and the United States. If these two results are accomplished in the next few months, 1922 will see the beginning of a new Pan-Americanism, and a condition of good-will and friendship such as known to the American republics since the calling of the first Pan-American Conference at Washington in 1889.

FRANKLIN'S ADVICE TO PARIS

He Was the Inventor of Daylight Saving, the French Are Told.

Copyright, 1922, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to The New York Times.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—Benjamin Franklin was the inventor of daylight saving, according to a French newspaper which just now is conducting a campaign for the retention of longer daylight in France. Franklin's discovery that it would save tallow candles if everybody got up earlier dates, according to this authority, Dr. McKee asserted, but this statement, as not proved pertinent to the contest, were capable of supplying the nation's petroleum needs for hundreds of years. He predicted the extraction of 40,000,000,000 barrels of petroleum, which amount is eight times larger than the total of the well petroleum that this country has produced since Colonel Drake drilled the first oil well in 1859 at Titusville, Pa. It is more than five times the total production of the world since well petroleum became commercial sixty years ago.

"There are large deposits in Nevada, California, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and smaller deposits, though large enough for commercial exploitation, in many other portions of the continent. There are similar deposits in other parts of the world.

"Of those deposits which are likely to be exploited in the next decade we have variations in yield from twenty gallons per ton of rock to one barrel of oil. The large deposits of lower grade will give about a barrel (forty-two gallons) of oil per ton of rock.

"The demands for petroleum are increasing in this country at the rate of about 10 per cent. a year. To meet this continuous it will require 365 new oil wells every five years, each handling 1,000 tons of oil shale a day and representing an investment of close to $1,000,000. To give a partial idea of what simply this yearly increase in demands for petroleum. We have no other source of fuel oil or gasoline substitute in prospect which promises to furnish even a minor part of this demand."

HONORS TO SHACKLETON.

Body of Explorer Leaves Montevideo Today for South Georgia Island.

MONTEVIDEO, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—Military, naval and state honors will be rendered by the Uruguayan Government to the late Sir Ernest Shackleton when the body of the explorer is embarked Wednesday on the British steamship Westerville, which will convey it back to South Georgia Island for burial.

According to the program the body will be removed this morning from the Government military hospital to the English Church, where it will lie in state until tomorrow morning, when religious services will be held. The coffin will then be placed on a gun carriage and conveyed to the Westerville's pier, with an escort of troops and followed by a procession of British organizations and representatives of the general public. Special steamers of the Lamport and Holt line of vessels will assist in the last sad journey.

Foreign Minister Buero will await the body at the pier, where he probably will deliver the oration. The cruiser Uruguay will accompany the Westerville to sea and fire a farewell salute.

REED CRITICISES MELLON.

Senator Attacks His Request for Power to Settle Foreign Loans.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 14.—In an address here today Senator Reed criticized what he termed a general belief "that the United States was a country of inexhaustible wealth and should act as nurse for the remainder of the world." He also asserted that the burdensome taxes were largely due to waste in the expenditure of public funds. He criticized the request lately by Secretary Mellon to be granted by Congress a bill authorizing him to settle the foreign loan question as he saw fit.

"There is a propaganda inspired abroad to obtain cancellation of these debts," the Senator continued. "There is no way to escape an ultimate collection of taxation and we might as well face the fact and realize that an equitable system of taxation, one that levies upon the individual in proportion to his wealth, never has been discovered."

UPHOLDS SHIPPING BOARD.

Judge Hazel Confirms Its Right to Abrogate Contracts.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 14.—The United States Shipping Board had a right to abrogate wartime contracts after peace was declared, Federal Judge John R. Hazel held today, in dismissing a suit brought by the Buffalo Union Furnace Company against the board.

The contract was made in June, 1918, and delivery of ship was due to the vessel mentioned until January, 1919, when the Shipping Board summarily declared the contract canceled. Judge Hazel holds that it was contemplated by both parties that the contract would be abrogated upon the termination of the purpose for which it was made by the board's action, declaring war, June 5, 1917.

The case was regarded as a test, the result of which will influence the settlement of similar cases involving large sums.

SEES OIL OUTPUT AT PEAK.

Columbia Professor Says Country Must Rely on Shale Hereafter.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 14.—Petroleum production in the United States has reached its peak and probably will begin to decline within three years, Dr. Ralph Arnold, Professor of Chemical Engineering at Columbia University, declared in an address tonight before the Buffalo Engineering Society.

There was no likelihood of the discovery of new petroleum fields in this country, Dr. Arnold asserted, but with oil shale deposits, as vast proportions of the United States, were capable of supplying the nation's petroleum needs for hundreds of years. He predicted the extraction of oil from shale would become one of the great industries in the country.

"It is not commonly appreciated how large these shale deposits are," said Dr. Arnold. "If we consider only those oil shales which will furnish a barrel or forty-two gallons, or more of petroleum per ton of shale, we find in the Green River section of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming alone sufficient to furnish 64,000,000,000 barrels of petroleum, which amount is eight times larger than the total of the well petroleum that this country has produced since Colonel Drake drilled the first oil well in 1859 at Titusville, Pa. It is more than five times the total production of the world since well petroleum became commercial sixty years ago.

"There are large deposits in Nevada, California, Kentucky, Indiana, Ohio, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and smaller deposits, though large enough for commercial exploitation, in many other portions of the continent. There are similar deposits in other parts of the world.

"Of those deposits which are likely to be exploited in the next decade we have variations in yield from twenty gallons per ton of rock to one barrel of oil. The large deposits of lower grade will give about a barrel (forty-two gallons) of oil per ton of rock.

"The demands for petroleum are increasing in this country at the rate of about 10 per cent. a year. To meet this continuous it will require 365 new oil wells every five years, each handling 1,000 tons of oil shale a day and representing an investment of close to $1,000,000. To give a partial idea of what simply this yearly increase in demands for petroleum. We have no other source of fuel oil or gasoline substitute in prospect which promises to furnish even a minor part of this demand."

GEN. MACARTHUR WEDS MRS. BROOKS

BEFORE ALTAR OF PALMS

Bridegroom Wears His World War Decorations—Only the Families at the Ceremony.

Special to The New York Times.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 14.—A wedding of interest in military and social circles was solemnized this afternoon when Mrs. Louise Cromwell Brooks became the bride of Brig. Gen. Douglas MacArthur. The ceremony was performed amid beautiful tropical surroundings at "El Mirasol," the Spanish villa of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury on the Ocean Boulevard. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury.

The marriage took place in the salon facing the ocean. An altar had been arranged at the north of the salon. American flags, including the flag of the Rainbow Division and the blue flag of West Point were conspicuous features towering way above the splendid embankment of palms and ferns, which formed the improvised altar. Red, white and blue ribbons outlined the pathway for the bridal party.

The pric-dieu upon which the couple knelt during the ceremony was covered with a prayer mat of the fifteenth century. The ceremony took place at 4:30 o'clock and was performed by Chaplain Wheat of the United States army camp. Only the immediate families attended the wedding, but 200 additional guests were invited to the reception at 5 o'clock.

Mr. Stotesbury gave the bride in marriage. She wore a graceful and becoming apricot-colored chiffon gown made high in the back, with train falling from the shoulders. Panels of the same material fell from the waistline. The long chiffon sleeves were also made to connect with the panel train. She wore diamond ornaments in her hair in lieu of a hat. She also wore a diamond necklace, the gift of the bridegroom, and carried a white prayer book.

Brigadier General MacArthur wore the Distinguished Medal and Distinguished Service Cross of his own country, the French Legion of Honor, the Croix de Guerre, the Italian War Cross and the Belgian Order of Leopold. His best man was James H. R. Cromwell, who wore the uniform of Captain of the marines. Mr. Crowell is a brother of the bride.

The matron of honor was Mrs. John Kearsley Mitchell of Philadelphia, a daughter of Mr. Stotesbury, who wore a matter blue beaded georgette gown with a large picture hat of the same color. She carried a bouquet of orchids. Mrs. Stotesbury, mother of the bride, was in a mauve gown of chiffon, made with long panels at the back which were arranged from the shoulders forming a panel train. A broaded girdle of the same color encircled the waist and finished with two long sash ends. She wore a large horsehair braid and straw hat which matched the gown.

The ushers were John Kearsley Mitchell and Sidney L. Hutchinson. Before the ceremony an orchestra entertained the guests with the selections "Oh Promise Me," "Samson and Delilah," "Wild Rose" and "Cavalleria Rusticana," and then Lohengrin's Wedding March. An informal garden party followed the ceremony and supper was served at small tables in the garden.

The bride, who is a noted beauty, was married after the termination of her first season as a debutante in Washington, New York and Philadelphia, to Walter Brooks, Jr., a well known Baltimore clubman. They have two children. Mrs. Brooks obtained a divorce in the spring of 1920 in Paris.

Brig. Gen. MacArthur is one of the youngest men who ever retained a General's rank in the United States. General MacArthur was literally born to the flag, for his birth took place in Arkansas in 1880, when his father, the late Lieut. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, was changing stations.

His brother, Arthur MacArthur, is a Commander in the navy.

A feature of the ceremony was Mayor Cooper C. Lightbow's presentation to the bridegroom of a 10-inch silver key, with inscriptions on each side, giving him the freedom of the city.

Among the guests who attended the reception were: Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Emelin Hutchinson, John Kearsley Mitchell, Mrs. Horace E. Dodge, Vincent Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Graton Pyne, Nicholas Biddle, Charles S. Cutting, Mrs. Joseph Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. I. Townsend Burden, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Loew, Mrs. James H. R. Cromwell, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Cosden, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Graham White, Colonel and Mrs. James Elverson, Dr. and Mrs. Preston Satterwhite, Mr. and Mrs. Paris Singer, Mr. and Mrs. John Rutherford, Mr. and Mrs. J. Leonard Replogle, Mr. and Mrs. Leland Sterry, Dr. and Mrs. Seward Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seligman and Mrs. Barclay Warburton.

Her Fiance's Mother, Mrs. R. R. Livingston, to Give a Dance Tomorrow.

Livingston, will give a dance for them tomorrow evening at her residence, 11 Washington Square. It will be a small one, and the guests will include a few intimate friends of Mr. Livingston and his fiancée.

Some changes have been made in the personnel of the bridal attendants since they were published several weeks since in these columns. L. Suffern Tailer and Johnston L. Redmond have gone South and will not be in town to act as ushers. Rowland L. Redmond is to take his brother's place. The others are to be R. Kidd Rowland S. Davis, Edmund P. Livingston, William M. Carson, J. Fahys Cook, Stephen Dodge and Gray MacW. Bryan. William L. Nicoll is to be the best man.

SPENCE GIRLS CHEFS OF 'EN CASSEROLE'

BEAUTIES IN LARGE OVEN

Fashion Fete and Ball at the Commodore for Babies' Hospital Attracts Society Throng.

No indications of a poor theatrical season could be discovered at the first two performances of "En Casserole," the sparkling musical revue of the Spence Alumnae Society, presented in the grand ballroom of the Plaza yesterday afternoon and evening to capacity audiences. More than fifty prominent society girls took part in the production, including many of this season's débutantes.

Under the able direction of Charles S. Morgan Jr., who directed the Princeton Triangle Club play this season, the two acts of the revue went off without a hitch, and the many scenes succeeded each other without the burdensome waits which so often break the spirit of audiences at amateur entertainments. Miss Anna C. Byrne conducted the music, which was by Charles Gilpin, with her usual skill. Additional music for the revue was furnished by Miss Reva M. Tonnele, class of '11; Paul Stewart, Frank Corbett and Jack Straus.

In honor of Valentine's Day a special number, "Be My Valentine," by Charlotte Demorest, with a tuneful score by Mr. Stewart, was used as a finale. It was sung by the entire company, who threw small valentines and kisses to those fortunate enough to be in the front rows, and sent the audience away whistling.

The entire first act was taken up with the preparation of an enticing dish, in which Mrs. B. Tappan Fairchild Jr., as a most attractive master chef, was assisted by six chefs, Mrs. Nelson T. Sheilds and the Misses Clara Workum, Gertrude Ogden, Dorothy Clemens, Gwendolyn Coombe and Katharine Bliss, and six maids, the Misses Elsie Morrill, Margaret Stout, Kate Darlington, Dorothy Thompson, Mary Field and Allen Gray.

Mrs. Fairchild, after singing "I'm the Cook Who Wrote the Cook Book," summoned to her assistance the eight notes of the scale, and after they had marched dutifully and musically into the large oven they were followed by lovely woman, typified by eight sirens. Miss Isabel MacMillin appeared as "Delilah," Miss Ada Heinze as "Cleopatra," Miss Edith Smedberg, "Salome;" Miss Mary Burchell, "Thais;" Miss Margaret MacMillin, "Theodora;" Miss Wilma Kohler, "Sapho;" Miss Demorest, "Carmen;" and Miss Natalie Hanna, "DuBarry."

Famous Lovers of the Past.

Spirits of the dance were next inveigled into the oven, led by Mrs. S. Theodore Hodgman Jr., who received much applause for her entrancing solo dance. Famous lovers of the past were added next to provide the necessary touch of romance, and the last essentials of a zestful dish, "Ginger," Miss Mary Leary; and "Pep," Miss Martha Ottley were finally added.

Miss Demorest Doubleday essayed the difficult role of "Miss Twenty-two," who appeared as the perfect combination of all the beauty and talent which the diligent Master Chef had put in the oven. As the iron doors swung back she was disclosed "en casserole," being perched in a large casserole dish. Miss Doubleday soon proved that she had not only the necessary beauty but also the personality that the part demanded. She sang Mr. Stewart's "En Casserole" with zest, and brought the curtain down on the first act with hearty applause.

The curtain rising on the second disclosed the palace of the fan with two large fans on a background. In the moonlight, girls in black velvet costumes, with powdered hair, carrying Japanese lanterns on long wands, were dancing. This was perhaps the loveliest scene in the revue, and those taking part included the Misses Katharine Bliss, Mary Field, Frances Drury, Genevieve Carthrs, Elizabeth Sturgis, Elsie Morrill, Dorothy Thompson and Alice Bowker and Mrs. Elliot Phillips and Mrs. Laurence Doyle.

Among the best of the excellent specialty numbers, which were one of the chief reasons for the success of the revue, was Miss Susan Steell's singing of Massenet's "Elegie." She has a lovely rich, clear voice and a charming personality, and she more than justified her operatic aspirations. She also sang "Star of the Dusk," by Miss Tonson and William Marvel. Miss Jansvince Kerens brought down the house with a solo dance which put her on a level with many of the Broadway professionals. Miss Louise Reick sang with much charm and Mrs. Elliot E. Phillips sang "I'm the 1922 Flapper," by Jack Strauss, with vivacity.

Influenza, attacking several of the stars at the last moment, gave some of the girls a chance to show considerable versatility. Miss Julia Shanley's part in the difficult skating dance was taken by Miss Martha Ottley with little more than a half hour's practice. Miss Charlotte Demorest, who is one of the busiest persons in the show, having six parts demanding six changes of costume, took the part of Miss Constance Banks in the Jack and Jill number, a little song and dance sketch with Miss Sterry, on one day's notice. Miss Rice, who danced with Miss Banks in a gypsy number, went on alone and did extremely well.

One of the cleverest numbers was the take-off on "Captain Applejack," "Miss Dulcy, Fontaine" and "Miss Sally Miller," played by the Misses Margaret Stout and Dorothy Morrill, were rivals for the "Captain," played by Mrs. Phillips. "Dulcy" and "Sally" vie with each other up to which is the greatest success on Broadway. "Barzakt" also appears, played by the ubiquitous Miss Demorest. The sketch was written by Mr. Morgan, the coach.

The officers of the Alumnae Society, of which Miss Mary P. Wells is President, received many congratulations upon the success of the production, the proceeds of which will go toward the support of the home for orphaned babies at 232 East Sixty-second Street, which the association maintains. Miss Marjorie Cleveland was in charge of the ushers and programs girls, who also sold candy and cigarettes during the performance and the dancing which followed.

Fashion Fete and Ball.

The fashion fete and ball last night at the Hotel Commodore, for the benefit of the Babies' Hospital, attracted a large representation of society. Besides the novel showing of Spring fashions by a hundred and eighty of the most beautiful mannequins from the millinery and dressmaking establishments of New York, there was a ballet and Japanese pantomime.

The program was produced under the stage direction of Alexander Leftwich. The pantomime was called "The Emperor's Doll," from a legend of old Japan, and Muriel Strycker took the part of the Golden Dream girl. The scene was laid in a prayer garden of old Nippon, and other characters were taken by Japanese.

Kiboki Mural was the Emperor, M. Hattoti, and H. Iwanioto, the old attendants; G. Nomura and M. Fujita, the Guardsmen, and Yukie Takyawa and Miku Kasuya were the flower girls. The singers were Luyakawa, Hagotortz, Horinchi and Motada.

After the pantomime came "Vanité," an original divertissement by Alexis Koloff of the Imperial Russian Ballet.

Miss Beatrice Batterman was Chairman of the Program Girls' Committee, which included the Misses Kate de F. Prentice, Marion de Rham, Barbara Brokaw, Phyllis Baldwin, Priscilla Baldwin, Sarah Sage, Florence Lockwood, Maude Cabot, Alma Johnson and Felicia Fisk.

Among the active managers of the hospital interested in the function were Mrs. Henry Martyn Alexander, Mrs. Frank B. Keech, Mrs. Henry G. Bartol, Mrs. J. Prentince Kellogg, Mrs. Bertram H. Borden, Mrs. H. Rudolph Kundardt Jr., Mrs. McCoskry Butt, Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, Miss Lorenzo Daniels, Mrs. Dexter Blagden, Mrs. Francis L. Howland, Mrs. Cornelius R. Agnew and Miss Ann E. Evans.

The hospital is at Lexington Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, and has been in existence for thirty-three years, and it is the only institution of its kind in the city. Mrs. John Jay Knox is Honorary President of the hospital, and Mrs. Oliver G. Jennings, President. Other officers include Mrs. Roswell Miller, Mrs. Ira Barrows, Mrs. Ernest R. Adee, Mrs. John R. Calvert, Mrs. Theron G. Strong and Miss Maude H. Curtiss.

Earrings Still Sell Freely.

Despite the length of time they have been in vogue, there is no diminution reported here in the demand for novelty earrings in all ranges of price. With clusters, they dominate the business done in certain quarters at the present time. Lists of the earrings in black appears still to have the call, but black and white and black and green combinations are frequently seen in some of the higher priced lines. A growing tendency toward earrings and necklaces that match in color is also reported here by concerns which handle the merchandise. Jade, jet, crystal and onyx are among the materials used in the higher priced lines.

About the Spring Furs.

Although there is little doubt expressed here regarding the Spring vogue for animal scarfs, or chokers in cape, coat and three skin effects, opinions expressed by the manufacturers are not so unanimous regarding short cape and chalce effects. With a certain class of consumers on the lookout for something new, it is said that the capes and neckwear may take hold well, but it is further asserted that this outlet for merchandising is usually too restricted to be a really important factor in the season's business. On the other hand, the "choker" is said practicably to have become a staple article, and that, while it may show some falling off in sales to the very high-class trade, it will be in general vogue with the type of consumer on whom the trade has long looked as its source of bread and butter. Popular priced "shokers" are expected to do especially well.

Divided on Strike's Effect.

Opinions were divided here yesterday concerning the probable effect of the strike of the textile workers that has been called in a number of New England centers, goods mills in Providence having fewer wages and longer hours of labor. A good deal of the seriousness of the situation was said to hinge on the ability of the operatives to carry on a prolonged struggle, which, in view of general conditions affecting business and employment, it is not thought in certain quarters here they can do. A short strike, while it would disrupt shipments of several lines of goods, would by no means be as serious as it might be were there a stronger demand for the affected merchandise for quick shipment. In any event, the mill men have the jobbers and retailers back of them in any fight that will reduce price and stimulate consumer buying.

It Has a Place Here.

The success of the fur sale held in the Masonic Hall here last week showed at least two things. One was that there is a definite place for such auctions in this market, when run along conservative lines, despite the enforced liquidation of the corporation which had previously held them. The other was that the manufacturing furriers have more ready money than the amount of credit they had been demanding from the dealers in skins before the auction would indicate. The manufacturers were good buyers at the sale at terms which could scarcely be called liberal. Incidentally, they have been withdrawing their pur chases rapidly from the exhibition of the auction company, particularly in the case of mink, marten, sable and other of the Spring furs.

Bag With Safety Feature.

A bag with a safety pocket, recently introduced by a local manufacturer, has been well received by the leading stores. The safety feature is obtained by means of a double flap which extends the full depth of the bag. The two flaps are snapped together with a fastener behind the usual catch, and the fact that the back is double cannot be noted except on close examination. The design of the bag is such that a watch, necklace or other valuable article may be slipped into the safety pocket without showing any bulge. The bags are being sold wholesale for $24 a dozen and upward in a wide range of leathers and designs.

Bobbed Hair and Ribbons.

The ribbon trade does not expect real improvement until the vogue for bobbed hair loses in popularity. The manufacturers, therefore, have been quite interested in the latest report concerning the style, which states that some college girls are through bobbing their hair and will return to long tresses. Another factor which does not help the ribbon trade, it is said, is the decision for soft draping materials in dresses. These styles demand a trimming equally soft and, consequently, the material itself is often used for decorative purposes. Lately there has been another decline in ribbon prices, amounting to about 5 per cent., and at this reduction the manufacturers claim to be losing 4 or 5 per cent. on the actual cost of production.

Silk and Wool Hose.

Trade observers are inclined to believe that the demand for silk and wool hosiery has reached and passed its peak and that the artificial silk and wool combination will replace some of the other varieties. In support of this view it is known that the artificial silk supply is inadequate to present needs, a particularly heavy demand coming from manufacturers who intend using the product in hosiery. One manufacturer is understood to have orders ahead for eight months on artificial silk and wool hose.

Clothing Clearance Sales.

A report being circulated in the clothing trade is to the effect that some of the leading concerns experienced great difficulty in closing out their season surpluses and pared price accordingly, one case cited being that of a house that let go a very large quantity of suits at $15 apiece. It was known that reductions of one-third were by no means unknown, but the low figure quoted would represent more than 50 per cent. off the regular prices. The effect of deals by manufacturers with department stores is being criticised by regular clothiers, who feel that as steady customers they deserve greater protection than they are getting.

Gray Goods Tone Improves.

A much better tone to the local gray goods market was noticeable yesterday, due to the rise in cotton here. Late in the day 64-inch sateens 3 cents to 3½ cents, and 39-inch 68-72s. In the morning 3¾ cents was their asking price, but it is not clear that they sold at the lower figure. In the 38½-inch printcloths business was done in 64-60s at 7½ cents, and in Southern 60-48s at 6¾ cents. Sheetings had a fair day, with business done on the basis of 7¼ cents, with terms, on 5-yard goods, and 6¼ cents on 5.50s. Fine-yarn cloths and specialties continued higher.

No Action on Silk Shutdown.

A general discussion on the question of closing down mills on March 1 has taken place in the silk trade, but no common action is expected. The problem of the mills is to keep their organizations intact and at the same time avoid as many losses as possible. Holding skilled operatives is the point stressed in this industry as in others where business is temporarily dull. While the silk trade appears to be reasonably certain that there will be no general closing at a date in the near future, nevertheless a further curtailment is thought quite probable.

CANADA TRADE CUT IN HALF.

Nearly a Billion Drop in 1921 From 1920's Two Billion Total.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—During the ten months of the fiscal year ending January 31, total Canadian trade declined by $860,238,391, compared with the corresponding ten months of the previous year. The total trade for ten months ending January, 1921, was $2,150,238,776 and for ten months ending January, 1922, $1,290,000,385.

Trade for January amounted to $216,072,037, in comparison with $154,186,881 for January of last year.

Exports last month were $46,126,086; in January, 1921, $80,912,816. In the two ten-month periods exports were, in 1922, $654,626,912, and in 1921, $1,053,233,352.

General stagnation in trade, instability of foreign exchanges and fall in values are ascribed by the primary causes of the reported decline.

CONTROLLER SEEKS INCOME

Says He Will Have to Be "Shown" Revenue Before He Votes the Money Needed.

A plan to establish a terminal market in the Bronx at a cost of more than $7,500,000 received the support yesterday of the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate, with the exception of Controller Craig and Borough President Connolly of Queens. The matter will come before the Board for action on Friday. When Public Markets Commissioner O'Malley told of the benefits the people of the Bronx would derive, Controller Craig said:

"I have not even seen a plan of this proposed market. If it can be proved that it will produce revenue I will vote for it, but all we have is a mass of figures and not a scintilla of fact."

Commissioner O'Malley informed the Controller that at a public hearing held a year ago every civic body of the Bronx and upper Manhattan had declared in favor of the plan.

"More than $16,000,000 is now expended in carting food supplies from lower Manhattan and New Jersey to the Bronx," he said, "and when this market is completed they will get the benefit of that amount in the cost of supplies."

Borough President Bruckner of the Bronx pointed out that there was as much evidence of a financial return from the market as there was from any contemplated improvement where a return was expected.

"We have studied this question for five years," he said, "and we know there will be a profitable return from the cold storage plant and from the rentals."

"Those who plan so much for the Bronx," interrupted the Controller, "seem to assume that the same conditions prevail there as in Manhattan. You cannot convince me that a branch bank will do as much business as the main institution."

Acting Mayor Hulbert said that there was a demand for cold storage plants and he assumed that a city plant in the Bronx terminal market would be rented before it was completed. President Bruckner said that many merchants had given assurance that they would rent space in the market. The Controller said that if it could be proved conclusively that a terminal market would yield revenue he would favor it, but he would have to be "shown." President Connolly alone sided with the Controller, and it was voted to recommend the plan to the full Board.

MAY TRY TO STOP DIER & CO. INQUIRY

Probable Proposal to Settle Claims on a 25 Per Cent. Basis, Is Rumored.

Developments yesterday in the proceedings to locate assets of the brokerage firm of E. D. Dier & Co. indicated that the creditors had a chance of recovering 25 per cent. of their accounts through a settlement involving a discontinuance of the present inquiry. Liabilities estimated at the time of the failure at $4,000,000 have shrunk to about $3,000,000, so that the cash needed for a settlement on the 25 per cent. basis would be $750,000.

No information was given as to the source of this large sum, but it was indicated that it would be contributed by persons most deeply interested in a final settlement of the concern's affairs. So far no assets have been found.

Charles A. Stoneham, owner of the New York Giants, and Ross Robertson, who have been subpoenaed to appear before United States Commissioner Gilchrist for examination as to their association with the insolvent firm, may not testify until next week. If the proposed settlement is carried through before their testimony is needed they will not be examined at all.

The principal witnesses before the Commissioner yesterday were DeWitt C. Raynor and Earl McDonald Bowen, correspondents of Dier & Co. They were questioned by Arthur G. Hays, counsel for Manfred W. Ehrich, the receiver. Raynor testified that he had been employed by Dier & Co. when the New York office was opened in 1916 and was in charge of getting new customers for the mail order branch of the business. He said that he had been very successful in this endeavor.

The witness had a personal account with the firm for which he used the fictitious name of W. C. Holbrook. He had paid the firm about $15,000 on this account. When he left the firm's employ he was short in his account about $7,600. This shortage, he stated, had been written off by Mr. Dier in consideration of his agreement not to use the names of any of the firm's customers to build up a business of his own.

Bowen testified that while he was with the firm its customers never had any trouble in getting any securities to which they were entitled. The hearing will be continued this morning.

BIBLE SOCIETY STATEMENT.

Change of Policy Defined in Letting Out Printing on Contract.

The American Bible Society yesterday issued a statement in which it said:

"The American Bible Society contrary to certain reports has not given up its publishing business in which it has been engaged for more than 100 years, and has had no thought of so doing. It will continue as a publishing house, issuing the Scriptures in more than 150 languages and dialects, having its work done through various printing concerns. It will continue to control its own plates to preserve the accuracy of its versions, for which it has received wide recognition and acknowledgement.

"This change of policy in its printing program has been dictated by the fact that the Society is convinced that it can do its printing more economically elsewhere than it can by conducting its own printing establishment. The society has no thought of moving its headquarters from New York."

HULBERT ADVISES BOARD.

Tells Estimate Committee to Cultivate Transit Commission.

Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen and Acting Mayor, told the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate yesterday that the members of the board should get on speaking terms with the Transit Commission. He said that he had achieved social recognition from the commission, and that it had borne fruit. It was through he referred to an elevator that is to be built in his district to connect with the west side subway.

Yesterday a communication from the commission asking for an appropriation of $270,000 for the extension of the Jackson Avenue subway station in Long Island City was read. No member of the committee knew whether the city would have to pay for the entire cost of the work or whether the Interborough Rapid Transit Company was to pay half of it. Pending enlightenment, the communication was referred back to the calendar.

President Maurice E. Connolly of Queens urged quick action because the station at Jackson Avenue was built for three-car instead of ten-car trains, which are now running. He said it kept five policemen busy during the rush hours to protect people from injury.

GRANTS LARGER SHARE TO NEW ENGLAND ROADS

Interstate Commerce Commission Increases Their Proportion of Joint Shipment Revenues.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—New England railroads were granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission today the right to an increased proportion of revenues received by them in association with other railroads on joint shipments. The division assigned the New England roads by the decision will increase their proportion by approximately 15 per cent. on most of the shipments coming under the ruling.

The increased division was ordered put into effect on March 1, with the Bangor & Aroostook the only New England carrier excluded from sharing the increase. Its division of joint rates continues as under the present arrangement.

The New England carriers raised the question by bringing a complaint before the commission against all trunk lines with which they are associated in interstate transportation, declaring that the terminal services which they render in originating and receiving shipments have become far more expensive in recent years than in former years. They were unable to secure from any volume of traffic, their representatives asserted, earnings sufficient to pay fixed charges on tremendously expensive terminal installations and the expenses of rendering service which they were called to meet in accepting the joint business. They asked, therefore, in addition to the rate increases granted in 1920, that their proportion of the joint rates be increased out of the amount now received by roads in other parts of the country.

This contention the commission upheld by a divided vote, Commissioners Hall, Daniels and Esch dissenting in the opinion as announced.

In applying the decision the commission's order says the New England roads in the future shall receive out of joint rates 115 per cent. of the amount which they now secure, and where rate adjustments does not allow this rule to secure them a 15 per cent. increase a special arrangement is ordered to get an approximately equivalent amount.

Local executives of the transportation systems involved in the New England rate decision refused yesterday to comment on the decision, which was not announced until long after the close of the Stock Exchange. Whether or not the 15 per cent. increase granted will result in the extra revenue which the roads have said they need for profitable operation is conjectural, executives point out.

"I shall want time to study the full decision and discuss it with our committee of trunk line officials before I make any comment," said William H. Williams, Vice President of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, and Chairman of the committee. No meeting of the committee has been decided upon as yet, according to Mr. Williams.

For several weeks it had been rumored in Wall Street that the commission's decision would be favorable to the New England railroads. On July 6, 1921, the commission issued its first decision on the matter, contending that it could not pass on the subject as a whole but that a redivision of rates would have to be considered for each New England road individually. On Dec. 29, 1921, the case was reargued.

In their original representations the New England roads desired an arrangement which would permit them $25,000,000 additional revenues annually which, they contended, they needed to adequately operate their properties. Officials here made no computation as to what the commission's present order would amount to.

It is believed in certain railroad quarters that the trunk lines will take the matter to court and test the legality of some of the issues involved.

WILL VOTE FOR PORT PROJECT

Assembly Republicans Pledge Support, Meaning Passage at Conference

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—At a conference of the Republican members of the Assembly this afternoon it was voted, almost unanimously, to pass the Meyer-Mastick bill carrying out the New York Port development plan. Assemblyman Caulfield, Republican, of Kings, reserved the right to offer amendments carrying out the Democratic suggestion that two of the three commissioners be recommended to the Governor for appointment by New York City.

This means that the Port Authority bill will be passed as a party measure. It was on the calendar in the Assembly today for second reading, but was put on Wednesday's calendar. The prospect is that the measure will be passed in the Assembly the first part of next week. In the Senate the measure will come up for final action next Tuesday and will be passed.

$4,000,000 IN MORTGAGES.

Metropolitan Life Announces Building and Farm Loans.

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company yesterday authorized mortgage loans amounting to $4,000,000. Of this something more than a million and a half were on dwellings and apartment houses to accommodate 473 families, and $1,340,000 were farm loans. Nearly all of the loans in New York City were to construct twelve apartment houses in the Borough of Queens, to provide for 124 families. Other building loans were widely scattered, being in New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, Nebraska and Connecticut. The farm loans were scattered throughout the Far West and South—being made in Mississippi, Georgia, South Dakota, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Iowa.

The rate of interest in New York City is 6 per cent., in all other places at the rate prevailing in that locality.

REPUBLICAN WOMEN MEET.

The following were chosen to serve on the executive committee: Mrs. Joseph H. Choate Jr., Mrs. Alice M. Kelly, Mrs. William M. Seabury, Mrs. Frank S. Witherbee and Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn.

Mrs. Willard read a letter from Governor Miller expressing his regret at being unable to be present at the meeting, and extending his congratulations on the record the committee has made.

APPRAISAL OF TRANSIT LINES NEARLY FINISHED

Figures to Be Made Public Soon and Hearing on Consolidation Resumed.

The work of appraising the railroad properties in this city, it was learned yesterday, is virtually finished. The job began on May 6, when the appraisers were appointed by the Transit Commission. It was said then that the preliminary work would be completed within six months.

What the figures show is not yet revealed, but it has been estimated roughly that the outstanding securities of the various traction companies aggregate a face value of $1,200,000,000, and that this valuation will be found at least twenty-five per cent. less. This reduction, it was said, represented the most conservative estimate.

The appraisal, it was said, would disclose the cost of replacement, compared with the original cost, on the basis of the value of the properties in 1914, and on the present value. Small attention, it was said, would be paid to the present cost of replacement. All the items are subject to deduction for depreciation.

Chairman McAneny, of the commission, is confined to his home because of a severe cold, and Clarence J. Shearn, the commission's special counsel, is busy with an important law case in the Surrogate's Court. Mr. Shearn, it was said, would be free to resume his work with the commission next week. If Mr. McAneny also is able to resume work, the appraisal figures will be made public soon and the hearings before the commission, on its plan for consolidating the lines, will be resumed and continued until the statutory plan is ready for submission to the public.

DICKENS SALE ENDS WITH $9,669 TOTAL

Top Price, $800, Paid by James F. Drake for Work Attributed to Edgar Allan Poe.

One Thousand Additional Plates Bound Up With Copy Bid in by B. A. Ball.

The Charles Dickens collection owned by the late William Glyde Wilkins of Pittsburgh, Pa., was concluded yesterday at the Anderson Galleries. The session brought $5,133.25. The grand total was $9,669.

The highest price of the day and of the entire sale was $800 paid by James F. Drake for "English Notes Intended for Very Extensive Circulation. By Quaries Quickens, Esq., Boston, 1842." This work is supposed to have been written by Edgar Allan Poe in answer to Charles Dickens's "American Notes." There was considerable competition for the item.

Brentano's paid $420 for the first octavo edition in original parts of "Oliver Twist," London, 1846. This edition is said to be very rare. The same bidder gave $205 for a first edition in the original parts of "The Posthumous Papers of the Pickwick Club," London, 1836-37.

William R. Hearst obtained for $120 "Master Humphrey's Clock," first issue, London, 1840-41. Accompanying this book were thirty-two plates by Gibson and six plates by Darley. Mr. Hearst also paid $300 for another copy of "The Pickwick Club," extra illustrated with nearly 300 engraved scenes and views and places associated with the work, duplicate plates, etc., many on India paper. He also obtained for $130 an extensive collection of portraits of Charles Dickens, about 300 in all.

James F. Drake gave $120 for a first issue in the original parts of "Nicholas Nickleby," London, 1838-39. B. A. Ball paid $510 for a copy of "Pickwick," London, 1887, supposed to contain the largest and most complete collection of Pickwick illustrations ever bound up with a copy of the work, containing nearly 1,000 additional plates.

Ergee & Co. paid $365 for a first issue of "A Tale of Two Cities," in the original parts, London, 1859. It has advertisements, including that of Thackeray regarding the first number of The Cornhill Magazine. Accompanying the book were a series of wood cuts by John McLenan, two plates by Darley, and eight wood cuts by Eytinge.

WAR STEEL PLANT BID IN.

Failed Birmingham Concern Sold to U. S. Shipping Board Agent.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 14.—The Birmingham Steel Corporation, a Government aid plant, was today bid in at Federal bankruptcy sale by Lake Jones, agent for the United States Shipping Board. His bid was $7,000 and assumption of liens for $123,000.

The concern was organized by H. L. Brittain and others of New York during the war, making shapes for ships built at Mobile, and subsequently engaged in the general steel fabrication business.

Inability to secure settlement with the Government was given as ground for bankruptcy proceedings filed last October. The plant is new and modern, with a monthly capacity of 3,000 tons of fabricated steel.

It is reported that, if the sale is confirmed, former owners will offer to purchase it from the Government.

Spanish Tariff Under Fire.

MADRID, Feb. 14.—Commenting upon the new customs tariff, the Imperial today calls the new duties "a perfect work for making living dearer." "For several months," it continues, "until the magnitude of the damage done makes a remedy essential, the nation must suffer under higher costs through difficulties placed in the way of importation of many products which have become almost indispensable through habit."

Wants Town Put in Receivership.

REGINA, Sask., Feb. 14.—Proceedings to throw the city of Swift Current into the hands of a receiver were begun today by the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The bank alleged an indebtedness of $270,000 and asked that a receiver be named to take over collection of delinquent taxes for the last six years.

FIRST AID TO SALESMEN

Direct-Mail does NOT mean the elimination of personal selling—nor the dismissal of salesmen—nor cessation of display advertising—etc., etc.

In fact, in many cases, it means quite the reverse.

* * *

Direct-Mail lays a foundation for salesmen by sorting the "hot" and "cold" prospects; it carpets the way by preparing a prospective before a call—familiarizing him with the House, its Goods, its Customs, etc.

* * *

PROGRAMMED MAILINGS, reaching your prospects or customers before and after your salesmen have called, lend a tone of efficiency, co-operation and organization that is bound to build prestige.

* * *

Space does not permit detailed description of our various forms of Direct-Mail Programs. Perhaps it is sufficient to say that each client receives a private program—designed to satisfy his particular requirements.

* * *

DINNER TO HELP WILSON FUND DRIVE

Will Mark Opening of Intensive Work to Raise New York State's Quota.

HUNDREDS OF ACCEPTANCES

Senator Harrison of Mississippi and Ex-Ambassador Gerard to Be Among the Speakers.

A national report on the status of the campaign to raise $1,000,000 to establish the Woodrow Wilson Foundation for awards for distinguished public service, will be made tonight at the Foundation Dinner to be held in the Hotel Commodore. The dinner is to mark the opening of the New York State effort to obtain founders for the awards.

Federal Judge Martin T. Manton, Chairman of the committee, said that Augustus Thomas, playwright, would be toastmaster and that the speakers would be Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany; Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue, and Mrs. Charles L. Tiffany.

Hundreds of acceptances to the dinner, said Judge Manton, have been received from all parts of the State. The reservations include John G. Agar, Lathrop Brown, Joseph F. Tumulty, Robert Bridges, George Gordon Battle, Martin Conboy, Colonel Francis G. Caffey, Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge, Mark Eisner, Herbert S. Houston, Robert Underwood Johnson, Cyrus C. Miller, Charles D. Osborne, Mrs. Maxwell E. Perkins, Miss Caroline Ruutz-Rees, Mr. and Mrs. Philip A. Rorty, Harriman N. Simmons and Martin Vogel.

"It is the plan of the Executive Committee," said Judge Manton, "that the Foundation Dinner shall mark the opening of the first intensive work to raise this State's quota of $300,000. Many of this group have already made contributions to the foundation and others, it is being expected, will report contributions at the dinner."

Among the contributors to the foundation yesterday through the women's committee headed by Mrs. Montgomery Hare were R. Fulton Cutting, Lewis Morgan, Mrs. Franklin William Cutcheon, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Munroe and Mrs. William Dette, each of whom gave $100. Others who donated were:

SCHOOL REPORT STIRS SOUTH ORANGE FOLK

Education Board Says One-third of Children Are Undernourished, Mostly Those of Rich.

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 14.—When the annual report of the Board of Education was read tonight, much comment was heard because the members said that at least one-third of the school children were undernourished and that a "mother's care cannot be replaced by a servant's judgment." It is expected that the report will result in the calling of a special meeting when the members and parents will discuss the subject.

Margaret M. Prior, district clerk, read the report to more than four hundred parents of children. The report said:

"Improper nutrition is our greatest evil. At least one-third of our pupils are undernourished, not up to the normal weight and height. There is more of it in the homes of the well-to-do than in the homes of those in moderate circumstances. A wholesome diet under a mother's care cannot be replaced by a servant's judgment or a child's whim.

"The main trouble is in the fact that children do not eat enough vegetables and drink enough milk. Our children can take full advantage of the opportunities offered only when properly fed and without serious defects. Because it is more important than anything else, we ought not only to safeguard the health of children, but to try and deliver them at the end of their school life better physically than they would have been if we had not taken charge of them."

Oles Throws Away Beer Petition.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Feb. 14.—When a communication from the City Clerk of Davenport, Iowa, was laid before City Council here last night, asking a resolution favorable to beer and light wines, the Council referred it to Mayor George L. Oles, who settled the request for good by throwing it into the waste basket.

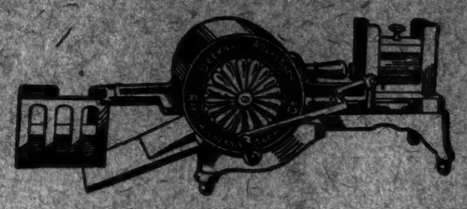
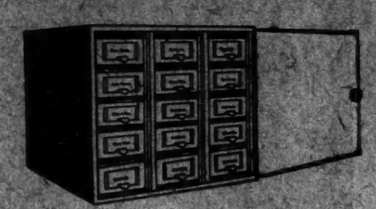
Start Your Addressing System This Way



This is the No. 4 Rotary Belknap Addressor, a hand machine for small businesses. Speed 1,500 to 1,800 per hour.



This is a Belknap 15-Drawer Metal Cabinet in which the Printing Stencils are filed

FOR the business of modest size, or the one whose addressing requirements are limited, a Belknap Hand Addressor and a single filing cabinet will provide the correct start for an efficient addressing system.

We are going out of our way to emphasize this point, because some business men still persist in considering the important subject of Addressing only in terms of large equipments and lists of a million names.

It is not necessary to be a Curtis Publishing Company, or a mail order house like the National Cloak & Suit Company to employ the Belknap System of Addressing profitably.

If the handling of lists and the writing of names on envelopes, wrappers, statements, order forms, shipping tags, tax notices, receipts, etc., is a part of the day's work in your business you need a Belknap System.

More than that you are paying for one, too—continually, unendingly and uselessly—in leaks and losses due to old-fashioned, time-and-money wasting methods that ought to be stopped.

Stop them! If you own a typewriter, and employ a stenographer to operate it, you are half-equipped for a Belknap System. If your business isn't too big, one Belknap Hand Addressor and one filing cabinet as pictured above will round out an efficient system of addressing for you.

And even if your business calls for a larger machine like the Belknap Indexograph, with an addressing speed of 2,000 to 4,000 an hour, you ought to know it and own it. You are paying for it anyhow, and will continue to do so until you install one and it begins to earn its cost times over—and save.

Thousands of concerns in over 250 different lines of business, some big concerns and some small, have applied Belknap Systems to their Addressing problems with economy and success.

One of our expert Service Men will be glad to call and discuss the adaptability of our system to your business—without cost or obligation to you.

Phone Gramercy 6363, or write today for an appointment with one of these men. There's a descriptive book that is yours for the asking, too.

When Two Leading American Dentists Developed a Dentifrice for the Ladies of the Court

How They Showed the World the Prime Essential of Tooth Lustre

ONE was an American from Maine, who was dentist to a European Court for more than a generation—a scientist, courtly but democratic.

The other was a leading dental scientist and bacteriologist of international reputation. It was this scientist who discovered and isolated mouth germs. He died before the World War started, but his books are still standard text books in the best dental colleges.

Members of an Illustrious Coterie

The two men were members of that historic coterie of American dentists of whom it is said that "no matter what utterance came from the mouths of the Kings and Premiers who ruled Europe, these Americans kept those mouths in order."

These two leaders in dental thought habitually wrote prescriptions for ladies of the court, court functionaries, and other prominent patients.

From this experience, and after years of joint laboratory work, they finally evolved the Formula of Kolynos Dental Cream. This formula was presented to the dental world, by one of these men, in a paper read in London before The American Dental Society of Europe.

The formula has been repeatedly published in leading dental and medical journals. For the first time in the history of dentistry, it was shown that grit in a dental preparation was not only unnecessary, but to be severely condemned, and that the elimination of mouth bacteria was the prime essential of tooth lustre and mouth hygiene.

Dentists and Doctors

This prescription—the formula of Kolynos, is today known to and respected by dentists and physicians the world over.

The dissolving of the fatty film by Kolynos Dental Cream, the elimination of mouth bacteria, the polishing of teeth without the use of grit, are today a familiar story to dentists.

Because of the hygienic mouth condition which it produces Kolynos Dental Cream has been exceedingly useful to professional men, hospitals and health boards, in all enlightened countries. It is also used and prescribed by leading dental surgeons in their treatment of pyorrhea.

This Kolynos Dental Cream, first developed for the ladies of the court and used by them to preserve the brilliant lustre of their teeth, has become a world-wide necessity, now being extensively sold in seventy-five countries.

Use Kolynos at least twice a day according to directions. Have lustrous teeth and mouth happiness, knowing that scientific sincerity is back of the preparation you are using.

MINERS TO STRIKE IF WAGES ARE CUT

Coal Workers Willing to Renew Present Wage Contract to Avoid a Walkout.

PUT IT UP TO OPERATORS

SEEK SUPPORT OF PUBLIC

Report to Convention Recommends New Provisions to Eliminate Conditions Called Unjust.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 14.—Danger of a general strike in the coal mining industry is believed to have been minimized today by the action of the Wage Scale Committee in submitting recommendations to the special wage convention of the United Mine Workers of America that no wage increases be asked, but that the miners "insist that the present wage schedules be maintained" in the bituminous coal fields.

Declaring that the present annual earnings of the coal miners of America are inadequate and much below a decent living wage, the committee's declaration said:

"We do not believe the public asks that its fuel needs be supplied at the expense of a degraded citizenship, accompanied by human misery, starvation and want, superinduced by inadequate annual earnings paid to those who mine coal. The cost in sacrifice and human wretchedness is too great."

Pledge to Follow Non-Agreement.

Recommendation was made for a general strike if no agreement is reached, such action being subject to a referendum vote of the membership. In the meantime a policy committee would be organized to make preparations for the walk-out.

Government intervention, if a strike seems imminent, is expected by the mine workers' officials, although they have not received any specific information on this matter from the Department of Labor or the Department of Commerce. Two Commissioners of Conciliation from the Department of Labor—H. Lyman Sayre and W. J. Rogers—are here as observers and probably will make a full report on the convention to the Government officials.

Unless the coal operators of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois recede from their present stand they will meet the miners in joint conference in accordance with the terms of the interstate wage agreement, the wage Committee's report said, the operators must "stand publicly charged with breach of contract as the miners regard this agreement as a moral obligation just as binding as any legal obligation ever assumed."

The Scale Committee's report provided that any scale negotiated must be subject to a referendum vote of the membership or affected for approval before it is finally accepted."

Check-off System Ignored.

No mention of the check-off system was made, union officials said, because the present contract carries with it this method of collecting union dues and it is not regarded as an issue. They entirely ignore the threats of the mine operators to discontinue the check-off after April 1.

The convention was urged to ratify the wage demands of the anthracite workers, calling for a 20 per cent. increase for contract miners and a $5.20 minimum day rate, and "pledge to the anthracite mine workers our power and influence in aiding them to the fulfillment of their demands."

Immediately upon presentation of the Scale Committee's report the convention was adjourned by President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers until tomorrow in order that the report might be printed and distributed to the delegates. The Credentials Committee by that time will have completed the seating of more than 2,000 delegates representing every mining community in the United States.

The expected fight over the status of Alexander Howat, deposed chieftain of the Kansas "rebel" miners, failed to materialize when the administration's provisional representative delegates from the Kansas district were seated. Howat and about 150 of his followers were not permitted to take seats on the convention floor, but occupied the gallery. They are expected to register their protest tomorrow.

Besides recommending retention of the present wage scales the Scale Committee's report recommended that inequitable differentials within and between districts, unfair working conditions and internal difference, wherever existing, be adjusted upon a fair and satisfactory basis and, the joint conferences in the respective districts be empowered to make such adjustment.

Conditions Recommended.

Other conditions recommended by the committee were:

That all new agreements be based upon the "eight-hour day under ground," because of mining hazards.

That overtime be paid at the rate of time and one-half, with double time on Sundays and holidays.

That "best efforts" be made to obtain weekly pay.

That the automatic penalty clauses be eliminated from wage agreements.

That the next wage scale cover a period of two years.

That "the maximum in the matter of a strike and accepting wage contracts is a new phase of the situation, the convention heretofore having exercised supreme authority both as to wages and strikes."

Although considered a mild demand in comparison with the "bank to bank six-hour day" clause adopted two years ago at the Cleveland wage convention, the request for an "eight-hour day underground" is one of the most radical of the miners' proposals. Acceptance of this by the operators would mean that a miner would begin drawing pay at the moment he entered the mine, although he did no work perhaps for a half hour. It is taking him that long to reach the section of the mine where he was digging coal. At present the miner has to spend in excess of eight hours in the mine, and in many instances more than nine hours, as it takes him from 45 to 60 minutes to reach his work.

The demand for overtime pay is a new one. No extra pay is given for overtime work now. The men are paid every two weeks, and because of present financial conditions and inability to get credit weekly pay is asked.

The automatic penalty clauses which the miners want eliminated from the agreement were inserted by the United States Bituminous Coal Commission to hasten both operators and miners in the event of contract violations. The miners contend that these penalties have been applied only to them, and not to the operators.

Early Vote for Daylight Saving.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—The Daylight Saving ordinance was unanimously approved by the City Counsel's Law Committee today. The bill provides that all municipal clocks be turned ahead one hour at 2 A. M. the last Sunday in April and back again the first Sunday in September.

Begins Prison Term at 93 For the Stealing of Chickens

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—At the age of 93 James Bundy began serving today a five-year prison term for stealing chickens.

Since he was 46 Bundy has spent much of his time in the Eastern Penitentiary here and in nearby county jails. His alleged offenses range from pocketbook snatching and corner lounging to burglary and attempts to kill. Upon each return to the penitentiary he is hailed by the long-term prisoners as the "Dean of Convicts."

When last released in 1916, after serving a three-year term, Bundy told the authorities that he had determined to "go straight" the rest of his life.

DRIVEN FROM HOME BY PIANO LESSONS

16-Year-Old Pelham Girl Played Hungry Orphan and Won Bootblack's Sympathy.

WORKED AS A SERVANT

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Feb. 14.—The platonic romance of Jimmie, the gallant bootblack, and Constance, the sixteen-year-old heiress (in a very modest way), ended here this afternoon and all was forgiven. The girl's mother, prostrated in their Pelham (N. Y.) home since the girl disappeared on Feb. 9, is waiting with aching arms to take her back. Her brother, Dr. Frederick Hulsmann Jr., of New York City and Pelham, has adjudged Jimmy's conduct that of a chivalrous young squire of dames.

Jimmy at his stand near the New Haven Railroad Station here tonight was offering to "shine da shoe, boss," just as if playing knight to an errant lady in distress was part of his every-day routine. Jimmie isn't going to let it darken his life, even if he does know now that an innocent-eyed young thing who appeals to you for help because her parents are dead and she is hungry and homeless may be a little fabricator who has fled a comfortable home because she just couldn't stand those old piano lessons.

Constance has some talent as a singer and loves music, but the drudgery of finger exercise was dreadful. When the time came for her to start for Manhattan on last Thursday to take a lesson at 145 West Eighty-fifth Street with her older sister, Helen, Constance paid a surreptitious visit to the village grocer in Pelham and borrowed $5. When Helen emerged from her lesson, Constance had disappeared.

The Hulsmanns appealed to the Pelham and to the New York State police, and then to the newspapers. Dr. Hulsmann, who has an office at 118 East Forty-second Street, Manhattan, visited the homes of distant relatives in Mahopac, Putnam County, without success. Then Arthur Pierson of Mahopac got two letters asking him to go to Sound Beach because things were lonesome for Constance. Dr. Hulsmann and Pierson hurried to Sound Beach, only to learn that the girl had gone to Stamford to see Jimmie. Detective Sergeant Heffernan helped them find her near the railroad station. Constance played the game to the last, crying as her brother, her friend and the detective approached:

"Save me, Jimmie, save me from them! Don't let them take me away!"

Jimmie's acquaintance with the girl had begun when he found her crying at the station on last Friday, after she had spent her first night with an elderly couple in Glenbrook, Stamford. He had been so moved by the appeal of the wandering orphan that he had loaned her painfully accumulated nickels to pay for her board and room at the Rockland Hotel.

Constance was determined not to be a burden to Jimmie. So she had become Mary Thorne and had gone to work as a servant girl in Sound Beach. It was better than that old piano, anyway.

But Jimmie didn't see his way clear to save her from three grown men. So Mrs. Mabel Cook, Constance's aunt, and the three men took her in charge. They will take her home tomorrow.

DENIES OPERA SHORTAGE.

Chicago Company Says This Season's Accounts Are Correct.

Clark A. Shaw, business manager of the Chicago Opera Association, denied yesterday a story which had appeared in several New York newspapers to the effect that there was a shortage in the box office accounts of that organization's recent season in Chicago.

"The report which New York papers received from Chicago was evidently a revival of statements regarding the season of a year ago, when there was a shortage," said Mr. Shaw. "Nothing of the sort has happened this season. C. D. Schleinman, the certified accountant who audits the books of the Chicago Opera, found the treasurer absolutely correct in his returns on the ten-week season in Chicago ended in January and on the New York season up to date."

Mr. Schleinman, who is in New York, verified Mr. Shaw's statement last night at the Manhattan Opera House.

ELECT S. MALLET-PREVOST.

Pan-American Society Chooses Him President to Succeed Moore.

S. Mallet-Prevost was elected President of the Pan-American Society of the United States at the annual meeting held yesterday in the Chamber of Commerce, 65 Liberty Street. He succeeds John Bassett Moore, recently elected to the International Court of Justice.

Announcement was made that the society had obtained quarters at 80 Broad Street. Plans are under way to make the headquarters available to Latin-American visitors to this country, it was said.

Other officers elected were J. G. White, First Vice President; John Barrett, Second Vice President; James Motley, Third Vice President, and Morris K. Parker, Treasurer.

FIGHT FOR RIGHT TO STRIKE.

Central Council Discusses Plans to Combat Measures at Albany.

The Executive Committee of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and Vicinity met last evening in the Pulitzer Building and discussed plans to fight the impending anti-strike bills in the Legislature, particularly the Duell-Miller bill, sponsored by the New York Board of Trade and Transportation.

Following the meeting William F. Kehoe, Secretary, issued a statement calling on "every worker and every fair-minded citizen to take the measurement of the bill. The bill, he said, was "without a doubt an affronter to the constitutional rights of the workers and citizens of our State."

HYLAN LAUDS HIS RECORD AS MAYOR

Tells Florida Rotarians New York City Now Is Run for "the People."

PRAISES "MALIGNED" ONES

And Then He Hears Grover Whalen Put Him Forward for the Presidency.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 14.—Mayor John F. Hylan of New York made a speech today at the luncheon of the Rotary Club here in which he praised Charles F. Murphy, William R. Hearst and Rodman Wanamaker and his own administration of the affairs of New York City. Following this speech Grover Whalen told the club the country soon would need for President "a man of the type of John F. Hylan."

"I want to say to you," said Mayor Hylan, who was warmly greeted by the Rotarians, "that I never worked so hard in my life as I have in the last four years. New York was permeated with a class of people who seemed to feel that the government of a city ought to be run in their interest. The public utility interests in New York have felt for the last fifty years that they had a right to ride roughshod over and conduct the affairs of the city regardless of the duly elected public officials.

"Our Police Department had been practically in the hands of the underworld since the days of Burns in New York, until I placed at the head of the Police Department a practical man who knew the police business, and we have driven out of New York many of the most vicious, disorderly resorts that could exist in any city.

Points Out Three Maligned Men.

"In the administration just prior to mine many vile resorts existed there. They were closed up, and they will remain closed up while I am Mayor, with the help of men that are criticised by many of the papers of New York City. And I am going to mention the names of these men.

"We have carried on the business and the administration of New York City to the best interests of all the people, regardless of party and regardless of creed. There is one man that I want to call your attention to, who has absolutely been maligned more than any other one man, in fact, I might call to your attention two men who have been maligned more by New York papers than any other two men in the city. And I want to assure you all that these men have given me the greatest possible aid, the greatest possible co-operation, to the end that a good administration be conducted in the interests of the people.

"In fact there are three men who have co-operated—one a Republican, one an Independent Democrat and another an organization Democrat. I refer to the leader of the Democratic Party in New York City, Charles F. Murphy, who is a regular Democrat, and I refer to William Randolph Hearst, who is an Independent Democrat, and I refer to Rodman Wanamaker, who is a Republican.

"I have had the co-operation of these men, regardless of the abuse that has been in the public papers about them. I have had their co-operation to the end that affairs of the city be conducted in the interest of the people.

"There has been a great deal about Mr. Murphy, who is the political leader, and I can say to you men here that I never met Mr. Murphy, except on two or three occasions, before I was elected Mayor of the City of New York, and there is no man who has done more to aid in rendering service to the people of the city, to aid me, than this same man, Charles F. Murphy, leader of that organization that is more or less criticised, known as Tammany Hall.

"And now we die Mr. Hearst has aided me, and so has Rodman Wanamaker."

Says He Was 'Mired and Untarnyered.'

After describing the various departments in New York, saying that he worked from 8:30 o'clock in the morning until 6 and even 10 o'clock at night, and sometimes 1 o'clock in the morning, and declaring that it cost about "a million a day" to run New York, Mr. Hylan talked about "being mired and Untermyered."

"We made great progress there in every department," said the Mayor, "and we are bringing the Government of the City of New York back to the people, so the people will have control of the Government. And it will be run in their interest, and not in the interest of the special privilege-seeking interests.

"As I said before, these interests seek to control the affairs of the city. The people elected me to serve their interests and I have endeavored to serve their interest. Notwithstanding that, I have been importuned and threatened, I have been mired and Untermyered and overshadowed and investigated by Grand Juries—all sorts of things to break down the policy that we started to pursue.

"But I stood steadfastly to the policy that we laid down, and I want to say to you men right now that I am going to keep on in my policy of conducting the affairs of the City of New York in the interest of the people in the next four years, as I have done in the last four years.

"I want to thank you for having the pleasure of addressing you, and I want to say to you that when you come to New York, if you will call at the Mayor's office, I will see that you get the freedom of the City of New York."

Mr. Whalen was introduced as the Commissioner of Plants and "a man who lives very close to nature."

Mr. Whalen explained that the plants and structures of which he was Commissioner were bridges, ferries, trolley cars, buses and "a few odds and ends like that."

"I don't know what picture people in the West and in other parts of the country have of the recent election in New York," said Mr. Whalen, "I find the sentiment has been so strong, such a peculiar pen picture has been painted of the Mayor of New York, that views one will get of him as one travels throughout the country are almost as numerous as the number of States we have in the Union. But as I view him and I say this without receiving his approval—I feel that he is the Abraham Lincoln of the Democratic Party.

"We now have a government of, by and for the people. We have in the present Mayor of New York a public official whom the country is watching, watching because the people of the United States might find it necessary to call upon him some day to assume the task of the leadership of the nation.

"We feel in the City of New York that the post of Mayor of our city is second in importance and power only to the Presidency of the United States. And the time is not far distant when the country will need a man of the type of John F. Hylan to lead it. They we will not be suffering, or we will not suffer, the credit of the United States to be used for bankrupt nations of Europe, and we will not use the man power of this country except for our own country's interests."

LESS MEAT EATEN.

City Consumption Drops 25 Pounds Per Capita in the Last Five Years.

The consumption of meat has fallen twenty-five pounds per capita in the last five years in New York City, Health Commissioner Royal S. Copeland told the members of the Society of Restaurateurs at their meeting in Janssen's Hofbrau House, Broadway and Thirtieth Street, yesterday afternoon.

"There are 12,000 butcher shops in this city," he said. "Last year the total amount of meat condemned was but 300,000 pounds. There is no city in the world where food is so well taken care of, cooked and served as in New York, and the credit for that is largely due to your hotel and restaurant men."

No Settlement Near in Textile Strike; New England Workers Expect Long Contest

BOSTON, Feb. 14.—The second day of the strike of operatives in cotton mills in New Hampshire textile centres and in Lowell, Mass., passed without disorder or any indication of a move toward settlement. The fact that the workers in New Hampshire were as much disturbed by the increase of six hours in their working week as by the wage reduction, averaging 20 per cent., which went into effect in many New England mills this week, was indicated in a statement by James Starr, Vice President of the United Textile Workers of America, who declared that the operatives would hold out against the return of the fifty-four-hour week if it took six months.

The Amoskeag mill of Manchester, employing about 15,000 workers and the largest mill affected by the strike, is shut down, together with the Stark mill.

Indications at Nashua were that the mill management was preparing for a long struggle. Orders were given to cancel all shipments of coal and of cotton.

Two cotton yarn mills at Fitchburg were added today to the list of those which have announced wage reductions. The employes continued at work.

There was no call today for the services of the National Guard troops held in readiness in Rhode Island to quell possible disturbance in connection with the strikes in that State, which have been in progress for three weeks.

BRUNSWICK, Me., Feb. 14.—The Cabot Manufacturing Company, in whose mills here a wage cut of 20 per cent. became effective this week, announced today a 25 per cent. reduction in rents of tenements owned by the company and occupied by operatives.

NINE MEN ACCUSED IN THEATRE COLLAPSE

LAX METHODS CONDEMNED

Coroner's Jury Calls for Careful Examination of All Other Washington Theatres.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Nine men were ordered held for the Grand Jury by the coroner's jury which brought in a verdict tonight in connection with the collapse of the roof of the Knickerbocker Motion Picture Theatre Jan. 8, resulting in the death of ninety-eight persons.

The nine men, all of Washington, were:

R. G. Geare, the architect of the building.

J. H. Ford, the engineer who designed the roof structure.

Frank L. Wagner, the builder.

Donald Wallace, General Superintendent of Construction.

R. G. Fletcher, Superintendent of the Hammett Fireproofing Company, which built the walls.

John L. McDonald, the contractor who erected the steel.

Thomas L. Costigan, engineer, and Computer for the District of Columbia Building Department, who passed on the plans.

Julian R. Dowaman, the Assistant Building Inspector when the building was constructed.

The inquest was begun last Tuesday and scores of witnesses were heard before the jury began its deliberations behind closed doors. It was out seven hours before it returned its findings.

The jury declared that "the collapse of the roof was due to faulty designing and construction and inadequate supervision and inspection."

It also submitted a number of recommendations, one being that "all theatres and places where the public assembles be closed and kept closed until such time as their safety is assured."

The jury recommended that there be a thorough revision of the building code in the District of Columbia, with heavy penalties provided for violation of any of its clauses.

It noted that "no special qualifications are essential in filling the office of Building Inspector, that the testimony of witnesses from the office of the Building Inspector, with one exception, shows a lack of knowledge of conditions and proper supervision of buildings erected in the District, that the reports made by field inspectors were unintelligent and that little or no attention was paid to them, they apparently being made only as a matter of form and not with any idea of following up, or checking defects, showing the lamentable lack of appreciation of responsibility."

It is also noted, the jury added, that many of the witnesses testifying in the case have done so with much evidident unwillingness and mental reservation."

It was recommended "that the city Fire Department be equipped with oxy-acetylene torches and blanks in jackscrewlights and such other equipment as would be needed by a wrecking crew in an emergency, the lack of which equipment seriously handicapped the rescue of the victims of the Knickerbocker disaster."

District Attorney Peyton Gordon said tonight that the case would be submitted to the Grand Jury "as soon as possible." That body is in session now and the opinion was expressed informally that it would be to the interest of the people in the next four years, as I have done in the last four years.

"I want to thank you for having the pleasure of addressing you, and I want to say to you that when you come to New York, if you will call at the Mayor's office, I will see that you get the freedom of the City of New York."

Mr. Whalen was introduced as the Commissioner of Plants and "a man who lives very close to nature."

Mr. Whalen explained that the plants and structures of which he was Commissioner were bridges, ferries, trolley cars, buses and "a few odds and ends like that."

"I don't know what picture people in the West and in other parts of the country have of the recent election in New York," said Mr. Whalen, "I find the sentiment has been so strong, such a peculiar pen picture has been painted of the Mayor of New York, that views one will get of him as one travels throughout the country are almost as numerous as the number of States we have in the Union. But as I view him and I say this without receiving his approval—I feel that he is the Abraham Lincoln of the Democratic Party.

"We now have a government of, by and for the people. We have in the present Mayor of New York a public official whom the country is watching, watching because the people of the United States might find it necessary to call upon him some day to assume the task of the leadership of the nation.

"We feel in the City of New York that the post of Mayor of our city is second in importance and power only to the Presidency of the United States. And the time is not far distant when the country will need a man of the type of John F. Hylan to lead it. They we will not be suffering, or we will not suffer, the credit of the United States to be used for bankrupt nations of Europe, and we will not use the man power of this country except for our own country's interests."

PLEADS FOR PERSONAL TAX.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—The Hylan Administration sent a spokesman to oppose the Davenport-Judson bill providing for the repeal of the personal property tax at a joint hearing today on that and thirty-one other tax measures before the Senate and Assembly Committees on Taxation and Retrenchment. Tax Commissioner Henry M. Goldfogle was the Mayor's representative.

"This tax yields in the vicinity of $8,000,000 to the City of New York and is levied chiefly against the millionaires who erect mansions on Fifth Avenue and can well afford to pay," said Mr. Goldfogle. "At any rate, they appear to be able to afford to collect rich art treasures for their personal pleasure and profit. The only fair and just way that the great wealth tied up in such luxuries and personal property generally should be made to pay a share of taxation that otherwise would fall upon poorer taxpayers of other classes."

Oh," said Senator Davenport, "the City of New York has a cow giving rich milk and it was to protect that cow from going dry by continuing this form of tax levy that we decided to do away with it. We have in the place a 4 per cent. tax on unincorporated business, which will more than make up for any loss through discontinuing the personal property tax."

Commissioner Goldfogle objected to this tax on the ground that it would fall most heavily on the small business man. Figures were submitted to show that with this tax in force incomes from unincorporated business of $10,000 a year would be subjected to 7.3 per cent. and where the income exceeded $50,000 it would be subject to 27 per cent., including the surtax.

Senator Davenport pointed out that business men with incomes under $5,000 annually would be exempt, as would also professional men, and was not decided that the tax will fall heavily on big banking houses in Wall Street, such as J. P. Morgan & Co. and Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

Legislative leaders said that most of the bills recommended by the joint legislative committee on taxation would be enacted.

NEIGHBORS DEMAND AID FOR WAR ORPHAN

Widowed Mother, an Ammunition Worker, Killed Three Years Ago by Army Truck.

C. P. THORNE TAKES A HAND

National Surety Co. President Says Not One Federal Agency Has Lifted a Finger in Boy's Behalf.

A speeding army ambulance killed Katherine O'Meila three years ago. She was a young widow, doing her bit as an inspector of munitions for the American Can Company. The woman's body was taken to the West 100th Street Police Station, then to the Morgue and at last to her home at 171 West Ninety-ninth Street. There it lay three days before the funeral, while neighbors tried to make Charlie, 5 years old, understand why mother was so still.

Today Charlie is an orphan of eight. Things haven't been very rosy for him, but he does not complain. Neighbors, looking into the boy's future, deprived of the love of a mother who gamely took a man's job inspecting shells, are doing the lad's thinking for him.

Through C. P. Thorne of the National Surety Company, who lives at 225 West 105th Street—Charlie lived in his grandfather's basement flat next door—these neighbors protested last night that not one Government agency had lifted a finger to aid the boy or to expedite a claim that might provide for his future.

Employes of the American Can Company took up a collection that provided a fund to keep Charlie in clothes. His grandfather, Martin Maher, janitor of 215 West 105th Street, took Charlie into his home and Mrs. Maher looked after the boy. She has a son of her own, Charlie's uncle, who is a year or two older than the little orphan.

"Together with other neighbors, I have been much interested in this case," Mr. Thorne said. "It seems rather hard on this child that the Government agencies that urged the adoption of Belgian and French war orphans during the war should so neglect one of its own. Not one of the multiple agencies that so aroused the country to the relief of suffering interested itself in a worthy case right here on our own doorstep. I consider it a shame.

"On the advice of an attorney efforts were made to have Congressman Rowan introduce a bill appropriating a fund for the son of this soldier who was just as much a war casualty as any soldier in France. I understand that the papers in the case are now in the hands of Congressman Walter M. Chandler. This boy has been deprived of that which no money can buy, the solace, the love, the guidance and cheer of a mother, and it was that kind of mother who would go gamely to work each morning and stay overtime—for what boy don't think it is necessary to say that she was working for Charlie.

"It is true that the money involved in a successful prosecution of a claim against the Government would be valuable, but there's a principle at stake here. I represent twenty-five or thirty neighbors who are going to see this through."

The low-headed youngster was found in his grandfather's flat playing with a collie. A few questions and his grandmother brought Mrs. O'Meila's identification card, to which a photograph of the dead widow was attached.

"Who is that, Buster?" Charlie was asked.

"Mother," he replied.

"What are you going to be when you grow up?"

"Ginear."

Charlie kept looking at the photograph and it was some time before he handed it back to his grandmother.

Mr. Rowan said last night at his home, 244 Riverside Drive, that when he was in Congress a bill was either introduced for the relief of Charles O. Meila, or one was about to be introduced.

"My recollection of the matter is not very accurate, because I have none of the information at hand," he said. "I recall, however, that the case was a deserving one. There was some question as to whether an executrix would be appointed or as to whether the money should be appropriated directly for the relief of the boy. I have an impression that the papers in the case were turned over to Mr. Chandler, who now represents the same district."

In Washington last night Representative Chandler said he could not recall the case offhand, but would consult his files in the morning.

BISHOP KEILEY RESIGNS.

Failing Sight Causes Retirement of Savannah Prelate at 74.

SAVANNAH, Feb. 14.—Bishop Benjamin J. Keiley of the Catholic Diocese of Savannah has resigned, at the age of 74 years, after twenty-two years of service as Bishop, and his resignation has been accepted by the Pope, it was made known here today. Bishop Keiley's sight has been failing for a number of years, it was explained, and he has not been able for some time to read without great pain.

Born at Petersburg, Va., in 1846, Bishop Keiley served with the Army of Virginia in the Civil War, and afterward entered St. Charles's College, at Ellicott City, Md. He then attended the American College at Rome, and was ordained a priest in 1873 and assigned to Wilmington, Del. After serving there and at New Castle, Del., and Atlanta, Ga., he was made rector of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine at Savannah in 1896. Four years later he was appointed to succeed the late Bishop Becker.

TO HURRY CRIMINAL CASES.

Two New Branches of Supreme Court Will Open March 6.

Trials of criminal cases will be expedited on March 6, with the opening of two additional criminal branches of the Supreme Court. District Attorney Banton said yesterday he had arranged to make a daily transfer of thirty cases from the calendar of General Sessions to the two branches, which will operate in conjunction with the regular Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court presided over by Justice Wasservogel.

The additional courts will dispose of bail cases, while Justice Wasservogel will aid the Judges of General Sessions in trying the cases of prisoners in the Tombs.

SAYS GUNMEN TOLD OF TAYLOR PLOT

Ex-Sea Captain Informs Police Two Asserted They Were Hired for Murder.

BLACKMAIL NEW THEORY

Mabel Normand Gets Letters Back and Offers $1,000 Toward Reward for Slayer.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—That a man by the name of Sands had hired two gunmen to shoot William D. Taylor, Los Angeles movie director, was the circumstantial story told to Police Lieutenant Winters in San Francisco today by Charles Carson, a retired sea captain.

Carson's story, if it proves to be true, would definitely link Sands, former secretary-valet of Taylor, with the murder.

According to Carson he was tramping from Stockton to Tracy when he met the two "hobo gunmen," one of whom was said to have given the name of "Bill Burke." Both were armed. Carson said, and he asked why they carried revolvers. They replied they were on the way to Los Angeles to meet Sands, and said they had a deal on with Sands to "get even with a movie man."

The San Francisco police announced that Carson would be kept under observation pending a detailed investigation of his story.

Meantime it was reported here that District Attorney Woolwine and detectives working on the case were keeping secret new and startling clews. One report was that they had received information suggesting that Taylor might have been slain by blackmailers when he fought to protect the good name of a motion picture star. Rumors were that Woolwine and his aides, while claiming that they are virtually "up against a blank wall" have been working for days on evidence which needs only a little additional corroboration before an arrest can be made. Secrecy is imperative to throw the suspected person off guard, the report was.

The blackmailers, according to the theory now advanced, seized on Taylor's friendship with a well-known screen actress, and, "twisting the truth to make a trap," manufactured evidence which would throw discredit on the woman. They then approached Taylor, it was suggested, and demanded a large sum money. He resisted with them, and then, realizing that the truth would prevail over manufactured evidence, defied them. It was this defiance coupled with a threat to call in the police, that caused the murder, according to the theory now being considered. It is pointed out that Taylor drew $2,500 from the bank the day before he was slain and redeposited it on the day he was killed.

Speculation were received from Denver today in which a woman, claiming to be Taylor's second cousin, was quoted as saying that Taylor was not the son of a prominent Irish family, but the son of a good, old-fashioned Kansas farmer."

"His father was Oscar Tanner, who came to Kansas from Ireland," the woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Petroff, said. "He settled in Kansas because his cousin, Joseph, my father, was living in Topeka.

Mrs. Petroff said Taylor married Ethel May Harrison in New York City in 1901. Mrs. Petroff asserted that Taylor's sister-in-law to Monrovia, to whom he sent $50 a month for almost seven years, is the Howard Tanner who is his brother. The Monrovia woman stated her husband was Dennis Deane Tanner.

A complete reconstruction of the murder, giving authentic characteristics of the slayer, has been worked out by District Attorney Woolwine and his detectives, it was stated today. The reconstruction of the crime, it was stated, has convinced Woolwine and the investigators of three things:

First, that the slayer was experienced in the use of firearms.

Second, that revenge was probably not the motive for the crime.

Third, that the slayer was perfectly cool before and after the killing.

Mabel Normand, under the care of physicians at her home, said today that she had her letters and telegrams to Taylor which were turned over to the District Attorney's office during the investigation. Miss Normand said the letters were given her after she was examined at Woolwine's office.

"These letters are all of such a non-sensical nature that they have absolutely no value except as they exhibit and indicate the friendship which existed between Mr. Taylor and myself," Miss Normand said. "My letters were all so childish and so simple they could have meant nothing but perhaps a moment's cheer to so wonderful a man as Mr. Taylor was."

"He wasn't like younger men who always want me to put on evening clothes and go out somewhere to dance and dine. He liked to sit at home and talk about my reading and study and encouraged me to think that some time I might accomplish something along that line."

Miss Normand offered to subscribe $1,000 toward a fund contributed by motion picture women and women to be offered as a reward for the capture of Taylor's slayer.

"It's easy enough to say, 'Oh, what a fine man he was, such a loss to the profession,' but that doesn't count in the punishment of the man who did this terrible deed," she said. "I believe that his friends and associates will be ready in a moment to start such a fund and to make the solution of this crime quick and sure.

"I have been put to terrific agony by this whole terrible event, but I make nothing of my own suffering as compared with the unclean things which have been said about the motion picture industry."

Investigation has indicated that little effort will be required to disprove the claims of William Edward Taylor of San Francisco, who says he is a son of the slain man, for a share of the Taylor estate. The San Francisco man asserts a man answering Taylor's description married his mother, Olive Randall, in Laramie, Wyo., in 1892. In 1892, William Desmond Taylor was only 15 years of age.

A statement concerning the motion picture industry which will aim to counteract charges circulated in the East as a result of the Taylor murder will be sent broadcast throughout the country as the result of a meeting of the Producers' Association, the Screen Writers' Guild, the Los Angeles Publishers' Association and the Manufacturing Committee of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, held yesterday.

"It is realized in Los Angeles that the widely exploited scandals charged to the motion picture industry are brought about by a few and not the majority," it was stated at the meeting. "It is manifestly unfair to have Hollywood and the motion picture industry pictured as a den of iniquity, a dive or vice or a pesthole of drug addicts.

"Constant reiteration of these stories has brought conviction to many readers who have never been in Los Angeles nor have they the slightest idea of what it is like, or what Hollywood is like."

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14 (Associated Press).—The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announced through the District Attorney late today that it would pay a reward of $2,500 to the person or persons furnishing information resulting in the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Taylor.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 14.—The City Federation of Women's Clubs in their quarterly convention here today took no action toward banning motion pictures in which Mary Miles Minter and Mabel Normand are featured, but in a discussion on the moving picture question delegates said that actresses were not so much to blame for all that had come out as their managers and directors.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 14.—Local motion picture theatres have discontinued showing pictures featuring Mary Miles Minter and Mabel Normand. The action was taken at the request of the City's Board of Censors.

Prisoner Stirs Daugherty's Interest by Gift of Table

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—A massive wooden table, heavily inlaid, adorned the office of Attorney General Daugherty today. It was the work of a prisoner in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

"I have asked the Pardon Attorney for his record," Mr. Daugherty said, "and I may turn the tables on him."

NIP DEAL IN STOLEN RUM AT $1,000 A BBL.

Federal Agents Pose as Intermediaries and Frustrate Theft of 110-Proof Whisky.

DAVY AS DRY AID IS RUMOR

Albany Report Says That Former Anti-Saloon League Counsel Will Be Day's Assistant.

Posing as Federal prohibition agents who were out more for the dollar than for the suppression of the illegal liquor traffic, Howard E. Kiroack and Henry Gruenwald, special Government agents, who have had charge of a number of important investigations, acted as intermediaries in negotiations for the purchase of 240 barrels of 110 proof Stewart rye whisky. A man of wealth and the interests supposed to have the liquor to sell were brought together and the transaction closed at the price of $1,500 a barrel.

The negotiations, according to Agent Kiroack, preceded an attempt on Monday night to rob the bonded warehouse of the Exporters' Warehouse Company, 154 West Nineteenth Street, of 240 barrels of Stewart whisky. The agents had kept constant watch on the premises for the last two weeks. Soon after some of the barrels had been transferred from the bonded warehouse to the free section on the Seventh Avenue side, owned by a different corporation, the two agents, with the assistance of a number of policemen, broke down the door on the Seventh Avenue side and entered the building. The robbers had made their escape through a trap door in the roof. Mr. Kiroack said last night that arrests would follow within a few days.

Part of Warehouse Was "Free."

The warehouse is a five-story L-shaped building, and faces both Seventh Avenue and Nineteenth Street. According to the Federal agent, the Exporters' Warehouse Company recently sold the Nineteenth Street side of the building and the purchasers were to take the name of the Exporters' Terminal Warehouse. The Nineteenth Street side, he said, was to be bonded, while the Seventh Avenue side was to be what is known as free warehouse. A brick wall, two feet thick, separates the two sections. The thieves cut a hole six feet by six feet through the wall on the third floor. The Stewart whisky was on the second floor. A large quantity of other brands was on the third floor, but it was the Stewart brand, Mr. Kiroack said, which was concerned in the transaction.

Work was started, it was said, to remove the liquor from the second to the third floor of the bonded section and then to shunt it through the opening in the wall and into the free section floor of the other section by means of an elevator. Seventy-seven barrels had been drawn up from the second floor of the bonded warehouse and transferred to the opposite side of the wall. Forty barrels had been lowered to the first floor of the Seventh Avenue side and the other thirty-seven barrels were convenient to the elevator.

Special Watch Posted.

According to the agents, large bundles of canvas had been used by the thieves in rolling the barrels in order to muffle the sound. A watchman stationed on the Nineteenth Street side was quoted as saying that he heard nothing either on Monday night or Sunday night. Kiroack and Gruenwald learned that certain persons were offering liquor in bulk for sale and reported the matter to Director Day, and a special watch was posted on the warehouse. Information having been received that an attempt would be made to rob the warehouse of the liquor supposed to be involved in the transaction.

The agents learned, it was said, that the thieves would do their work over the week-end, having an extra day on account of Monday's holiday. The agents calculated that the work of blocking out a hole in the wall which separated the two divisions of the warehouse would be completed about Monday night and they were on the alert for the sound of rolling barrels. Their patience was rewarded. The agents had information, Mr. Kiroack said, that delivery of the 240 barrels of liquor, or part of it, was to be made at 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

The length of time the thieves had been engaged in boring through the wall and in transferring the liquor was indicated by the discovery of a large assortment of chicken, ham and tongue sandwiches, all neatly made and flanked by dill pickles. Overalls and gloves also had been left behind. Director Day said that the attempt to rob the warehouse was not done without the aid of "inside" persons. He added that he had known of a plot to rob the warehouse for about ten days.

Smuggling Conspiracy Charged.

Three assistant storekeepers on the Italian liner Giuseppe Verdi, on which 2,900 bottles of "Johnnie Walker" Scotch whisky and 300 bottles of champagne were seized last Saturday, were arrested yesterday and arraigned before United States Commissioner Hitchcock on a charge of conspiracy to smuggle liquors into this country. They were held in $25,000 bail each for a hearing on Thursday.

Federal prohibition agents, working under Colonel Chris J. Fortman, chief city enforcement agent, seized two shipments of liquor, both billed as "cottonseed oil." Upon information received from Washington, General Agent Roy C. Merrick, Agents Arthur Van Tassel, Garason Mead and Xaver went to Pier 35, North River, foot of Spring Street, and seized six barrels marked "cottonseed oil." The "cottonseed oil" was being loaded on a truck ready to leave the pier. The shipment had arrived yesterday morning on the steamship City of Columbus. In each barrel was 100 bottles of Scotch whisky. Another shipment of "cottonseed oil" was seized at Pier 24, East River. It was about to be shipped out of town on the New York Central Railroad. Colonel Fortman said that the thirteen barrels contained 390 one-gallon cans of alcohol.

PNEUMONIA KILLS 67, INFLUENZA ONLY 12

New Cases of Both Diseases Decline, First Named to 83, the Second to 176.

KEEP IN AIR, SAYS COPELAND

Drop in Attacks Gratifies the Commissioner, but He Says Situation Is Little Changed.

Deaths from pneumonia increased yesterday over the day before, but there was a decrease in the number of deaths from influenza, and in the new cases of pneumonia and influenza reported. Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Health Commissioner, advised the people to get into the open air and enjoy the sunshine all they could, but to keep their feet dry and their bodies warmly clad.

Only 176 influenza cases were reported yesterday, compared with 336 on Monday; only 83 pneumonia cases, against 102 on Monday. There were 12 deaths from influenza, three less than on Monday. Deaths from pneumonia were 67, an increase of 19 over Monday.

Following is a table of the deaths and new cases of both diseases, arranged by boroughs:

	Influenza. Cases.	Deaths.	Pneumonia. Cases.	Deaths.
Manhattan	81	6	35	33
Bronx	61	3	12	7
Brooklyn	27	2	29	21
Queens	4	1	3	4
Total today	176	12	83	67
Total yesterday	350	15	102	49
Total since Jan. 1	15,589	387	5,518	2,083

"It is most gratifying to have so small a number of cases reported today," said Dr. Copeland, "but the number of deaths indicates little change as yet in the situation. Yesterday being a holiday, and following Sunday, it may be that full reports of the new cases were not received today. Tomorrow's figures may give a better line on the situation.

"I feel encouraged, yet I must urge the public to continue their precautions. The sunshine should tempt everybody to go into the open air, but it is important to keep the feet dry and the body warm."

CATCH DEFAULTER IN CANADA

Edmonton Police Arrest Cashier Wanted in Springfield, Mass.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 14.—Word was received by the police late today from Edmonton, Alberta, that Roger Lane, cashier of the local branch of the National Biscuit Company, who disappeared about two weeks ago, was under arrest there.

When Lane failed to return Monday from a supposed vacation an investigation of his accounts was undertaken, which showed, it is alleged, a shortage of $5,000 or more. A warrant for Lane's arrest was sworn out. When Lane left the city he was accompanied by Mrs. Elida B. Short, a widow, to whom, it has been learned, he was married Jan. 18, in New York.

On Armistice Day, President Harding talked to a crowd gathered at the grave of the Unknown Soldier, in the National Cemetery at Arlington. His voice was heard simultaneously by vast throngs in New York, Chicago and San Francisco.

In this modern miracle that seemed to knit our nation into one great family, Exide Batteries played an important part; for Exides were relied upon to provide current for the amplifiers that magnified the President's voice. Exides also supplied the power to send the words over the telephone wires, just as when you telephone it is an Exide Battery that carries your voice.

The development of the storage battery and its place in peace and war has been little else than a record of the Exide. The original starting and lighting battery for automobiles was an Exide. The Exide, made for your car today, has built into it all the lessons of the past.

The result is a ruggedly efficient battery that you can depend upon to last a very long time. This means even something more to you than the maximum comfort in motoring; it means dollars and cents economy.

THE FINEST THING YOU BUY WHEN YOU BUY A PIERCE-ARROW

THERE ARE workmen in the Pierce-Arrow factory who are more concerned about the good fortune of a Pierce-Arrow Car than any owner could possibly be. Their pride in their work and its consummation in the car they have so earnestly striven to make perfect, is the finest thing you buy when you buy a Pierce-Arrow. The reason for this feeling is that Pierce-Arrow is not a machine-made product in a strict sense. Machines help tremendously, with their power and their accuracy, but each car is perfected in its finer and more individual needs with handwork, and it is handwork of a kind calling for the highest spirit of craftsmanship on the part of the workman.

Conductor, Serge Prokofieff.

Serge Prokofieff's opera "The Love for Three Oranges," which the Chicago Opera Company announced for performance at the Manhattan Opera House last week, was postponed on account of illness in the company. But the respite was not for long. Health having been restored, the opera was given for the first time in New York last evening.

The audience was large and after the first shock of surprise evinced considerable amusement in the proceedings on the stage. How far the interest extended to the proceedings in the orchestra and the vocalisation that was heard from the participants in the action it would be difficult to say. There was applause after the closing of the curtain on each act, and after the second act, besides the principal singers, Mr. Prokofieff, the composer; Mr. Anisfeld, who painted the scenery and designed the costumes, and Mr. Coini, the stage manager, were called out several times.

The opera, if it is so to be called, is a strange production. Mr. Prokofieff has been his own librettist; his text was given in a French translation from the Russian original. The libretto is based on one of the fairy tales of the eighteenth century Italian writer Carlo Gozzi. Gozzi was a contemporary of Goldoni, and one of his satirical opponents. His "fiable," or dramatic fairy pieces, had a great vogue in their day. On one of them, "Turandote," Schiller based a German play, for which Weber wrote an overture; from it Wagner derived the material for his youthful opera, "Die Feen." There are not a few other traces of Gozzi's imagination in the literature and drama and opera of the nineteenth century.

The outline of the opera which Mr. Prokofieff has derived from Gozzi's "The Love of Three Oranges" has already been printed in these columns. The three oranges are the device of an indignant sorceress who, as one of many trying to make the melancholy Prince laugh and thereby cure him of his desperate illness, turns an involuntary somersault. She succeeds so far as to make him and all the Court burst into loud laughter; but this kind of success is not to her liking, and in revenge she condemns the Prince to love insatiably three oranges.

He starts out on an expedition to find them, meeting with fantastic experiences. He finally finds them in a desert. Two of them are opened while he sleeps by his attendant to assuage his thirst, and a beautiful Princess steps out of each. But they forthwith die of thirst. The third is saved by a bucket of water mysteriously brought in. She is marvellously changed into a rat and a slave is substituted for her; but the King, who turns up at this moment, insists that the Prince shall marry the substitute. In the palace the rat is turned back again into the Princess, and the Prince and his love are together at last.

This delectable concoction has less than the sogency and consistency of a Christmas pantomime. As it is presented on the stage, it is capable of making "Alice in Wonderland" seem like a treatise on inductive logic. Probably Mr. Prokofieff has allowed Gozzi's narrative, but in becoming a dramatic spectacle with enormous elaboration of detail, with scenic surroundings and picturing of Mr. Anisfeld's most exaggerated imaginings, it has turned into a wild phantasmagoria of sight and sound and sense.

The principal characters are fantastic enough in conception and in their dramatic embodiment on the stage; but their doings are accompanied by the antics of as strange a crew of creatures as often emerge into public view. There are "Ridicules," "Comiques," "Lyriques," "Tragiques," "Empty Heads," devils, devilkins, doctors, "Absurdities," courtiers, comedians. They come and go, and sometimes are swept out by attendants with huge shovels.

It may be said that these are really derived from the grotesques that figure in the Italian plays of Gozzi's period.

On each side of the stage is a tall kiosk, from the windows of which lean grotesque figures, who observe the action uninterruptedly and sometimes comment on it.

The piece is presented in ten tableaux, which are frequently shown by the parting of a small curtain on the stage. These are of Mr. Anisfeld's most fantastic imaging in form and color, and the scenery is one of the most potent factors in the grotesque effectiveness of the opera. The costumes are elaborate and some of them strikingly handsome.

But, after all, this is an opera, and its action and motives are developed by music. Mr. Prokofieff's music is more grotesque, more fantastic, more impossible than anything else connected with the work. The other things can beguile the eye and amuse, if they cannot stimulate the imagination. What can Mr. Prokofieff's music do for the ear? Probably for most of the listeners, it could do little but deafen it till insensibility set in, if it did set in, and further suffering was spared. There are a few, but only a very few, passages that bear recognizable kinship with what has hitherto been recognized as music. No doubt there are what pass for themes, and there is ingenuity of some kind in manipulating them; but it seldom produces any effect but that of disagreeable noise. Mr. Prokofieff's idea of orchestration is to intensify this effect. The orchestra is a noble instrument. But it has seldom been put to so ignoble uses as it is in "The Love for Three Oranges."

What, in fine, is the underlying purpose of this work? Is it satire? Is it burlesque? If so, what does it satirize; what does it burlesque? Whose withers are wrung? If it is a joke it may be a good one, but it is a long and painful one; and, on information and belief, it may be said, more painful to the Chicago Opera Company than even to the Messrs.

Mr. Prokofieff's Piano Recital.

Mr. Serge Prokofieff appropriated yesterday in New York to himself and his music. In the afternoon, before the performance of his opera, he gave a piano recital in Aeolian Hall, in which both his style he a pianist and some of his piano compositions were set forth. Among the latter were two transcriptions from the opera that was awaiting performance in the evening; the march and the intermezzo. His last group was one of pieces of his own for piano.

He gave some interesting numbers before that. Beginning with a prelude and fugue in D minor by Buxtehude, the Danish composer and organist who had a good deal of influence upon Bach, of which the fugue was particularly interesting and, as Mr. Prokofieff played it, exhibiting a pleasing elegiac mood. Three country dances by Beethoven followed, bright and pretty music that makes its appearance to pay homage and conceal the lion's claw thoroughly, if indeed it is there. Mr. Prokofieff did not play these very carefully and struck rather more false notes than are canonical. He has made some arrangements of waltzes by Schubert taken from a number of different collections, strengthened, or at least made more sonorous, for concert use; these were found pleasing.

A prelude by Lladoff, the drolly realistic "Ballet of the Chickens in Their Shells" from Moussorgsky's "Exhibition Pictures," and an impressionistic "Fairy Tale" by Medtner, Op. 8, made up the rest of his program. Mr. Prokofieff has played more interestingly than he did yesterday; and decidedly with more clarity.

CHICAGO OPERA 'FAREWELLS'

Five Added Operas in Company's Repertoire for Next Week.

"Farewell" nights of what Miss Garden has declared to be the Chicago Opera Association's farewell New York season are tentatively announced at the Manhattan today. Five added operas in the closing week's bills will complete a total of twenty-seven different productions during the five weeks here, out of some twenty-nine works for which the entire scenic productions were brought East.

A tour of two months to the Pacific Coast thereafter includes these stops: Philadelphia, Feb. 27-March 4; Baltimore, March 6-8; Pittsburgh, March 9-11; Milwaukee, March 13-15; St. Paul, March 16-18; Helena, Mont., March 20; Portland, Ore., March 22-25; San Francisco, March 27-April 8; Los Angeles, April 10-15; Denver, April 18-20; Wichita, Kan., April 21-22. The singers will reach Chicago April 23, when the foreign artists will return to New York to sail for their homes abroad.

ELEANORA DUSE COMING.

Famous Italian Actress to Appear Here This Fall, Mme. Guilbert Says.

Eleanora Duse, the famous Italian actress, who has not been seen in this country for many years, is planning to come to New York for a series of performances next Fall, according to an announcement to be made by Mme. Yvette Guilbert at her recital in Town Hall this evening. The announcement will be in the form of a letter printed on Mme. Guilbert's program, in which she explains that she was booked to sail on the steamship France tomorrow, but cancelled the reservation when she received a cable from Mme. Duse asking her husband to make arrangements for Mme. Duse's New York appearance. The definite arrangements, it appears, have not yet been made.

Mme. Guilbert will use the time she remains here to stage the old miracle play, "Gilberte," at an uptown theatre. She will appear in the cast, but will present Elisabeth Moffat, who has hitherto been identified with light comedy, in the principal part. The date of the opening performance of "Gilberte" and the name of the theatre at which it will be produced will be announced later.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The performance of "Thank You" at the Longacre Theatre last night was for the benefit of the Greer House.

The opening of Henry Baron's production at Edouard Bourdet's comedy, "The Rubicon," at the Hudson Theatre, has been postponed from last Monday to Tuesday evening.

"Madame Pierre" opens tonight at the Ritz Theatre.

The new Earl Carroll Theatre, at Seventh Avenue and Fiftieth Street, will be dedicated Friday at 2 P. M. by members of the Lambs Club.

A road company of "Shuffle Along," opens tonight in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and will remain on tour for a few months preliminary to its departure for London.

Edna Walker has joined the cast of "The Blushing Bride," at the Astor Theatre.

"Make It Snappy," a musical revue with Eddie Cantor, opens tonight in Baltimore.

The Lockfords will appear in the Fokine Ballet in "The Rose of Stamboul," opening at the Century Theatre, Feb. 27.

Charles Trowbridge and Nellie Graham Dent have been added to the cast of "Just Because," a musical play by Anne Wynns O'Ryan and Helen S. Woodruff, now in rehearsal.

The cast of "Chauve-Souris" will attend today's matinee performance at the Hippodrome.

The regular midweek matinees of "Bulldog Drummond" and Elsie Janis's show will be omitted today.

The Gardens Players of Forest Hills Gardens will present a new one-act play by Harry King Tootle, "The Law of the Sea," for the first time at Kew Gardens next Friday night.

CARUSO CONCERT SUNDAY.

Farrar and Galli-Curci in Afternoon Benefit for Foundation.

The Caruso Foundation concert, which opens the Metropolitan's fifteenth week next Sunday afternoon, will engage Farrar, Galli-Curci, Martinelli, Harrold, Gigli, Mardones, fourteen stars in all, with the opera orchestra and five conductors. At the usual Sunday evening concert, Bori, Chamlee, Caupolican and others will sing.

Another crowded week of operas will include repetitions of "Andrea Chenier" on Monday, with Muzio and Gigli; Wednesday matinee "Aida," Muzio and Martinelli; Wednesday evening "Rigoletto," Galli-Curci, Chamlee and De Luca; Thursday "Tristan," Easton and Bembach; Friday matinee "Lucia," Galli-Curci and Gigli; Friday evening "Cavalleria," with Jeritza and Chamlee, and "Pagliacci," with Bori, Salazar and Scotti; Saturday matinee "Faust," Farrar, Martinelli and Rothier, and Saturday evening, Feb. 25, "Die Walkure," Easton, Matzenauer, Kingston and Whitehill. Next Tuesday Farrar, Kingston and Scotti appear in Brooklyn in "Madama Butterfly."

Serge Rachmaninoff Reappears.

Serge Rachmaninoff reappeared at Carnegie Hall last evening in a "concert of music for the piano" of a sort to which the Russian pianist-composer gives rare individual significance and with which on this occasion he entertained an "overflow" house on the same night that saw the only production here of an opera by his countryman, Serge Prokofieff. Four original pieces were in Mr. Rachmaninoff's list—an "Etude Tableau," Op. 39; a transcribed song, "Daisies," Op. 38; the B flat minor prelude, and, as encore, that in C sharp minor. He played also classics of Handel, Beethoven, Weber, Chopin, Liszt and three "Fairy Stories," by Nicholas Medtner, another compatriot.

Mengelberg Again Warmly Received

Willem Mengelberg presided over the Philharmonic's third program in its new Metropolitan series last evening before an audience that largely filled the opera house on Broadway and that received the Dutch conductor again with enthusiasm. There was decidedly a somewhat lighter selection of musical classics than the leader had given at Carnegie Hall. The orchestra was heard in Corelli's concerto grosso No. 8, Mozart's "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" and Schubert's great symphony in C, all early reoccurring in the society's coming concerts elsewhere, when they will afford opportunity for further critical consideration.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Generally Higher, Bond Prices Irregular—Rapid Recovery in Sterling.

Movement of prices for stocks and bonds was again quite superseded in interest yesterday by the action of foreign exchanges and wheat. Such expectation as had been entertained last week that the rise in those two markets had run its course was promptly upset on yesterday's resumption of business. Sterling exchange, which had fallen from $4.39⅝ to $4.31⅝ on the three last days of the past week, rose abruptly to $4.38⅛. Wheat for the May delivery, which sold at $1.31 per bushel less than a week ago and which closed at $1.43 on Saturday, advanced in an extremely excited market at Chicago yesterday to $1.39½. This is the highest price paid in the present crop except for two or three days in the early Autumn; it compares with $1.07¼ in January and $1.08¼ in November. The character of the day's wheat market clearly indicated that the speculative grain trade had suddenly awakened to a realizing sense of its erroneous estimates of the past few months regarding the world's balance of supplies and requirements.

The day's advances on the Stock Exchange, many of which exceeded a full point in both railway and industrial shares, occurred on a market only moderately active, and were again pretty plainly of speculative origin. The stock market, which has been watching with uneasiness the amazing performance over the soldiers' bonus bill at Washington, appeared to be more relieved yesterday at the abandonment of the stock transfer tax plan by the fluttering statesmen than disturbed at the abrupt return to talk of a Government bond issue. Liberty bonds held up rather surprisingly in the face of this latest turn; possibly because of a feeling that the program of drawing this predicament out from the Treasury, against the protests and warnings of the Government's financial officers, was getting into a position which would make its defeat unavoidable. Naturally, that result was likely to depend on several uncertain contingencies. Neither Wall Street nor the country at large has been able to recall any parallel episode from which to judge this strange political occurrence.

All other European exchange rates rose with sterling, francs in particular nearly reaching again the high point of last week. As a sidelight on the recent advance in sterling exchange, the report of this country's foreign trade in January supplements Saturday's similar statement for Great Britain. Whereas England's surplus of imports over exports was barely one-third what it was in January, 1921, our own surplus of exports did not reach one-seventh of last year's figure for the month. Expressed in the customary way, last month's trade balance was more favorable to England than that of any month since 1913, and was less favorable to the United States than any month since 1915. Not until the classification of January's export trade by destination is compiled, a fortnight hence, shall we know what foreign markets were chiefly responsible for the decrease of $275,000,000 in our total exports as compared with January, 1921. In December, however, when the difference was even larger, more than half of the decrease occurred in shipments to Europe.

It is still an open question, to what extent this reduction of purchases by Europe in America is a purely temporary matter, reflecting Europe's industrial depression, and how far it embodies a tendency that will last. Europe's purchases of our materials of manufacture can hardly be kept at their present low level in case of any European trade revival, but the purchases are likely to be conducted cautiously, with a view to the foreign exchanges, and to reach normal magnitude only when Europe's exports are increased equivalently. It is with South America and Asia that revival in our export trade ought to begin. Meantime, so far as Europe is concerned, there is at least this consolation in our declining export trade—that it reflects an intelligible movement to correct the depreciation in exchange. Even England used to look on with something of composure at the quarter-of-a-billion decrease in our total imports after the panics of 1907 and 1920. It was always recognized as America's way of straightening out the tangle of international credits.

MONEY.

TUESDAY, FEB. 14, 1922.

Money on call on the Stock Exchange opened and renewed at 5 per cent., later moving off to 4½, and then 4 for closing accommodation. Outside loans were likewise arranged at these rates. Time money was a trifle tighter, that is for all industrials, rate moving up 5 to 5½ per cent., but half and half still at 4½@5. No increase in offerings was noted because of firmness, brokers reporting business quiet and principally confined to routine. Commercial paper was unchanged at 4½@5 per cent., but bulk of names is going at the outside figure. Acceptances ruled steady and unchanged.

Taking the British Mint's standard price of £4 per fine ounce as par, the market quotation for gold would represent a price of 113⅛ at London, on the same basis the highest London price for gold for the year to date was 118⅝, on Jan. 3; for 1921, it was 124, on Jan. 3; the highest of the period, 140⅞, on Feb. 6, 1920.

FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

Irregular Movement of Prices Both at London and Paris.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Prices were irregular on the Stock Exchange today. Gilt-edged securities were very firm and all shares steady, but British industrials showed an easier tendency. Old 2½ per cent. consols, ¼ point lower at 32½; British 5 per cent. war loan, ⅛ higher at 94¼; 4½ per cent. war loan, unchanged at 87⅝.

Rand Mines, unchanged at 2; De Beers Mining, ⅛ lower at 10¾.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—Prices were heavy on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 27 centimes higher at 50 francs 85 centimes; 5 per cent. war loan, unchanged at 78 francs 90 centimes.

Exchange on London, 25 centimes lower at 50 francs 85 centimes per sovereign; American dollars were quoted at 11 francs 87 centimes, against 11 francs 75 centimes yesterday.

GOLD SENT ABROAD IS ONLY A TRICKLE

Shipments, Mostly to Sweden and Spain, Are Very Small Compared With Imports.

In the cross-currents of international business small shipments of gold are leaving the United States every day or so. In comparison with the heavier imports, however, these may be described as a trickle. The shipments have been made mostly to Sweden and to Spain, and it is understood that a small shipment will go to Switzerland during the next few days.

Officials of the Assay Office said yesterday that no requests had been received for bar gold, and it is their guess that such gold as is leaving this country is cash brought here and transshipped abroad, or coin which has been kept in bankers' vaults for a year or so, and probably having served as collateral, now is free to return to its owners.

There is a possibility that Switzerland may take moderate amounts of gold in the future from the United States. Her exchange has been at par since Dec. 9. She is virtually the only country to which it would be profitable to ship gold, although Sweden approaches that point.

Considerable gold was received by bankers here over the week-end, most of it being bar metal directly from the Transvaal, via England. The steamer George Washington brought thirty boxes of bar gold, valued at $1,040,000 for Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and the same bankers received two boxes of bar gold, valued at $57,000, on the Baltic from England. The steamer Altantic brought a shipment of $108,000 in English, French and Turkish gold coins to the French American Banking Corporation from England.

EASIER MONEY ABROAD.

Bank of England Suspends Sale of 5 Per Cent. Bonds.

Bankers here received word by cable at noon yesterday that the Bank of England had announced the suspension of the sale of its 5 per cent. Treasury bonds. This action was construed as a reflection of the easier conditions of money and the fact that it was the opinion of the Treasury officials abroad that a Government bond at a lower rate of interest would be an readily taken as the 5 per cent. bond. Those in touch with the situation in England predicted a lower bank rate within the next two weeks.

Call money in New York was a drug on the market yesterday. Few new demands were encountered. The renewal and renewal rate was 4 per cent., followed by a drop at noon to 4¼ per cent., and at 2 o'clock to 4 per cent., at which money closed. Although the quotations were nominal, some of the dealers quoted this money a shade higher yesterday.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Stock Market and Foreign Events.

After drifting about rather aimlessly during the greater part of the morning hour, the stock market moved sharply up in the afternoon session, and before the close quite 2 to 6 points were numerous. Steel common, a leader in the recent rise, sold up to 96, a high record for the current year. The generalized result for the resumption of the rise was the news in connection with the soldier bonus situation. Wall Street has been upset over the recent intimations from Washington of a new tax or excise measure; hence yesterday's news was taken as encouraging. Diametrically opposite views were expressed in Wall Street as to President Harding's probable attitude, ranging all the way from predictions of a veto of a bonus bill with less items preventable by prediction of his approval to the heavy promotions and the exhortations of Secretary Mellon. None of the opinions of rumors seemed to be based on any kind of reliable information. When the market had once turned upward, its recovery was helped by the rise in sterling, the sharp run-up in grain and cotton prices, and the fall in call money to 4 per cent., the lowest in three weeks.

Low and High-Priced Railway Shares.

Taken altogether, it was the low-priced rails, mainly those selling under $25 per share, which fared best in yesterday's market, although there was an undercurrent of strength in the standard investment rails which attracted attention. Among these low priced ones Texas & Pacific, Kansas City Southern, Pere Marquette, Chicago & Great Western, appeared to be the favorites, and all closed at higher prices. The fact that most of these roads show improved earnings and that extremely severe economies of operations are in effect had led to the conclusion that earnings for the next few months will keep their present pace.

Upward Reaction in Sterling.

The sudden 3-cent recovery in sterling took the New York market by surprise. It was contrary to the perfection of most European cables received over Sunday and was not in accordance with the general judgment of the local exchange market. The very small export balance in our own foreign trade statement for January, published on Monday, had, however, directed more attention to the influence of the actual exchanges of merchandise, but the same statement had shown the gold imports of January to be the smallest of any month since August, 1920, and the idea has prevailed that this quickening would affect foreign exchange rates. One international banker, who buys and sells large blocks of foreign exchange each day, yesterday called attention to the fact that sterling bills of the kind which usually press heavily on the market are now for sale in extremely small lots as compared with the former volumes. When England was a heavy importer of wheat and cotton these bills acted as a brake on every rise in the market; the lower the rate the more bills were offered. Just at the moment the movement of these commodities is at a minimum.

Steel Merger Meeting This Week.

Advices received from Youngstown credited President Campbell of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company as saying that immediately after the annual meeting of stockholders, which was held in that city yesterday, he would leave for this city to attend conferences in connection with the proposed merger of some of the independent steel companies. He is expected to arrive today, possibly to discuss details with the bankers who are expected to arrange a program of financing the new combination.

The New England Rate Decision.

Probably no recent action affecting the Eastern railroads was watched with keener interest than the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision, announced late yesterday afternoon, in the New England rate divisions case. The roads had been contending that they needed a more generous percentage of the business interchanged with the connecting trunk lines, and desired governmental authority which would permit them to show $35,000,000 more income annually. While no local official would comment on the situation yesterday, the decision of the commission, giving to the New England roads a 15 per cent. increase in their revenue on freight business exchanged with trunk lines—is expected to place many of the small New England roads on a genuine paying basis. This increase comes out of the share accruing to the trunk lines and does not affect the rates paid by shippers. It is believed in some quarters that the trunk lines will take the decision to the courts.

Weakness of Copper Metal.

Spot copper yesterday sold down to 13 cents, a new low record for the current year. The market for this metal has been weak for several days. According to reports in the financial district, one of the large copper companies had a loan called, against which a large amount of metal had been pledged as collateral. Selling of this metal to raise funds to meet the loan was said yesterday to be mainly responsible for the current weakness. Copper stocks were irregular during the greater part of the day, but Seneca Copper declined 6¼ points net.

German Balances.

Bankers familiar with the international situation say that Germany again is accumulating balances in New York and in London through the judicious sale of marks and through the deposit, in New York, of the funds received for exports which have reached this port and which now are on the increase. Four of the indemnity payments have been made by Germany and she has six more to make, at intervals of ten days each. Thus far every payment has been met exactly on the due date. Bankers here say that she evidently experiences but little difficulty in making these payments, for as soon as one is discharged the balances are at once replenished and are never allowed to reach a very small total.

The Cotton Consumption Estimate.

Yesterday's advance of $2.75 per bale in the spot cotton market brought the price to the highest since Jan. 12. It has sold since that at 16.60 cents per pound on Jan. 30, the lowest since the Government's October underestimate; yesterday it closed at 18.15. Its highest price in 1921 was the 21.50 of Sept. 27. Yesterday's monthly cotton consumption report attracted much attention, because, while the January exports were shown to have been almost the lowest of any month since the war, the purchases by home mills increased to a figure nearly 30 per cent. greater than in the same month of 1921. Since the marketing of this present crop began domestic mills have taken about 700,000 bales more than in the same period of the previous crop, and, in the aggregate, exports since August have not decreased from a year ago; a fact which is bearing on the recent estimates of the Agricultural Department that the present crop, compared with its predecessor

SEE NEW OIL WELL AS WORLD'S BIGGEST

DEVELOPS HIGHER PRESSURE

New Output Expected to Increase Production by 400,000 Barrels Daily—Upsets Rumors.

Edward L. Doheny, President of the Mexican Petroleum Corporation, announced yesterday that his company had brought in five new wells in the Mexican fields during the last week. One of these wells, the Tierra Blanca 2, located about twenty-five miles from the famous Cerro Azul 4, it is believed, may prove to be the largest well in the world. Up to this time the Cerro Azul 4, owned by the Mexican Petroleum Company, has held this distinction, the initial flow having been set at 261,000 barrels a day.

The pressure when the Cerro Azul well was brought in was 10,040 pounds to the square inch, and the pressure at the Tierra Blanca 2 is 10,065 pounds, the highest ever recorded in a Mexican well.

The other four wells have an estimated production of from 40,000 to 50,000 barrels daily, but as yet have not been connected with pipe lines. Three of these wells are in the Cerro Azul field, and are known as Cerro Azul 14, 15 and 16. The fifth well is in the Cerro Viejo section, and the early estimates give a production slightly lower than that of the other three. Presuming that the Tierra Blanca well equals the production of the older Cerro Azul, the new production brought in last week would increase the potential production of the Mexican Petroleum Company by about 400,000 barrels of oil a day.

In commenting on the new production, Mr. Doheny yesterday said that the Mexican Petroleum Company was now producing double the quantity of oil ever produced by any other petroleum company in the history of the industry. In December the average daily production was 244,000 barrels, which means that for the month the company produced approximately 7,564,000 barrels of oil. In November the average daily production was 181,000 barrels, a total of 5,430,000 barrels for the month, and for the two-month period about 13,000,000 barrels. The potential production of the company, Mr. Doheny said, was now between 800,000 and 1,000,000 barrels daily.

The announcement was considered to be a conclusive answer to the stories which have circulated in the financial district that the Mexican fields were sadly depleted. The new wells brought in last week are in territory which has always been considered as absolutely proven ground.

UNDERWOOD SHOWS PROFIT.

Typewriter Company Earned $10.14 a Share on the Common.

The Underwood Typewriter Company's annual report for 1921 shows surplus earnings of $1,196,179, after allowing for charges and Federal taxes. This was equal to $10.14 a share on the $9,000,000 outstanding common stock, after deducting the usual preferred dividends. In 1920 earnings on the common stock were $2,246,238, or $21.92 a share.

Total net income last year amounted to $1,460,322, against $3,471,816 in 1920. The surplus, after common and preferred dividends, was $13,179, against $758,238. The general balance sheet shows a profit and loss surplus on Dec. 31, 1921, of $9,404,667, against $9,391,328 at the close of the previous year. It was pointed out in the report that the production of standard machines last year was about 75 per cent. of normal. This was brought about as a result of the large number of orders carried over from 1920. Such operations, it was said, caused an increase in inventory last year.

New Issue

California & Hawaiian Sugar Refining Corporation

First Mortgage 7% Gold Bonds

(CLOSED MORTGAGE)

Non-callable for five years and callable thereafter only as a whole, except for sinking fund purposes, at 105 and interest.

Dated February 1, 1922 Due February 1, 1937

Principal and semi-annual interest (August 1 and February 1) payable in San Francisco. Denominations $1,000 and $500. Sinking fund, commencing February 1, 1928, will retire the entire issue by maturity. The Bank of California, National Association, San Francisco, Trustee.

Exempt from Personal Property Taxes in California

Company agrees to pay Normal Federal Income Taxes in so far as lawful, not exceeding two per cent.

From a letter given us by Mr. Andrew Welch, President of the Company, we summarize as follows:

Company Ownership of Company is vested in 31 Hawaiian sugar plantation companies, having an aggregate net worth in excess of $100,000,000 and producing approximately 80% of the total Hawaiian sugar output.

Business Company's business is derived solely from stockholding plantations and consists solely in refining and sale of Hawaiian cane sugar. Company's refinery at Crockett is recognized as largest in the world and has a daily capacity of 4,500,000 pounds of sugar. The receipt of raw sugar is so regulated that operations are continuous throughout the year.

Security These bonds are secured by a closed first mortgage on the entire real estate, plants and equipment now owned by the Company and recently appraised by the General Appraisal Company at $14,212,398.93. Company's plant is of recent construction and represents most modern type of sugar refinery. Addition of net current assets as of December 31, 1921, indicates a total value of $19,060,833 to support a total debt of $7,000,000.

Operation Company operates under contract whereby 25% of market value of raw sugar purchased from plantation is retained, against which operating expenses, interest and the refinery commission on gross receipts are a direct charge. As final payment to planters accumulates in hands of refinery little or no working capital is required.

Earnings From March 12, 1921, until November 30, 1921 (eight months), Company sold its product for $26,235,822.23, on which it earned a profit of $1,311,791. Inasmuch as interest is a direct charge against the sugar this sum is net after interest, but before taxes. Had present contract terms been effective during the past five years there would have resulted an average annual profit, after taxes, interest and all other operating expenses, of $2,656,827, which is more than 5 times total interest charges on $7,000,000 bonds.

Sinking Fund Commencing February 1, 1928, Company will pay $700,000 annually into a sinking fund for redemption of bonds, which is sufficient to retire entire issue by maturity. Sinking fund may be used for purchase of bonds in market or for call of bonds at 102½ and interest.

Price 100 and Accrued Interest

Temporary interest-bearing certificates, secured by funds deposited with Trustee, will presently be available for delivery. All legal matters subject to approval of Messrs. Chickering and Gregory, San Francisco.

BALDWIN PROFITS $5,044,096 IN 1921

On Cash Business Basis, Earnings Per Share Were $18.22, an Increase of $3.06.

ALSO A DEFERRED ACCOUNT

This, Supposed to Represent Foreign Trade, Would Have Made a Showing of $29 a Share.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works report for the year ended Dec. 31 net profits of $5,044,096, after Federal taxes and other charges, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $18.22 a share on the $20,000,000 common stock, against net profits of $4,426,518, on $15.14 a share on the same amount of stock in 1920. The company, however, separated business done on a cash basis and that done on a deferred basis, the latter presumably for foreign account. The separation of these accounts shows that the manufacturing profits amounted to $5,794,517 on a cash basis and $2,318,176 on a deferred basis. A reserve covering the full amount of the business done on a deferred basis was set up last year, and if this amount were not deducted from earnings the amount available for the common stock would have been more than $29 a share.

Details of the income account, compared with that of 1920, are given as follows:

S. M. Vauclain, President of the company, said in his remarks to stockholders that the period of readjustment is continuing and uncertain business conditions obtain. The property has been maintained at a high degree of efficiency, and is prepared fully to meet the renewal of activities which he hopes soon will be realized.

The general balance sheet shows net current assets of $48,432,238, and net current liabilities of $11,675,417. Current assets include inventories valued at $4,540,500; accounts receivable, $6,-602,424; bills receivable, $10,231,808; Fourth Liberty Loan bonds, $1,000,000; Republic of Poland bonds, $6,250,000; Rumanian Treasury notes, $1,560,500; Argentine State Railway notes, $5,874,-940; United States Treasury certificates, $5,791,206; Mexican Government railway notes, $2,802,402; miscellaneous securities, $858,454, and cash, $2,054,196. Current liabilities include accounts payable, $5,114,840; bills payable, $5,000,000, and depositors' saving fund, $1,563,577.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Market Strong, Rates Higher—Sterling Leads in Recovery of Last Week's Losses.

Most European exchanges were strong and at good size advances over Saturday's range in yesterday's dealings. Higher cables from London before our opening more aided the market in its abrupt change over the holiday from the reaction and selling which featured the closing sessions of last week. London checks, after initial trades at $4.35⅝, soon moved up to $4.36⅛, or more than three cents higher than Saturday's final. The French rate was also firmer, selling at 5.87 cents, compared with 5.84⅝, previous close.

Italian, Holland, German, the Scandinavians and several mid-Europeans recovered and in some instances moved to levels higher than before the Break which came last Thursday.

Far Easterns were irregular, South Americans slightly higher. Canadian exchange at 95⅜ cents is best for year to date.

In the subjoined table the quotation on sterling represents dollars and decimals of a dollar; all others represent cents and decimals of a cent. Quotations preceded by the decimal mark indicate a price measured in fractions of a cent.

NO NEW FINANCING BY AMERICAN CAN

Drop in Tin-plate Makes Unnecessary Short-Term Notes of Last Few Years.

J. B. TAYLOR NEW DIRECTOR

Surplus After Charges and Taxes $4,027,861, Against $4,830,916 Reported for 1920.

President F. S. Wheeler of the American Can Company told stockholders at the annual meeting yesterday that it would be unnecessary for the corporation to do any short term financing this year, because of the sharp decline in tin-plate, quoted at $106 a ton, against $201 in August, 1920. The company, during the last three years, had been forced to issue $12,000,000 seven to ten months notes in order to finance its requirements. If funds were needed, he said, they would be raised through bank loans. James B. Taylor of Taylor, Bates & Co. was elected a director, to succeed the late Henry R. Hoyt.

The annual report for 1921 showed surplus, after charges and Federal taxes, of $4,027,861, equal, after deduction of preferred dividends, to $2.76 a share on the $41,233,300 common stock. In 1920 the surplus was $4,830,918, or $4.71 a share after the same deduction. The detailed income account for 1921 and 1920 follows:

Depreciation	1,500,000	1,500,000
Bond interest	402,400	520,928
Federal taxes	1,000,000	3,000,000
Balance	$4,027,861	$4,830,916
Preferred dividends	2,886,231	2,886,231
Previous surplus	23,774,893	21,830,295
Profit and loss surp.	$24,916,413	$23,774,882

The balance sheet on Dec. 31 showed cash on hand amounting to $6,641,370, against $4,403,098 at the close of 1920. Accounts and bills receivable were $6,526,301, against $10,955,301. Inventory was valued at $17,102,300, against $27,823,229. Accounts and bills payable totaled $4,729,204, against $10,747,019.

In commenting on the year's operations, Mr. Wheeler said that "the past year was one of readjustment of conditions created by the war, with declining values necessitating reductions in operating and overhead expenses. These have been brought down to levels in keeping with present conditions. This result has been accomplished by the vigorous and intelligent co-operation of the organization, to whom a high measure of praise is due. Various economies and improved methods have been introduced which will prove beneficial in future."

Commenting on Government contracts, he said that "the claims against the United States Government arising from munitions contracts were finally rejected by the War Department; no recovery can be expected unless by litigation, which is being considered. The Government appeal to the Supreme Court from the decree of the United States District Court denying the petition for the dissolution of the company under the Sherman act was dismissed in June last on motion of the Solicitor General of the United States."

STOCK EXCHANGE OUT OF $25,000,000 SUIT

Court Dismisses Complaint in Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad Action.

The New York Stock Exchange was eliminated yesterday as a defendant in a suit brought in the Supreme Court in behalf of former stockholders of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad for $25,000,000 damages on the ground that the reorganization committee disposed of certain coal rights for $3,000,000 to the bondholders although the rights were worth many times that sum, and caused such depreciation in the value of the stock that the stockholders were forced to sell out at a fraction of the real value of the stock.

The suit was brought in the name of the Mercantile Mutual Fire Insurance Company and the Narragansett Mutual Fire Insurance Company. The action was filed for the insurance companies by E. H. Miller of Huguenot Park, Staten Island, who also appeared in the action filed in his own behalf some months ago against the Governor, members of the State Legislature and the Transit Commission to declare the present transit law invalid. The case was thrown out of court.

The defendants other than the New York Stock Exchange were the members of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the individual members of various protective and reorganization committees of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the United States Steel Company, and a number of wells known trust companies as bondholders. A similar suit was filed last May in the Federal Court, when an injunction restraining the carrying out of the reorganization plan was sought without success.

The case came before Supreme Court Justice Delehanty yesterday on an application by the New York Stock Exchange to dismiss the complaint against the exchange because no cause of action was set forth. The plaintiffs made no objection and the order eliminating the Stock Exchange was granted.

The complaint alleges that the railroad acquired in 1911 and 1912 coal lands aggregating 60,000 acres, having a minable tonnage of 500,000,000 tons. It is alleged that the United States Steel Company contracted twelve years ago to buy 100,000 tons of coal a year, but that these valuable rights were disposed of in the reorganization of the road without regard to the rights of the stockholders, and that the bondholders benefitted while the value of the stock was depressed.

Reading Orders Coaches.

The Reading Railway Company announced orders yesterday for thirty-five passenger coaches placed with the Bethlehem Steel Company's Harlan & Hollingsworth plant at Wilmington, Del. The remainder of the company's $5,000,000 equipment order, which called for the construction of 2,500 coal cars, has been divided equally among the Standard Steel Car, Pressed Steel Car, American Car and Foundry, and Midvale Steel Companies.

Hercules Powder Earnings Improve.

The Hercules Power Company for 1921 has reported net arnings, after taxes and charges, of $820,944, equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $3.48 a share on the $7,150,000 common stock, against net earnings of $402,250, or $1.02 a share in 1920. Gross income last year was $10,001,390 against $20,384,836 in 1920. The surplus after preferred dividends was $248,934, against $419,384 in 1920.

FIRM IS SUSPENDED BY STOCK EXCHANGE

BANKRUPTCY PETITION FILED

Liabilities Estimated at $3,300,000, Assets $3,000,000—Was Respected Concern, Says Official.

Announcement was made yesterday from the rostrum of the New York Stock Exchange of the assignment of the brokerage firm of Crawford, Patton & Cannon and of its suspension from the Exchange. The assignment, which was filed in the County Clerk's office, was made to William Otis Badger Jr. for the benefit of creditors.

Later, four small creditors of the firm filed in the Federal Court a petition in involuntary bankruptcy. These creditors and their claims are James A. Heitsman, $100; Frances M. Radford, $40; H. O. Seigman, $1,000, and Mary Hicks Mayer, $200. Liabilities were placed at $3,300,000 and assets at $3,000,000. The members of the firm are Harold A. Chandor, Covert L. Goodlove, Henry B. Cannon and H. Joseph Patton. Mr. Cannon was the floor member.

The firm became a member of the Stock Exchange on Nov. 1, 1911. Besides its main office at 61 Broadway, it has branches in the Hotel St. Andrews and in Philadelphia. No information was available as to the cause of the firm's embarrassment. The suspension caused little gossip in financial circles for the reason, it was said, that the firm played a very small part in the big or spectacular market operation. After the assignment the doors of the firm's Broadway office were locked.

Albert A. Wray, counsel for the assignee, said that accountants had been set at work on the books, but that it would take several days before the concern's precise financial condition would be known. He said that preliminary inquiry indicated that the liabilities and assets would amount to the figures stated.

Mr. Wray said the firm carried a large volume of business on its books, and that while it appeared that the situation was serious there was no indication that it was so serious that the clients would lose much money. Mr. Wray said he wanted it clearly understood that the firm was not of the bucket-shop variety now being investigated by the District Attorney.

"The firm," said Mr. Wray, "has always had a good reputation."

Attention was called to the fact that the petitioning creditors charge that the firm is insolvent only because it did not have sufficient funds to carry on its business, and that it should be declared a bankrupt for the protection of its creditors.

E. V. D. Cox, Secretary of the Stock Exchange, said that as yet no statement of assets and liabilities had been filed by the firm. Mr. Cox explained that under the rules of the Exchange the firm had thirty days in which to furnish this information. A postponement could then be given if warranted. Mr. Cox said that the notification of assignment for the benefit of creditors was made to him yesterday morning before the opening by Mr. Cannon personally. It was a great surprise, he said, because while Crawford, Patton & Cannon were not once of the largest concerns they had been one of the most respected.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—The firm of Crawford, Patton & Cannon had about 500 accounts in Philadelphia, totaling about $500,000, it was said.

SHEET METALWARE EXCHANGE DISSOLVED

Judge Hand Signs Decree Which Orders Ending of Price Fixing—Stops Prosecution.

A decree dissolving the Sheet Metalware Exchange because it had been operating in violation of the Sherman Anti-trust law, was signed yesterday by Federal Judge Learned Hand and was consented to by nine concerns responsible for its creation about five years ago. Evidence against the exchange and its members had been gathered by Henry A. Guiler and Guy D. Goff, assistants to the Attorney General, but it had not been presented to a Grand Jury. The yielding of the firms under investigation stops all further proceedings against them.

The firms consenting to the decree manufacture seventy-five per cent. of all the galvanized ware, such as pails, garbage, street and stable cans, sold in the United States. They are: Dover Stamping and Manufacturing Company, Cambridge, Mass.; Republic Metalware Company, Buffalo; New England Enameling Company, Middletown, Conn.; Central Stamping Company, N. Y.; Geuder, Paeschke & Frey Co., Milwaukee; Rochester Stamping Company, Rochester, N. Y.; Northwestern Metalware Company, Minneapolis; F. H. Lawson Company, Cincinnati; Wheeling Corrugating Company, Wheeling, W. Va. All are incorporated. The National Enameling & Stamping Company, which resigned from the exchange a year and a half ago, did not consent to the entering of the decree.

All the consenting concerns are ordered by the decree "to cease and forever discontinue" carrying into effect and executing the so-called reporting plan of the exchange for the fixing of specified prices for their wares and from so organizing that any similar violation of law could be accomplished.

Laclede Gas Company Shows Loss.

The Laclede Gas Light Company, for the year ended Dec. 31, 1921, reported a deficit, after charges, taxes and preferred dividends, amounting to $328,945. This compares with a surplus of $137,027, or $1.28 a share on the common stock in the preceding year. Gross earnings were $7,137,481 in 1921, as compared with $6,533,907 in 1920.

FOUNTAIN PENS PAY TAX IF GOLD TIPPED

FANS ABOVE $1 A LUXURY

Works of Art, Under New Law, Must Pay 5 Per Cent., Which is a Reduction From 10 Per Cent.

New regulations of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, giving the changes in so-called "luxury and nuisance" taxes made by the Revenue act of 1921, have been received by Frank K. Bowers, Collector of Internal Revenue for Manhattan. Regulation 47 covers the excise tax on sales by the manufacturers of various products—automobiles, cameras, candy, firearms, cigar and cigarette holders, liveries, hunting garments, carpets, rugs, trunks, &c. Regulation 48 covers the excise tax on works of art and jewelry.

"The principal changes in the taxes on works of art and jewelry are that the tax on works of art is reduced from 10 to 5 per cent. and that the tax on jewelry and similar articles, which remains at 5 per cent., no longer includes gold or silver, ornamented glasses or spectacles," says a statement by Mr. Bowers. "The tax on works of art attaches on all sales except the original sale by the artist, a sale to an educational institution or public art museum and sales by dealers for resale.

"While the tax on musical instruments has been repealed, certain instruments, such as cornets, clarinets, &c., if made of or ornamented with silver or other precious metal, are taxable. Fountain pens equipped with gold pen points are also taxable. Monthly returns and payments of the tax on works of art and jewelry are required of the vendor.

"Section 904 of the Revenue act of 1921, which in the Revenue act of 1918 included the tax on certain articles of wearing apparel, provides only for a tax of 5 per cent. of the amount paid for the following articles in excess of the following prices: Carpets, $4.50 a square yard; rugs, $6 a square yard; trunks, $25 each; valises, traveling bags, suit cases, hat boxes used by travelers, and fitted toilet cases, $25 each; purses, pocketbooks, shopping and hand bags, $5 each; portable lighting fixtures, lamps of all kinds and lamp shades, $10 each, and fans, $1 each. This tax is not payable by the purchaser, but by the manufacturer, producer or importer, who are required to make monthly returns and payments."

DECRIES VOIDING WAR DEBTS

F. H. Sisson Says Some Nations Consider America a Christmas Tree.

Francis H. Sisson, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, one of the speakers at a dinner last night in the Hotel Biltmore in honor of Yuk-Tong Li, Chairman of the Board of the Bank of Canton, Limited, said that personally he had little sympathy with the spirit that prompted some nations in seeking our cancellation of foreign debts. He said some nations regarded this country as a "merry Christmas tree" from which to "shake dough."

Mr. Sisson paid tribute to the Chinese business principles, and predicted a steadily growing trade between this country and China. Mr. Li, who spoke in Chinese, said that China was eager for closer ties with America.

Nueces County, Texas, with an area of 534,780 acres is located in the southern part of the State, about two hundred miles southwest of Houston, and one hundred miles southeast of San Antonio. The population of the County is 22,807 (1920 census). Cotton is the principal crop, and in 1921 Nueces County, with a production of 64,000 bales, ranked third in the entire State, while for the last two years it has led the State in the production of cotton per acre. In addition, the various feed crops are raised and because of the equable climate and all year round growing season, truck gardening for the northern markets is an important industry.

Ample transportation facilities are furnished by the Gulf Coast lines, the San Antonio, Uvalde & Gulf, the San Antonio and Aransas Pass and the Texas and Mexico Railroads, there being approximately one hundred miles of railroad in the County.

Corpus Christi, the County Seat, is a thoroughly modern and progressive city, with a population of 10,522, an increase of 25% over that of 1910. Ample banking facilities are furnished by seven banks, three in Corpus Christi, two in Robstown and two in Bishop, with combined resources of approximately $6,000,000.

These Bonds are direct obligations of Nueces County, Texas, and are payable from unlimited ad valorem tax levied against all taxable property in the County. They were authorized by the voters of the County to provide funds for the construction, under State and Federal supervision, of a system of hard roads throughout the County.

CHICAGO WHEAT PIT IN A WILD WHIRL

BIG SALES TO EAGER BUYERS

Farmers Rushing Their Produce Forward to Profit by the Boom While It Lasts.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Excited trading and a big jump in prices kept the wheat pit of the Chicago Board of Trade in a whirl today. The scene at the opening especially was one of the wildest witnessed for some time, and, although this disturbance was later somewhat subdued, the market was again seething at the close.

July deliveries of wheat, corn, oats and rye, as well as all deliveries of provisions, sold at new high figures for the season, as the result of a stampede of shorts due to the developments in foreign and Canadian markets Monday, when Chicago was closed. The May deliveries of grain sold at a new high on the present upturn, with May corn, at 80¾ cents, equaling the old top made last September, while May wheat, at $1.38¾, was 6½ cents above Saturday's finish and within 3¼ cents of the best price so far this season.

Execution of stop-loss orders and general buying were responsible for the opening bulge, when the highest prices of the day were made, but the upturn brought out immense profit-taking, especially in wheat, and at one time the latter grain was 2¾@3 cents under the early high.

Houses that usually act for Livermore and other New York traders sold millions of bushels of May wheat at $1.38 and over; but the trade was broad and the offerings were finally absorbed, with the close at $1.38¾. Armour being credited with being the largest buyer. The May-July spread at the last was 16¾ cents, against 15 cents at the close Saturday and 13 cents at one time last week. Liverpool was up 4¾@6¾c for the two days with May quoted at equal to $1.50¾ per bushel at the last, or 8¾ cents higher than on Saturday, part of the advance being due to a difference in exchange.

Meanwhile the movement to the markets continued liberal, as farmers are not certain regarding economic conditions and are gradually getting rid of their cash grain on the sharp bulges.

Narrow Margin in World Market.

From a theoretical statistical standpoint there is no more wheat in the world than is actually required. The reduction in the Argentine crop estimate to 155,000,000 bushels, or 15,000,000 bushels less than was harvested last year, or about 55,000,000 bushels less than was figured on some time ago, has changed the statistical showing to an extent that whereas a short while ago Broomhall, the leading European authority, figured that there was a world's surplus of 48,000,000 bushels over and above requirements, the same basis of figuring would not suggest that the importing countries of the world now need more wheat than is available.

This situation is mainly responsible for the advance on May wheat from the recent low point, $1.03½, made Nov. 4, and for the gain in July of 21¾ cents.

For many months statistics have indicated that there is a very close adjustment of supply to demand the world over, due to the elimination of India and Russia as exporters, and short crops placed both countries in the importing column, with probable requirements of 80,000,000 bushels or more. Non-European countries are estimated to need 100,000,000 bushels for the crop year, their excessive taking cutting down the supply available for Europe. The Australian crop was short, due to excessive heat at the critical period of growth, and the exportable surplus is generally estimated at 80,000,000 bushels, of which over 60 per cent. was said to have been sold thirty days ago.

The raising of the United States crop in the final estimate to 795,000,000 bushels, or 54,000,000 bushels in excess of preliminary returns, was offset by a reduction of around 30,000,000 bushels in the final Canadian figures. Argentina was the last hope of European importers, and for a long while stories were circulated to the effect that there would be a rush to sell at almost any price. Foreigners allowed their stock of imported wheat to run dangerously low, and there were heavy inroads on the domestic supplies. The failure of Argentina to sell freely forced buyers to take hold on a broad scale and started values upward by leaps and bounds.

A worldwide short interest in futures was disclosed not only in American but also in all other markets. Based on a conservative estimate it is figured that on Feb. 13 there were about 265,000,000 bushels of wheat available in the United States, Argentine, Australia and Canada for export, with possibly a little to be secured from the Danube. The world's import needs are estimated at somewhat in excess of this figure.

American Crop Prospects.

Adding to the seriousness of the situation, which promises to force the world to enter the new crop season with somewhat less than a normal carry-over, is the unfavorable outlook for the new winter wheat crop in the American Southwest. It is figured that of the 44,262,000 acres seeded last Fall, between 15,000,000 and 20,000,000 acres are in need of more or less moisture, and is in a position to be heavily damaged.

The most conservative people in the trade are not inclined to talk actual damage to the new wheat as yet, as there has been no growing weather, but as a yield somewhat smaller than normal is looked for, while, if rain does not come shortly, there will be a near calamity in Central and Western Kansas and in Western Oklahoma. The dry area extends from Texas north into Canada, and involves parts of Western Nebraska and the Dakotas. After allowing for normal carry-over, the United States has little or no old-crop wheat left for export, except possibly a little durum and some Pacific Coast grain.

As compared with pre-war figures, farmers in the Southwest, the only place there is any great amount of wheat left on hand, are now securing possibly 100 to 125 per cent. of the pre-war average price at this season of the year, but cash reports indicate that the farm holdings are below normal, and the general expectation is that after March 1 receipts at terminals will be small, almost regardless of price.

Cash grain has been gradually declining as compared with the May, due to the slowness of the domestic flour trade. Apparently buyers of flour are content to run on small stocks. Should the demand improve, it would probably stampede mills into buying cash wheat and might result in very high prices, as there is little choice grain in the 46,000,000 bushels in the visible supply.

Corn Advance Helps Trade Outlook.

The advance in grains, while resulting in little benefit to farmers as far as wheat and oats are concerned, has brought about a much better feeling in Western business circles, and the grain trade as a whole now looks for corn and oats to commence to advance rapidly, providing there are no untoward developments. On Sept. 9 May corn sold at 69¾ cents, and by Nov. 4 it had dropped to 55¼ cents, while on the high prices today it equaled the 80¾ cents paid last September. This 30 per cent. advance in the price of corn, from a general business standpoint, is of much more importance than the 50 cents upturn in wheat. May corn, which was 70¼ cents on Nov. 4, touched $1.07 today, showing an advance of around 14 per cent. from the low. Deliveries of provisions sold at a new high for the season today, with lard on May and July 25@30 per hundred pounds higher than the low prices of the season, which was made Nov. 15. Foreign demand has been a factor. Hogs are up about $3 per hundred pounds from the low.

The strength in wheat, the sentimental effect of the War Finance Corporation's activities and the buying of corn for Russian relief are the big factors in bringing about the advance in corn. The quantity taken for Russia in all forms was extremely small, less than 20,000,000 bushels, but it came at a time when the market needed an advance. According to official figures, there were 211,000,000 bushels of all grain in the United States and Canadian visible supply Saturday night, probably the largest in history. The bulk of this grain is hedged by sales of futures, but speculative interest has broaded to an extent that permitted the recent advance, despite the crushing weight of supplies which have all been financed.

Primary receipts of wheat today were 2,475,000 bushels, being for three days, against 809,000 for one day last week and 775,000 last year. Shipments were 665,000 bushels; week ago, 479,000; last year, 625,000. Corn receipts were 3,939,000 bushels; week ago, 2,580,000; last year, 1,233,000, and shipments, 1,801,000 bushels; week ago, 1,574,000; last year, 971,000.

Grains Show Noteworthy Strength and Go to Year's Best Levels —Lard Firm.

Noteworthy strength was evident again in the grains in yesterday's dealings in the local markets. A heavy export demand which firmed prices in the futures was communicated to the market for the spot staple with the result that new high levels for wheat, oats and flour, and a price equal to the year's best in corn, were touched. The advances in wheat amounted to 4 cents the bushel, in flour, Minneapolis patents, of 50 cents the barrel, and in corn and oats fractional gains. Lard, Middle West, also moved higher and at 12.50 cents is record top for the year. Spot cotton was helped by Government consumption report and moved up 55 cents the 100 pounds. On the other hand, copper was weak and at 13 cents record low for year, with eggs, firsts, 2 cents the dozen lower. Other articles were steady and unchanged.

TO KEEP IMMIGRATION BAN.

House Committee Favors Extending It for Another Year.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—A bill extending the life of the 3 per cent. restrictive immigration law until June 30, 1923, was ordered reported today by the House Immigration Committee.

Enacted as a temporary measure, the law will expire next June 30 unless an extension is authorized. It restricts the annual entry of aliens into the United States to approximately 350,000 persons.

The committee had before it proposals to suspend immigration entirely for the next five years, and other bills to modify the present law until a permanent policy could be put into effect, but members of the committee are said to have believed it would be impossible to reach an agreement on a permanent program in the next few months, and that it would be best to recommend that the 3 per cent. law be extended without modification.

The syndicate announced that the issues have been sold and the books closed.

LEGISLATURE GETS LOCKWOOD DEMAND

MACHOLD STILL ON FENCE

Report Shows Saving of $280,000,000 to Rentpayers and $16,000,000 to State and Cities.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—Determined to make an aggressive fight, if necessary, to keep his Joint Legislative Committee on Housing alive as a deterrent to would-be rent profiteers, Senator Lockwood presented a concurrent resolution to the Senate at the close of today's session which, if adopted, will extend the committee's life until March 1, 1923. The resolution was referred to the Finance Committee, but was not taken up by that body though it met soon afterward in executive session.

The resolution provides for additional appropriations aggregating $129,000. Of this amount $79,000 is for the discharge of financial obligations already incurred by the committee and $50,000 for financing new investigations.

There was not a word of comment in the Senate as the resolution unexpectedly was read from the desk. It is well known, however, that both in the Senate and Assembly pressure is being brought to bear by powerful interests who would prefer to see an end put immediately and for good to the housing inquiry.

Senator Hewitt, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said this afternoon that the Lockwood resolution could not be considered by that body until its meeting next week. Senator Lockwood will remain quiescent in the meantime, but should the committee fail to report the resolution after a "reasonable time," the Senator said he would take steps to meet that situation.

"A week or so should be enough time for deliberation by the committee on a resolution of this kind," said Senator Lockwood. "Should there be any further delay, I am prepared to make a fight to have the resolution taken from the committee and brought before the Senate, where we can have it out in the open."

He added that when the time for action arrived the Legislature would have before it the intermediary report of his committee, on which Samuel Untermyer has been at work during his sojourn at Palm Beach. The first section of the report has already reached Senator Lockwood, and four more sections, which will complete it, the Senator was informed today, are on the way and probably will reach him before the end of the week. It will probably be presented to the Senate and Assembly some day next week.

"This report," the Senator said, "will show in more detail than has been shown to date, accomplishments by the committee fully to justify its existence and the money that has been spent, to keep it going. The report will also show in some detail the reasons that impel us to ask that the life of the committee be extended. We believe that our arguments made in that connection are unanswerable."

The showing made by the Lockwood committee in the report relating to its finances, filed in both houses last night, has made a distinctly favorable impression in the Senate. In this report the committee showed that at a cost of approximately $150,000 to the State it had brought more than $500,000 in fines into the public treasury, besides being instrumental in saving $280,000,000 to rent payers and over $16,000,000 to the State and municipalities on contracts for public works.

It is believed that Senator Lusk is not averse now to giving to the committee a new lease of life and granting to it the additional appropriation it has asked for.

Speaker Machold was asked tonight whether his views with regard to the committee had undergone any change.

"Whether the time of the Lockwood committee is to be extended and whether we are to give that body more money to spend is a question I would not dare to answer, one way or the other, right now," he replied. "In a general way I believe all existing legislative committees should be required to make their final reports and go out of existence with the present session. But the question is to be taken up at a conference which will be held within the next few days. It will be determined then, and not before, whether there is merit in the demand that the life of the Lockwood committee be extended."

FAMINE RELIEF FUNDS THAT DO NOT RELIEVE

Daugherty Says Some Organizations Appear to Have Other Than Charitable Motives.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Federal investigation of certain organizations collecting funds ostensibly for Russian famine relief will be completed within a few days, it was indicated tonight by Attorney General Daugherty.

There appear, he said, to be a great many organizations pretending to collect funds for Russian famine relief that have other motives than charitable ones.

Secretary Hoover submitted to President Harding last week a survey of the Russian relief situation, in which he declared, on the basis of Justice Department reports, that there were more than 200 of these relief committees in operation which were "frankly communistic."

MILLER FIRM ON EMPLOYES.

Again States New York Association Figures Are Propaganda.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—Replying to a letter written by George W. Wickersham, Vice President of the New York State Association, with regard to the controversy between the association and the Governor over the number of State employes, the Governor places the blame on the secretary of the association, Robert Moses.

"The partisan character of his work," the Governor wrote, "was disclosed by the article published by the association upon the adjournment of the legislature which the association itself felt called upon to disavow. That has been better concealed since, but the misleading nature of the propaganda has not changed."

The Governor again declared that the legislature of last year abolished more than 2,300 positions. He said that this does not mean that there were that number of dismissals from the State service, because many of the positions were vacant.

"It does mean," the Governor wrote, "that the abolition of the position itself prevented its being filled. The fact is that in place of being an increase of 1,000 employes, there has been a decrease in the State Department proper of practically that amount, and the records of the Civil Service Commission will show an actual decrease of positions in State departments proper of 628 without taking any account whatever of the so-called laborers not included by the Civil Service Commission in its table of positions."

WORLD COURT OPENS TODAY

Reception to Judges to Be Given by Queen Wilhelmina Tonight.

THE HAGUE, Feb. 14.—The International Court of Justice, which will hold its first public session here tomorrow, was busy this forenoon organizing the labor chamber created under the terms of the Treaty of Versailles, and its secretarial staff, which, according to the official communications, will be "as small as is compatible with the efficient working of the court."

The League of Nations will give temporary assistance to the chamber when the work is heavy.

The social entertainment of the Judges of the court up to the present time has been confined to meeting a few personal friends. They will begin in earnest when Queen Wilhelmina gives a reception at the Royal Palace in their honor tomorrow night.

Jonkheer Van Karnebeek, the Dutch Foreign Minister, entertained the Judges at a reception this evening. Friday night there will be a gala performance for them at the Royal Theatre. Queen Wilhelmina, Prince Consort Henry, and Dowager Queen Emma will attend the performance.

42D ST. ELEVATED REMOVAL DEMANDED

Property Owners at Albany Hearing Assert $325,000 Raised by Railroad Is Missing.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 14.—The days of the Tweed ring and the boodle Board of Aldermen were recalled at the Capitol today when spokesman for property owners on Forty-second Street appeared to make demands for legislation to effect the removal of the Manhattan Elevated Railway spur connecting the Third Avenue line with the Grand Central Station.

A law which was enacted with that end in view during the 1917 session, representatives of the property owners asserted, has remained ineffective because of the impossibility of tracing $325,000 out of a total of $800,000 raised by railroad promoters to indemnify owners of abutting property when the elevated structure was set up in Forty-second Street in 1870. The fund, it was stated, was intrusted to the late Jay Gould to spend for this purpose.

When the proposal to discontinue the Third Avenue-Grand Central link was first broached the company demanded that the city pay to it $1,230,000 in return for what it had spent as indemnity. The city, it was stated, started out to levy assessments against the properties involved in amounts identical with those received in indemnity by the owners forty years ago. Search in the County Clerk's office, according to the story told here, however, showed that only $475,000 actually had been paid to owners of adjoining property. Where the rest of the money went remains an enigma.

In making its new fight, the Forty-second Street Association has caused to be introduced a bill which would permit the Board of Estimate to levy the cost of removing the structure, including the payment of any claim advanced by the railway company, against the entire city instead of against property owners within the area originally defined as specially benefited by the removal of the elevated structure. The members of the Forty-second Street Association vigorously oppose the proposal to honor the claim of the railway company. The company, however, insists on getting its original $800,000 back.

Assemblyman John J. O'Conner, representing Tammany Leader Murphy's district, is sponsor for the new bill, which has been approved by the Hylan Administration as part of a plan, vigorously pushed through propaganda, to beautify Pershing Square. Property in the vicinity, including the Commodore and other hotels of the Bowman group, will be the chief beneficiaries, it is admitted, even though property owners all through the city would have to help bear the expense in the event that the Board of Estimate should determine to include the cost in the tax rate.

DEFENDS FULL CREW LAW.

Trainmen's Lodge Says Measure Saves Many Lives.

Metropolitan Lodge, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, has adopted resolutions opposing Senate Bill 472 in the New York State Legislature amending the "full crew law."

The amendment, the resolutions say, "would, if accomplished, destroy a law that has been the means of saving thousands of lives and limbs not only of the traveling public, who are compelled to travel daily upon the trains, but of the employes who are engaged in the operation of the trains." The "full crew law," say the trainmen, has resulted in a material reduction of the liability of the railroads in legal actions.

122 Years of Economic Development & the Bank of the Manhattan Company

Shipbuilding

As foreign trade doubled and trebled, the shipbuilding industry began to recover the prestige it had enjoyed prior to the War of 1812. The fifteen years prior to the Civil War saw the industry at its height. Tonnage increased steadily. In spite of the high wages, ships, chiefly of the clipper type, could be built here more cheaply than in Great Britain and British shipyards were regularly undersold. With the advent of steam, however, the possibilities of which American shipbuilders had steadily ignored, the supremacy passed into British hands.

* * *

Founded in 1799, by men, many of whom were shipowners and foreign traders, the Bank of the Manhattan Company contributed not a little to American supremacy on the high seas. Today, with its seafaring tradition, the Bank stands in a peculiarly unique position to advise with customers on the possibilities and actualities of foreign commerce.

FIGURES $250,000,000 SAVED BY NAVY CUT

Coontz Urges $350,000,000 Annual Grant—Would Have Been $600,000,000 but for Conference.

BATTLE FLEET PARAMOUNT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The Navy would have cost the United States about $800,000,000 annually if the Limitation of Arms Conference had not been held. Admiral Robert E. Coontz, Chief of Operations, told the House Naval Affairs Committee today during a hearing on the Naval Appropriation bill. At the same time, Admiral Coontz agreed with Secretary Denby in saying that the navy should not be reduced below the number of ships allowed by the conference.

"The result of the conference will be to place upon each signatory power the onus of keeping its tonnage allowance up to razor edge efficiency," said the Admiral. "The measure of the ratio of 5-5-3 will be the efficiency and sufficiency of the personnel. No other mention has taken any actual steps toward reducing its personnel by an amount proportionate to that recommended by our Secretary."

Like Mr. Denby, Admiral Coontz insisted that the navy appropriation should not be less than $350,000,000 for the fiscal year. He advised against any reduction in enlisted men below 90,000, in addition to 6,000 apprentices.

Reduction to this total would involve taking 6,400 men off 100 destroyers, which would be laid up. The destroyers would deteriorate if laid up, he told the committee, even with the best care. Only sixty-five destroyers were now in operating commission, he said. More than 200 destroyers were lying in various ports with no more than enough men aboard to keep the machinery in condition.

Admiral Coontz recommended graduation of the present first class at the Naval Academy, but urged that Congressional appointments be reduced.

On the subject of war vessels the Admiral said:

"In my judgment, at the present time, it is our paramount duty to keep up the combatant fleet. In it lies the safety of the United States, and all parts of the navy not connected with the fleet and its personnel are in the line of auxiliaries. It is established that sacrifices must be made and economies effected. Should we reduce below the minimum stated by the Secretary of the Navy yesterday, it will be a reduction by example and not by agreement."

The Admiral thought the naval revolving fund might be cut to $100,000,000, selling properties and reducing or closing shore plants of all kinds.

"In my judgment," he went on, "the fleet as at present constituted should be kept up to proper efficiency, and all expenditures of whatever character should be shaped to that end. Those not of military character should be lopped off first, for in the final summing up the fleet is the navy. All of our battleships should have at least a 95 per cent. complement."

URGES ROYAL ECONOMY.

Labor M. P. Criticises Court Grants and Wales Tour Expenditures.

LONDON, Feb. 14.—Criticism of the allowances made to the Royal Family and the expenditures on the Indian and Canadian tours of the Prince of Wales were made by John Robertson, Labor member of the House of Commons for Bothwell, yesterday in the course of the debate on the economy recommendations of the Geddes committee. Mr. Robertson said he was sure the Royal Family would be willing to economize "when so many women and children are starving."

Sir Donald MacLean, Liberal, termed the Admiralty circular criticising the Geddes report "unprecedented and unconstitutional." He complained of the pressing burden of taxation and suggested the best remedy was a change of Government.

Austen Chamberlain, replying for the Government, said that half the opposition speeches had been directed to defeating rather than carrying out the Geddes recommendations.

Scovill Manufacturing Co. Deficit.

The Scovill Manufacturing Company reports for 1921 a deficit of $937,783 after taxes and other charges, against a surplus of $968,907 the year before. The general balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1921, shows a profit and loss surplus of $16,762,396, against $18,306,267 at the close of 1920. Cash on hand amounted to $1,717,133, against $1,643,626, and Government and other bonds were valued at $7,639,051, against $9,070,367 in the previous report.

WALLACE BACKS UP HENRY FORD'S OFFER

CLASH OVER FERTILIZERS

Ford's Chief Engineer Insists They Will Be Made in "Completed Forms" for Farmers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—Henry C. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, "looks with favor" upon Henry Ford's offer for purchase and lease of the Government's nitrate and waterpower projects at Muscle Shoals, Ala., "if its terms are sufficiently definite and binding to make sure the plant will be operated continuously for the manufacture of fertilizer."

Dr. Richard C. Tolman, Director of the Fixed Nitrogen Research Laboratory of the department, announced the Secretary's position with regard to the Ford offer in an authorized statement which he read today before the House Military Committee. The Secretary's views, as expressed by the witness, were that, if the terms were as he had outlined, the proposal would "result in making available a considerably increased supply of fertilizer in time of peace and give us assurance of adequate supplies of explosives in case of need."

The statement was read by Dr. Tolman after the committee had completed an examination lasting more than five hours of W. B. Mayo, chief engineer and personal representative of Henry Ford. Mr. Mayo's testimony included repeated statements that Mr. Ford intended to manufacture fertilizers in their completed forms at the maximum production capacity of the Muscle Shoals plants, and would make every effort to manufacture them at a minimum cost to the farmers, using every known formula and working his chemists meanwhile to discover improved methods.

Mr. Mayo took issue several times with committee members who called attention to the section of the offer regarding fertilizer manufacture, saying there was no provision in the offer to compel the manufacture of fertilizer, but only of some necessary ingredients. In each instance the witness declared it was Mr. Ford's intention to execute the contract, if Congress accepted it, in good faith, and that included the production of fertilizers.

Would Extend Transportation.

Transportation facilities for remote sections of Alabama and Tennessee to convey their products to the Ohio, Mississippi and Gulf regions would be afforded under the Ford plan, Mr. Mayo said. Naval limits of the Tennessee River would be increased ninety miles by the construction of two dams at Muscle Shoals.

Representative Wright of Georgia asked for a statement of Mr. Ford's objections to reducing the lease clause from 100 to fifty years.

"On account of the size of the project," Mr. Mayo said, "and the immense amount of capital to be used in its development, Mr. Ford felt that fifty years would be only a beginning. Probably fifteen or twenty years would be required to develop the full power possibilities and add to it by constructing additional dams in the upper Tennessee River."

In response to a question as to what Mr. Ford's intentions were with reference to supplying the agricultural needs of the country, Mr. Mayo said:

"It has been his dream to make fertilizers so low that everybody can use all he wants. He also hopes to make raw materials at a lower price for tractors and trucks and thus reduce their costs."

Representative Quin of Mississippi attacked committee members, who, he said, had attempted to read things into Mr. Ford's contract "that plainly wasn't there."

"They have been just gutter fishing around," he exclaimed. "Isn't it a fact that Mr. Ford intends to make fertilizer so easy that a plain free nigger could mix it in the ground?"

Mr. Mayo smiled assent.

"We have great respect for Mr. Ford in our country," Mr. Quin continued: "We call him 'Uncle Henry,' and we believe he will give us cheap fertilizer, just like he has given us automobiles to ride around."

"Take It or Leave It," Says Mayo.

At one point Mr. Mayo said the Detroit manufacturer had been invited by the Government to make the offer and Congress could "take it or leave it at its face value." This announcement followed a heated exchange between the witness and Representative Miller of Washington regarding the financial obligations the Government would assume under the agreement. The Washington member insisted that the financial burden on the country would exceed by several millions that assumed by Mr. Ford. The colloquy ended without an agreement between the two.

Chairman Kahn announced that J. W. Worthington, another of Mr. Ford's advisers in the Muscle Shoals transaction, would be asked to testify tomorrow. Miltown Whitney, soil physicist and Chief of the Bureau of Soils of the Agriculture Department, also was requested to appear tomorrow.

As the hearings progressed Mr. Kahn said it appeared that the committee would not be able to conclude its investigations this week and probably the meetings would be continued over another week.

Another event scheduled for tomorrow was the hearing to be held at the War Department by Secretary Weeks on the offer of Frederick C. Engstrum of Wilmington, N. C., for Muscle Shoals. It was considered probable that Secretary Weeks would submit that proposal to Congress before the Senate and House Committees had disposed of the Ford offer.

The Senate Agriculture Committee took its first action today on the Ford proposal. It agreed to begin hearings Thursday, with Major Gen. Beach, Chief of Army Engineers, and members of a delegation from Tennessee, including Governor Taylor, who are waiting to testify before the House Committee.

BUYING OF COTTON GAINS MOMENTUM

Favorable Foreign News and Trade Demands Contribute to Higher Prices.

The buying movement in cotton that started the middle of last week gained momentum yesterday. A larger quantity of contracts was taken from the market than since the rise in December. Foreign advices proved distinctly more encouraging, while domestic trade interests called cotton on an extensive scale. In view of the turn of events, operators resisted the advance. Sentiment that shifted a few days ago grew in favor of the buying side. Another sharp advance in wheat helped cotton. Interests favoring hedges in March bought steadily, while new crop positions were increasingly active. Final prices showed a gain of 48 to 53 points.

With the exception of strike news from England, developments seemed favorable to cotton at the opening. During the holiday Liverpool advanced sharply, more than meeting all gains made here the latter part of the week. Rising prices abroad were accompanied by an increase in spot sales to 10,000 bales, with another favorable export showing for January.

Exports of yarns aggregated 15,000,000 pounds, against 5,000,000 last year, and cloths 339,000,000 yards, against 245,000,000 a year ago. Census figures on domestic consumption showed 526,000 bales used, against only 336,000 last year. But equally important as a factor in influencing sentiment was the rise of 5 cents a bushel in wheat. Under the circumstances, it was not surprising that prices opened up 15 to 20 points on large volume of business. Covering of March continued a feature, taking many thousand bales from the ring. For a few moments July again came under pressure, causing a setback of 10 points. Odd prominent professional operator sold on the floor in some months appeared and distributed selling orders in May. These contracts were taken eagerly and almost before selling ceased an active advance of a quarter of a cent all under way. Bidding for March and May was brisk, running March up 17.65 and May 85 points over Saturday.

Heavy arbitrage operations were put through during the morning. When Liverpool quotations declined fairly last week to low levels of the season, less than 200 points over New York, spot interests bought heavily abroad and sold here. With an upturn of nearly 70 American points, Liverpool closing at the top, a reversal of the arbitrage became possible. Brokers bought May and sold steadily against sales in Liverpool. This buying power in these positions, together with an active demand for March as hedges were covered and put forward, absorbed all contracts at advancing levels.

Knowledge that an extensive March interest will have to be transferred, much of it before notice day, Feb. 22, kept the average trader on the buying side. Western interests continued buyers of cotton as a result of rising grain prices. A firmer spot basis prevailed at Southern points, little opposition developed. Every slight reaction attracted renewed demand, so that at midday quotations showed an advance of about 30 points.

Persistent trade calling created sufficient demand for contracts to defy advance prices to new high levels during the afternoon. Many spinners purchased cotton several months ago based on March and houses with trade connections received orders to take cotton. This stimulated other positions, attracting added speculative demand and pushing all months higher than for weeks. New crops reflected increased buying from several directions. Selling orders in both May and July were encountered on the way, but contracts were absorbed on each upturn.

Urgent demand for March developed the last half hour, coming from both domestic and foreign sources. This not only put March 30 points over May, but created such aggressive buying in May that May sold 70 points over July. All May contracts for sale at 17¼ cents were taken in the last few minutes and May sold at 17.83 during the final rush. All positions closed at the top.

HELP WANTED—Male

Salesmen.

SALESMEN.

$50 to $100 a Week.

Many of our men earn more.

Every day in the week men are stepping upward in the climb for prosperity and happiness—men advancing from one position to another, changing from one kind of work to another more important, better paid, kind of work.

This institution offers you the opportunity to become a salesman. It has been successful in training and developing a great many salesmen.

Your opinions and earnings are limited only by your ability.

Many men in our sales force who had previously never sold anything but spare earning commissions of $50 or $100 a week regularly selling the securities of successful, expanding corporations.

The man who works hard, with his head in his job, trying constantly to increase his ability and value, will always succeed.

You owe it to yourself to come in and see why the Business Builders mean so much to so many.

Introductory class will be started PROMPTLY at 9:30 A. M. To attend this class you should register 15 or 30 minutes prior to that hour, as the class commences exactly ON TIME.

Our reception room is on the 12th floor. Ask for Mr. Wells.

Our evening training courses in salesmanship are practical and thoroughgoing; there are no charges on the contrary, you earn while you learn.

Many men are adding to their incomes commissions ranging from $5 a week upward selling securities of established, expanding corporations.

That our training develops the experienced man successfully has been proved by the records.

SCIENTIST DEFENDS PSYCHICAL RESEARCH

Copyright, 1922, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 14.—In a revolutionary address delivered before the Academy of Science, Professor Charles Richet, the celebrated physiologist, warned his fellow academicians that science no longer could afford to ignore occult phenomena.

The occasion of Professor Richet's startling attack on the attitude of scientists toward the occult was the announcement of the publication of a treatise on metaphysics to which he has devoted many years of effort.

"I believe in all faith that science no longer can permit to pass in silence or idle sarcasm the innumerable facts accumulated by such masters as Sir William Crooks, Sir Oliver Lodge and other savants of England, America and France," the famous scientist declared. "Certainly there is to be found in these facts the unusual and unexpected, but nothing illogical or contradictory. Savants cannot disregard them a priori. I know that I will be criticized. I ask only that I be heard before being judged."

Professor Richet was heartily applauded at the conclusion of his address.

Diamond Hunter Is Warned and Guarded by the Police on the Trail of Robber Band.

HAS BIG BRILLIANT, HE SAYS

Found in British Guiana, Where, He Asserts, He Is Going to Seek More.

Until the steamship Matura sails for British Guiana tomorrow William J. La Varre, formerly of the Smithsonian Institution, will be under a police guard. Mr. La Varre came to New York about a month ago, bringing with him what he said was the largest diamond ever discovered in South America and several thousand dollars worth of small diamonds. Shortly after he landed the police discovered that he was being trailed by a band intent upon robbery. Since that time he has been guarded.

Mr. La Varre said yesterday that the first he suspected that he was being followed was a notice from the police. He had already placed the diamonds in safe keeping. Just before he left this city on a short business visit to Boston Mr. La Varre was requested by the police to parade Fifth Avenue in the hope that they could "pick up" the men who were following. He said that before taking his walk police headquarters sent him a permit to carry a weapon. For more than an hour Mr. La Varre sauntered up and down Fifth Avenue while his police escort accompanied him, walking about half a block behind. Whether they picked up any suspicious characters he was not informed.

In 1912 Mr. La Varre went to British Guiana as a member of an exploration party sent out by the Smithsonian Institution. It was known, he said, that there were diamonds there, but those found were too small to be of commercial value. In one place, he said, he found natives using small diamonds set in a strip of wood as a potato grater. From them he learned where the stones could be found. He has already explored a greater part of the country and had gathered many valuable diamonds, he said.

His trip this time, he said yesterday, was to explore further in hope of finding the source of the diamonds. He said that they had their origin in some volcano not yet discovered, and that they had been washed down into the lowlands. He is working under British concessions.

"About 800 men have already gone into the bush to look for diamonds, and there is no doubt that the diamond industry of British and Dutch Guiana will become of great importance," he said. "The diamonds have been found in an area of about 500 miles square through which flows the Mazaruni River, a tortuous stream of 350 miles flowing along the boundary between British and Dutch Guiana. Last year 150,000 carats in diamonds were taken out. These average $18 a carat."

COMIC VALENTINES BACK AFTER 5 YEARS

Encyclopedists Right, the Trade Shows, in Saying That the Dainty Love Token Has Had Its Day.

When the learned editors of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, in issuing the eleventh edition, came to write a piece about St. Valentine and his Day, which, if you are young enough, you know was yesterday, they remarked in a footnote:

"Until nearly the close of the nineteenth century the custom of sending 'valentines,' i. e., anonymous love-tokens, written or otherwise, on St. Valentine's Day was fairly general. They gradually lost their original significance, and the custom, where it survives, has become completely vulgarized."

Yesterday's sales of valentines, said dealers, proved the encyclopedia compilers to be right. For the last five years the dainty, love-breathing valentine has been the big seller, with the allegedly comic kind not going at all. Yesterday, however, the situation was reversed. Joseph Koehler, for fifty years a printer of novelties at 150 Park Row, said:

"The sale of the comic valentine, the old 'insult,' has been remarkable. I had 2,000 gross of the comics on the shelves for the last five years and today the entire stock, close to 200,000, is gone. I don't know what it is, unless it was the war. Young folks buy these things; but during the war they were tied up. Maybe people weren't in the mood for comic valentines in the last four years. But I've seen the rise and fall of so many novelties in my time that I've given up trying to explain it. It just happens, that's all. One firm that used to turn out all those comics about the bricklayer, washwoman and typlst, went out of business several years ago—no sales. Since then they have not been turned out, and we've been holding our stocks on the shelves."

An official of the American News Company, which supplies valentines and novelties to retailers, reported a sale of more than 1,000 gross and the exhaustion of its stock. Many orders for coms had been received which the company was unable to fill.

WOULD CUT FREIGHT COSTS.

Hardware Head Says High Rates Hinder Business Revival.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—High freight rates form one of the greatest barriers to the return of better business conditions, Daniel Rinshart, President of the Pennsylvania and Atlantic Seaboard Hardware Association, told delegates to that organization's annual convention today. Hardware dealers from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia were in attendance.

"One of the greatest hold-ups on the highways of business today is the high rate of freight transportation," Mr. Rinshart said. "The summed-up freight charges on raw materials, on finished products to the jobber, and from jobber to retailer, push up the cost of merchandise, and the consumer alone pays the freight."

As a remedy, Mr. Rinshart suggested that the Government expedite payment to the railroads of amounts due them, so that they could reduce rates and go into the market for materials.

"Railroads in normal times consume about 25 per cent. of the capacity of our steel mills," he said. "The steel business is recognized as the barometer of trade. Thus we can understand, with the railroads out of the market, how all business is materially affected."

Improvement in the condition of the farmer also was necessary to improve general business conditions, he said, because the farmer was a good customer.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—Anastase Andrewitch Vonsiatsky-Vonsiatsky, who recently married a Chicago heiress, Mrs. Marion P. Stephens, has entered upon the normal life of a citizen at Ridley Park. This was shown today, when he filed an application to join the local volunteer fire company.

Vonsiatsky returned to work at the Baldwin Locomotive Works today. Last night he was called upon by Burgess W. L. Johnson, who extended greetings of the townspeople to him and his wife.

Why Marine Insurance is no business for Amateurs

All insurance is complicated business.

Marine Insurance is the most complicated of all.

It is the height of folly to put the placing of Marine Insurance in any hands but those of an experienced marine broker.

To illustrate:

A Copenhagen Merchant bought a quantity of shoe leather from a manufacturer in Chicago.

Through an inexperienced broker, he covered the shipment by insurance as follows:

—in transit from Chicago to New York in one company

—while in New York warehouse in another company

—from New York to Copenhagen in a third company.

When our Copenhagen friend received the shipment and checked up his invoices, he found a large quantity of leather missing. His representative approached each company in turn to settle his loss. Each one replied, with justice,

"Prove that the loss happened during the stage of transit covered by our policy."

As our friend had no means of proving when the loss occurred, he failed to collect from any one of the three insurance companies involved. His experience cost him $710.60.

Hereafter, following our recommendations, his shipments will be covered from start to finish by one contract, thus placing the responsibility definitely with one company.

Our relations with shippers are much like those of a good commercial lawyer with his clients. We are at your service. Make us the insurance department of your business—without a dollar's added cost.
